We think trying interesting ingredients is a great way to travel the world while staying right where you are. This season, we're excited to stamp your culinary passport with Korean staples like kimchi and gochujang. These savory, sour and spicy delicacies are served with almost every meal in Korea and now you can find them in our seasonal Sunny Seoul Hash. Kimchi, which is really any fermented vegetable but most often cabbage, is so popular in Korea that most households have a fridge designated for holding their family's unique recipe at a consistent and precise temperature. But this popular side dish isn't a new trend – some form of kimchi has been around since the 7th century. And gochujang, just like kimchi, has been an important facet of Korean cuisine for hundreds of years. This condiment is also fermented in the sun and relies on red chile peppers, called gochugaru, for its punch. We were inspired to balance these special flavors with our hometown favorites. It's nice to have a piece of home with you when you're traveling, isn't it?
