Tradian Expands Digital Services to the Aviation Sector

MALE', MALDIVES

Aviation Services to Go Live on 22 November 2026

Tradian, the Maldives National Single Window (MNSW) platform to facilitate cross border international trade, is pleased to announce the launch and go-live of aviation-related services on 22 November 2026, marking a significant milestone in the expansion of its digital service ecosystem. This marks an important step forward in expanding the platform's digital services to a key economic sector while contributing to advancement of the goals under the Government's digital transformation vision Maldives 2.0.

From the go-live date, airlines and aviation stakeholders will be able to submit applications through Tradian alongside existing submission channels. This parallel submission arrangement will ensure continuity of operations while allowing stakeholders to gradually familiarize themselves with the new services available on the platform.

The expansion represents an important step towards streamlining regulatory processes, improving service delivery at the border, and enhancing operational efficiency across the Maldivian aviation sector.

Tradian is a centralized interoperable digital gateway designed to simplify trade regulatory compliance and provide businesses and industry stakeholders with convenient, streamlined access to government regulatory cross border services.

Services Available Through Tradian

Upon go-live, the following new services related to the aviation sector will be accessible through the Tradian platform:

1. Scheduled Flights Authorization
    a. Aircraft Operator Security Programme (AOSP) Approval
2. Ad Hoc Charter Flights Authorization
3. Flight Schedule Submission
4. Airline Agent Assignment
5. Scheduled Flights License Renewal
6. Scheduled Flights License Cancellation
7. Fleet Update
8. Flight Schedule Update

Parallel Submission and Transition Arrangements

To ensure a smooth transition and continuity of operations, applications for the newly introduced aviation services on the platform may initially be submitted either through Tradian or through existing submission channels, including email and other established procedures.

This temporary parallel submission arrangement will allow airlines and aviation stakeholders sufficient time to familiarize themselves with the platform, complete the necessary registration and onboarding processes, and transition to digital submissions without disrupting ongoing operations.

Parallel submission means the option available for airlines and aviation stakeholders for a temporary period to use either Tradian or existing methods or channels to submit applications post go -live of new services on the platform.

With this flexibility, stakeholders can gradually start using the new services introduced on the platform while continuing to submit applications through familiar channels, such as email or existing manual processes.

The parallel submission arrangement will remain in effect until the mandatory transition date to Tradian is formally announced.

Next Steps for Airlines and Aviation Stakeholders

All airlines and aviation stakeholders are encouraged to begin registering and onboarding their respective organizations and authorized personnel onto the Tradian platform ahead of the mandatory cut-off date and begin utilizing the available services during the parallel submission period.

The mandatory transition or the official cut-off date, after which applications for the specified services will be accepted exclusively through Tradian, will be determined in consultation with the Maldives Civil Aviation Authority (MCAA) and announced in advance. Stakeholders will be provided with sufficient notice to prepare for the full transition to Tradian.
