Illinois Women's Basketball Allegations

At a time when the Illinois football program is already under investigation (see below) for alleged mistreatment of players, the school's women's basketball coaches also face similar accusations.

Parents of three of the four Illinois players who have left the program since the end of the 2014-15 season sent letters to university officials alleging misconduct by head coach Matt Bollant and associate coach Mike Divilbiss. The Champaign News-Gazette published copies of the letters, which accuse Bollant and Divilbiss of creating racial tension on the team, emotionally and verbally abusing players and jeopardizing their health by forcing them to play through major injuries.

Many of the issues appear to stem from alleged favoritism shown by Bollant and his staff toward players he recruited as opposed to holdovers as he tried to establish a new culture within a program that hasn't made the NCAA tournament since 2003. Bollant attempted to instill toughness in his players after replacing Jolette Law in 2012, but the families of former players Jacqui Grant, Taylor Tuck and Taylor Gleason believe that he went too far.

Illinois will review allegations against head football coach Tim Beckman

Illinois athletic director Mike Thomas says he backs football coach Tim Beckman following allegations by a former player that his injuries were mishandled.

Thomas says he still plans a full review of the claims made by former offensive lineman Simon Cvijanovic. Thomas says he believes Beckman put "the welfare of this young man above everything else."

Cvijanovic complained in a series of Twitter messages that he had been pressured to play when injured last season and that the school hadn't fully informed him of the extent of an earlier knee surgery.

He also alleged that Beckman "misused" his power and "attacked" (how was not specified) a former teammate at Illinois.

Cvijanovic said Monday he was considering legal action. Thomas said the university review will begin soon but isn't sure how long it will take or who will be interviewed.

Update Your Templates For the New Recruiting Year

If it has been a while since you sent out a mass email to prospects or you want to start for the first time, be sure to update your existing templates or create a brand new one by sending some updated pictures of your staff or the recent season you just completed. You can update your templates one of two ways:

Via Email to Support:

1. Send an email to support@jumpforward.com describing the overall look you would like for your template.
2. Attach the pictures you would like to use and any other graphic you would like to include to give the graphics design team as much information as possible.

Via the Support Tab:

1. Login to JF and along the top hover over SUPPORT.
2. Click on REQUEST NEW GRAPHIC.
3. Complete the form as completely as possible in order to give the graphics design team as much information as possible.

Makes sure your templates are current so you don't accidentally send out incorrect or outdated mailings.
