Cisbra's grains are provided through partnerships with local producers, ensuring the development and strengthening of regional business.

Flakes

Almost all grains can turn into flakes and whole flours. Our process uses a heating and pre-baking step to be pressed and cooled.

Whole Flours

Our whole flours are produced from the whole grain milling: peel (fibre and bran), germ and endosperm.

Blend of grains

Available for many food industry segments, the blends are customized according to the needs of each client and developed with exclusive compositions.

What is the Traceability in Agriculture?

Monitoring in detail the production process of a food until the final consumer's table is a topic of interest to society as a whole. But, how can this monitoring be carried out completely and reliably? Traceability in agriculture.

This is an essential methodology to prove the origin and quality of products. What happens through tracking, that is, identifying the location of an object in any part of the process, from before planting until after harvesting.

For businesses and consumers, using systems that track food is efficient. For example, in the detection and prevention of diseases or contaminations, as well as guaranteeing the origin and origin of raw materials.
