

Gallaudet University FY 2017 Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA)

Executive Summary

- GPRA was enacted in 1993 for the purpose of systematically holding Federal agencies accountable for achieving program results. Gallaudet has submitted a GPRA report for over 10 years.
- Gallaudet submits its GPRA report every year in October and January to the U.S. Department of Education. Primary reviewers are Brianne Burger, Director/Liaison, Office of Special Institutions; and Vanessa Tesoriero, Senior Budget Analyst, Office of the Under Secretary.
- The report includes performance indicators and targets (goals) that have been negotiated with the Department of Education. They include enrollment, persistence rates, graduation rates, post-graduation outcomes for students, literacy skills, support services, research activity, fundraising and a number of indicators specifically related to the Clerc Center's national mission.
- Each year Gallaudet reports our performance on each indicator and comment on this data in relation to the target set for that particular fiscal year, e.g., if we did not meet the target, what was the possible reason(s), and what strategies Gallaudet will put into place to improve our performance.
- The Department of Education uses the indicator performance data to report how Gallaudet did in relation to its targets. This information is posted on the Department's public web site. Internal indicator data are not posted on the Department's web site or considered by OMB, but are monitored internally by the Department.
- In 2006, select GPRA indicator results were used by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in the Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART) process to assess Gallaudet's (and the Department of Education's) effectiveness. The indicators that OMB looks at are: undergraduate enrollment, persistence rates, graduation rates, and "placement" rate, meaning what percentage of our graduates obtains employment after graduation, and an efficiency measure.
- The full GPRA report and related documents are posted on the Student Success and Academic Quality website and at www.ed.gov
