SUNRISE STATE OF MIND

We all know the sun rises in the east and sets in the west. That's easy enough. But which eastern state is lucky enough to see the very first rays of sunlight every day? We'll give you a minute to work through your guesses. Connecticut has their 146-acre Sunrise State Park ... but nope, they can't stake the claim. North Carolina has over 3,000 miles of sunny coastline ... but still isn't first. And Florida is the Sunshine State ... but again, that's not it! When we think of abundant sun, it's easy to picture warm beaches and tropical paradises, but actually, the northern state of Maine has "First Sunrise" bragging rights! Now, it's still a heated debate because the time of year does, in fact, change which part of the state sees the earliest sunshine. But, nevertheless, the earliest you'll find brilliant orange and vibrant red spread across a bright blue sky is somewhere in Maine! But if you'd rather sleep in, sit back and relax with a refreshing sunrise, we suggest sipping into our Tropical Sunrise seasonal juice. Sometimes it's better to rise and grin than rise and grind, right?
