

William Baynes Hick (1834-1897) was a mining engineer who worked for John Henry Swoyer and was noted for going back to England almost annually and riding a tricycle to work. His office was in the Hollenback Coal Exchange Building.

