

Anti-Trafficking

Human trafficking is modern-day slavery and involves the recruitment, harboring or transporting people into exploitation through the use of force, violence, deception, fraud or coercion. The different forms of exploitation include and is not limited to: forced prostitution, forced labor, forced begging, forced criminality, domestic servitude, illegal adoptions and forced organ removal. The different forms of exploitation include and is not limited to: forced prostitution, forced labor, forced begging, forced criminality, domestic servitude, illegal adoptions and forced organ removal.

Trafficking Activities:

- Engaging in severe forms of trafficking in persons;
- Destroying, concealing, confiscating or otherwise denying access to an individual's identification and/or immigration documents;
- Recruiting an individual for employment through materially false or fraudulent pretenses or practices and/or using recruiters who are in violation of the local labor laws of the country where recruitment occurs;
- Charging recruited employees with placement or recruitment fees;
- Under certain circumstances, failing to provide or pay for return transportation at the conclusion of employment; and
- Providing or arranging for housing that fails to meet the host country housing and safety standards;
- When required by law or contract, failing to provide an employee with an employment contract, recruitment agreement, or other required work document in writing in the employee's native language at least five days prior to the employee's departure from his or her point of origin; and

- Any other activities identified by the Federal Acquisition Regulation Council as directly supporting or promoting any aspects of trafficking in persons.

Gallaudet Policy

Severe forms of trafficking in persons are defined to mean: 1) the inducement of a person by force, fraud or coercion, or when the person is a minor, to perform a commercial sex act; or 2) the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision or obtaining of a person for labor or services through the use of force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of subjection to involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, or slavery.

Trafficking in persons and trafficking-related activities are prohibited under federal and state laws and University policy. It is the University's policy that no funds received from any source shall be used in furtherance of trafficking in persons and trafficking-related activities and that all University staff, faculty, teachers, and students, as well as contractors, contractor employees, and their agents who do business with or on behalf of the University, shall not engage in or support such activities.

Report

Chat: www.humantraffickinghotline.org/

Submit Report <https://> humantraffickinghotline.org/report-trafficking

Office of Sponsored Programs and Research

Teresa Bryan-Watts

Teresa.bryan-watts@gallaudet.edu

662-688-0129