IMPORTANT DISCLAIMER — READ BEFORE USING THIS DOCUMENT

- For educational purposes only.
  This document shows where a classic chart idea — old resistance becoming new support — appears on real price data today. It is NOT investment advice and NOT a recommendation to buy or sell any security.
- Prepared with AI assistance, with a human in the loop.
  Every level, candle, entry and stop-loss here was detected and laid out by software with AI assistance, and a person on our team reviews the book.
- A level is not a prediction.
  Old resistance can fail as support. The stop-loss on each card marks where the idea is wrong; size every position so that being wrong is affordable. The announcements under each chart are AI summaries of exchange filings — read the filing itself before relying on one.
- Verify everything yourself. Not SEBI-registered advice.
  Check the price, level and candle on your own broker's chart. Flash Finance is not a SEBI-registered adviser or research analyst; trading carries risk of loss.

How a Change of Polarity setup works

A ceiling that sellers defended, once broken, often becomes a floor that buyers defend.

The rules this book uses (daily candles)

1. Resistance — a swing high that was the top of its last 3 months, where price then fell at least 5% and stayed under it for 10+ sessions.
2. Breakout — the first close more than 1% above that level, followed by a run of at least 4% beyond it.
3. Retest — within 60 sessions price comes back to the level (low within 1.5% of it) and closes hold: a close more than 2% below the level cancels the setup.
4. Reversal candle — hammer, bullish engulfing, piercing or a strong close off the low, closing back at the level. Candles wider than 7% are skipped.
5. The textbook trade — buy above the reversal candle's HIGH; stop-loss at its LOW. The buy-stop is valid for 5 sessions.

Status on each card

BUY-STOP TRIGGERED the buy-stop above the reversal candle filled in the last 3 sessions and the LTP is still above the stop.

REVERSAL CANDLE — BUY ABOVE HIGH a reversal candle printed at the level in the last 5 sessions; the buy-stop above its high has not filled yet.

RETESTING SUPPORT price is on the old resistance now, no reversal candle yet — a level to watch, not a trade.
