Premium Jasmine Rice is grown in the wet season and is highly prized for its extra-long grain, soft texture and a distinctive flavor that exudes a strong, natural scent. Due to its fluffiness and slightly sticky texture when cooked, it's considered to have an excellent cooking quality. The most popular name is Phka Malis (Malis mean Jasmine) with varieties such as Phka Rumduol, Phka Romeat, Phka Rumdeng, Somali and Neang MalisTM. Fragrant Rice Cambodian Fragrant Rice or Sen Kro Oub is one of the most beautiful types of rice in the world. The long and slim kernels make Sen Kro Oub rice outstandingly presented on consumers' plates. This is the second type of fragrant rice produce in Cambodia. It has a similar outlook and texture with Jasmine rice with authentic natural fragrant. However, it is not much soft compared to Jasmine rice. Other Category Rice: Premium White Rice, Aromatic Rice, Long Grain White Rice and Long

Grain Parboiled Rice, basmati and non-basmati Rice.

Cambodia Agarwood: Agarwood generally describes some specific trees that have the smell of "Agarwood" after producing the effect of "Agarwood". Since ancient times, Cambodia has been a famous source of agarwood and its bulk productions are cinnamon or brown in color. Fine agarwood is extremely attractive and popular among collectors and westerners due to its brilliant hue and alluring scent. Cambodian agarwood has a honey like flavor, it is sweet and slight sour. It produces a pungent perfume, sweet with a hint of flowery aroma. If used with oily resin it is considered of exceptional grade and the fragrance is typically persistent like a painting.

Kampot pepper: Kampot pepper is like champagne, it can only be grown in certain areas, Kampot pepper is grown, produced and sold in green, black, white and red varieties, all from the same plant. The climate of Kampot Province offers perfect conditions for growing pepper and the quartz content of the soil in the foothills of the Elephant Mountains helps to give Kampot pepper its unique terroir. We deal in different types of pepper, including Black pepper, White pepper, Green pepper, Red peppercorns

Dried mango: 100 grams of dried mango contains about 314 calories, in which carbohydrates are the main source of calories, followed by protein and fat. Dried mango has 20% of the daily value for Vitamin A and notable content of Vitamin B, D, and E. However, most of the Vitamin C in the mango is lost during the process of dehydration; it carries only 2% of the daily value. Minerals such as calcium, iron, and phosphorus can be found in dried mangoes. With additional process of blanching, dried mango can retain the content of its carotenoids and vitamin C. As with other fruits, mangoes contain antioxidants, such as mangiferin. These may help protect cells in the human body from radical damage associated with diabetes, cancer, and aging.

Peanuts: Longyan peanuts taste sweet, crisp, beautiful color, thin skin, easy to peel, big grain full of meat, has the effects of pleasing the spleen and stomach, moistening the lung and eliminating phlegm, nourishing and regulating qi, clearing the throat and stopping malaria. It is a unique safe, high-quality, nutritious and pollution-free flavor food in western Fujian. The products have won the gold medal of the National '99 China International Agricultural Expo Famous Products and the provincial '99 Kunming World Expo Fujian Characteristic Products Exhibition and were awarded the title of the Famous agricultural products of Fujian Province from 2000 to 2005. The products have been sold well in 28 large and medium-sized cities and major tourist cities in China and are favored by the majority of consumers.
