TERMS OF REFERENCE (TOR): Community-Based Hepatitis C Outreach/testing/treatment Initiative for People Who Inject Drugs (PWID) in greater Male' Region.

1. Background and Rationale

The Maldives has recently observed a concerning increase in Hepatitis C (HCV) cases among people who inject drugs (PWID), suggesting a potential localized outbreak. Historically, HCV incidence has been low; however, recent surveillance indicates a shift, with multiple cases reported within the past year.

PWID remain disproportionately affected due to:

- High-risk injecting practices (including needle sharing)
- Limited access to harm reduction services
- Barriers to testing, treatment, and follow-up care

Evidence from national and partner assessments highlights:

- Significant levels of injecting drug use and equipment sharing
- A concentrated PWID population (~500 individuals) in the Greater Malé Region
- Gaps in early diagnosis, treatment linkage, and adherence support

This initiative adopts a community-led, peer-based outreach model to expand access to integrated testing (HCV, HIV, Hepatitis B, and syphilis), improve linkage to care, and support treatment completion.

The purpose of this EoI is to identify and engage qualified NGOs/community-based organizations to implement community outreach, peer engagement, and treatment adherence support services for PWID in the Greater Malé Region.
