SEASON IN REVIEW

In 2016-17, South Carolina women's basketball realized all of the potential that head coach Dawn Staley promised her players and fans when she was inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in September 2013 – "Stick with me. We'll be national champs."

It was a season of disappointments and challenges for a team that Staley herself was not sure had a championship quality. But her game-ready Gamecocks shook it all off, learned from every disappointment and refused to yield under the weight of both obstacles and expectations.

For that perseverance, the 2016-17 Gamecocks became not only SEC regular-season champions for the fourth-straight season, not just SEC Tournament champions for the third-straight time, but also NCAA Tournament champions for the first time in program history.

The season began with questions, not about talent but how to balance how much of it the Gamecocks had. With four 1,000-point scorers all accustomed to their share of the spotlight, skeptics wondered how Staley could manage to keep them all on the same page. What developed instead of friction, though, was the very definition of a team. Each of the four found her own space to shine, her own way to deliver what the team needed when it needed it.

Senior center Alaina Coates exploded out of the gates, drawing national attention with a renewed verve for the game that had her posting double-doubles in five of the first six games along with the energy of an elite player who knew it was her last chance to create history.

South Carolina stumbled early in an unexpected loss at Duke, but the Gamecocks responded with 12 straight victories that put them atop the SEC standings halfway through the season. A narrow loss at home to Tennessee started a tough stretch for South Carolina as the Gamecocks were inconsistent for the first time. They dropped two of their next six games, the last of which included an injury to Coates that would end up influencing the rest of the season.

To those outside the program, that loss to Missouri also pushed South Carolina out of the SEC regular-season race. The Gamecocks had other ideas, taking ownership of their future by locking in on what they could control – winning their last two games to make their comeback championship possible after Mississippi State struggled down the stretch.

A championship in the SEC Tournament in nearby Greenville seemed to be preordained, but Coates' injury and Mississippi State aimed to defy destiny. Kaela Davis and A'ja Wilson had other ideas. Davis shook off a tough opening game to turn in brilliant shooting performances in the semifinals and championship game. Her early scoring set kept the title game against Mississippi State tight, but it was Wilson who dominated the fourth quarter to turn a five-point deficit into the 10-point victory as the Gamecocks again denied the Bulldogs an SEC title.

The NCAA Tournament began under a cloud with the announcement that Coates' injury was season ending. The Gamecocks refused to flinch, and Staley's staff quickly changed its offensive philosophy to fit the new strengths of the team. After avoiding an early scare from Arizona State in the second round, South Carolina hit its stride. The well-rounded Gamecocks overwhelmed Cinderella team Quinnipiac in the Sweet 16 and got contributions from everyone in a late victory over Florida State to advance to their second Final Four in three seasons. Davis' continued hot shooting earned her Stockton Regional Most Outstanding Player honors.

In Dallas, Wilson and Allisha Gray willed the Gamecocks to the championship. With Wilson struggling offensively in the semifinals against Stanford, Gray delivered. Her 18 points and Wilson's career-high 19 rebounds vanquished the Cardinal and propelled South Carolina to its first national title game.

A familiar opponent awaited them in the Mississippi State Bulldogs, who had ideas of revenge for South Carolina ripping two SEC titles from their clutches earlier in the season. The Gamecocks had other plans.

The championship game was close throughout, but the Gamecocks stayed in front behind steady play from Wilson and Gray, who seemed in complete control on both ends of the court. In the waning moments, as Staley pulled her stars from the game, Wilson, the Final Four Most Outstanding Player, was overcome with emotion, the emotion that comes from achieving what she set out to do – help Staley turn her hometown team into a national champion.

For the third-straight season, South Carolina swept the SEC regular-season and tournament championships. For the first time in program history, the Gamecocks did it en route to winning the NCAA National Championship as well.
