ABOUT

Slow travel, reimagined for the 55+ traveler.

The Good Life Abroad is an immersive, slow travel company designed for adults 55+ seeking meaningful, community-driven experiences abroad. Rather than traditional tourism, we offer one or two month stays in culturally rich European cities where travelers live like locals while building friendships and shared experiences.

Travelers live in exclusive apartments, either in the same building or within walking distance of others in the group. They experience a rhythm of independent living, exploration, and optional group activities, all with the support of our caring Community Manager. The Good Life Abroad fosters meaningful relationships, health and wellness, lifelong learning, and adventure and exploration all while making dreams of international living come true.

IN THEIR WORDS

What our travelers are saying.

“

Staying in one place for a month with The Good Life Abroad is priceless. This coordinated immersion helps us quickly find the best spots and fully enjoy the local culture.

Sharon G. & Paul A.

“

What appealed to me most was the idea of staying somewhere for 30 days. It felt almost too good to be true, but the glowing reviews reassured me—and the experience exceeded all my expectations.

Margo F.
PARIS, FRANCE

“

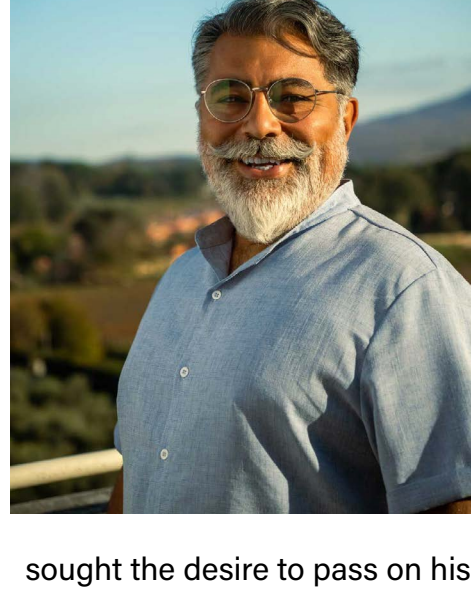

As a solo traveler, I expected to explore venues and dine alone, trying to connect with people around me. However, having this group with us was so unexpected and the best part about it. It felt like a built-in community.

FOUNDER

Meet our Founder & CEO

Andrew Motiwalla
FOUNDER & CEO · SAN DIEGO, CA

Andrew Motiwalla has had an international career, starting with a stint in the Peace Corps, where he lived abroad for two years in Central America. Throughout his career, he has had multiple experiences living abroad and each time was impactful on his life. Because of this, he has focused most of his career on helping other people have meaningful international experiences.

After the Peace Corps, Andrew served as Senior VP at Cross-Cultural Solutions, an international nonprofit organization that sent Americans around the world to engage in short-term volunteering. He went on to found Global Leadership Adventures, a travel company focused on student travel. As his own children grew, he sought the desire to pass on his values of global citizenship to them, and created Discover Corps.

Based on his experience with older travelers in Discover Corps, and combined with his own parents' positive experience living in a 55+ community, Andrew fused together the concepts of travel and community to create The Good Life Abroad.

FAQ

Frequently asked questions.

Q.

Why The Good Life Abroad instead of just renting an Airbnb?

The Good Life Abroad is much more than booking an apartment — it's a supportive program which facilitates international living. We believe having vetted apartments, a built-in community, and the support of a local Community Manager are all features which create a better international living experience. Arriving at a destination only to discover that your vacation rental is not nearly as nice as the photos is too risky when moving abroad for months at a time.

Q.

How long has The Good Life Abroad been around?

The Good Life Abroad was founded in 2023 by Andrew Motiwalla in San Diego, California, as an extension of Terra Educational Travel, which he founded 20 years ago. Terra Educational Travel has an excellent track record and incredible reviews from past travelers, and Andrew applies the same standards of excellence to The Good Life Abroad, which have delighted customers for years.

Q.

Is this a timeshare?

No, the apartments provided through The Good Life Abroad are not timeshares. The Good Life Abroad is an international immersive experience where members are provided with an exclusive apartment for the duration of their stay.
