Installed rooftop solar system in Australia (pictured left) and California, U.S. (pictured right) manufacturing plants.

Fujimi Plant (Japan) uses vegetable residues from the plant and tomatoes from nearby farm that cannot be shipped as renewable energy.

Fermentation of methane with residue produce biomethane gas.

Generates steam without CO2.

Convert steam into heat for use.

REDUCE FOOD WASTE

Promote food loss reduction by adding value to by-products or recycle them.

Australia manufactures NinjinFibre® Carrot Powder and LycoFibre® Tomato Skin Powder, an all natural fibre produced in the processing of carrots.

Japan achieved a 100% recycling rate for vegetable-derived by-products in 6 plants.

WATER CONSERVATION

As a company that uses large amounts of water in the cultivating and processing stages, we are implementing measures tailored to each region to mitigate water-related risks.

The Kagome Group and its major suppliers:

- Understand water-related risks.
- Strive to reduce water intake and use water efficiently to protect local water resources.
- Clean used water before returning it to the local communities.
- Factories in areas where water-related risks are high, take measures for water that are appropriate for the local area.

AUSTRALIA

Kagome Australia is a processed fruit and vegetable company and is the country's largest tomato processor, delivering high-quality, tomato-based products since 1996.

We are proud to grow, harvest, and process our own tomatoes and carrots in the sunny Echuca region. We also process apple, beetroot, and pear into value-added products. Recently we commissioned a powder plant to convert fruit and vegetable by-products into valuable powders for the consumer-packaged goods market, nutraceuticals, and pet food.

We work closely with growers, producers, and consumers to deliver a value-added product, true to flavour and in-tune with nature, to Australia and the world.
