SEVILLIAN'S DEFENSE ENERGIZING LADY LIONS

Web address: http://www.centredaily.com/2014/12/13/4507609_penn-state-womens-basketball-sevillians.html?sp=/99/146/&rh=1 Publication Date: December 13, 2014

Writer: Walt Moody

Keke Sevillian wants to be a nuisance.

And Penn State women's basketball coach Coquese Washington doesn't mind.

The peskier the sophomore guard can be, the better it is for the Lady Lions (2-7) who face Rider (2-6) in the second game of a doubleheader at the Bryce Jordan Center at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Sevillian's job is to hound her opponent, hopefully forcing a turnover or getting a steal.

So far, she's fourth on the team with nine steals. While that may not sound like much, each of the players who have more steals than Sevillian — Kaliyah Mitchell (18), Lindsey Spann (13) and Sierra Moore (10) — have played more than twice as many minutes as Sevillian.

"I'm told my specific role is to be the great defender and to change the pace of the game," the 5-foot-7 guard said. "I'm an energy-giver. I embrace my role to the fullest."

That means making life miserable for the player she's defending, especially an opposing point guard.

"It makes me feel awesome that the point guard doesn't want to dribble up the floor anymore because I'm guarding her," Sevillian said.

Her teammates say they are happy to see Sevillian on the court. At 133 minutes, she's already played more than she's played all of last season.

"Her defensive intensity is great and I love it so much," Spann said. "When Keke is out there on the court, she gets me hyped when she gets stops, steals and deflections. It brings a lot more intensity and energy to everyone on the court. Yeah, you can talk on the sidelines, 'Blah, blah blah,' but when she gets out there and she does what she knows she's good at, it really helps the team."

"Keke brings that defensive competitiveness to this team," added Mitchell. "When she gets on the floo, she's always eager to guard someone — whether it's their best player or someone who is really fast. She comes out there with all this energy. It helps you on defense. You see her out there running and you're like, 'OK, I'm running out there with her then.""

Sevillian says that's the type of player she always was at Goodrich High School in Flint, Mich. She was all over the court, showing off the speed that made her one of the top hurdlers and sprinters in the state.

But prior to her senior season at Goodrich, Sevillian tore the anterior cruciate ligament in her right knee.

She played last season at Penn State, but was forced to wear a bulky brace.

While her teammates practiced, Sevillian often spent time riding a stationary bicycle.

"It's always good not to be hurt because then you don't have to be on that bike," she said.

Joining her was Spann, who missed all of last season with her own ACL tear, that was suffered over the summer.

"I'm proud of what she's done and how far she's come," Spann said. "We've both kind of gone through it together. We were having our rough days in the training room with our sore knees."

Even with the brace off, Sevillian didn't feel right and decided to do something about it with strength and conditioning coach Brad Pantall and athletic trainer Natalie Meckstroth.

"I think when I tore my ACL, I lost a little bit of my speed and mobility in my knee," Sevillian said. "That's why I stayed over this summer and worked with Brad and Natalie. I worked really hard to get all of that back. I feel a lot more confident in my speed and my ability to change speeds and do transition things.

"It took all summer. I committed myself to staying summer session long before everyone had to be here."

Washington said Sevillian's hard work has made a difference and she's comparing Sevillian's play to that of former Lady Lion Dara Taylor, who won the Big Ten's Defensive Player of the Year honor last season.

"She's healthier. She's more confident, Washington said of Sevillian. "She's learning how to play defense with her feet and she's staying out of foul trouble. She's certainly growing into the Dara Taylor mode of being that pesky, on-ball defender and helping to generate some transition opportunities and speeding the game up for us. I've been really happy with her growth defensively and how she's impacting the game."

Sevillian's hard work has not ended. On the advice of Washington and assistant coach Jocelyn Wyatt, Sevillian is changing the way she shoots the ball. Previously, Sevillian shot with her hand in front of her face, while the coaches have her now launching from her right shoulder.

It's been a slow process. Sevillian is just 6 for 31 from the floor (19 percent)

Still she maintains her bubbly smile and a sense of optimism with the change.

"It's a long process, but it's going to be worth it in the long run," Sevillian said. "... It's always uncomfortable, but I trust my coaches. It may not be comfortable and I may not like it, but they see the bigger picture."

Washington hopes the bigger picture has her team playing better than it has so far. The Lady Lions are off to the worst start through nine games in program history.

WHITTED LOOKS TO KEEP THINGS ROLLING FOR LADY LIONS

Web address: http://www.centredaily.com/2015/01/31/4581753_penn-state-womens-basketball-whitted.html?rh=1 Publication Date: January 31, 2015 Writer: Walt Moody

Penn State's Peyton Whitted spent the early part of her sophomore women's basketball season proceeding with caution.

Now, her mantra is "full speed ahead."

That seems to be working.

Heading into Sunday's noon clash at No. 22 Rutgers, Whitted is coming off the best three-game stretch of her career with the Lady Lions.

First she netted a career-high 12 points, with six rebounds, two steals and two blocks in a 79-75 win over Indiana that snapped an eight-game losing streak. She went 4 for 4 from the floo, scored 11 points and grabbed six rebounds in a 76-75 win over Northwestern. She followed that up with with a career-high 16 points, making 7 of a career-high 14 shots, in a 75-64 loss at Minnesota.

Over the three-game stretch, she's averaging 13.0 points and 5.3 rebounds, while shooting 61 percent from the floo .

What has changed?

Whitted has noticeably been more aggressive, especially on the offensive end.

"I've been a little hesitant getting to the basket," Whitted admits. "I think in the past (few) games I've done that very well."

Whitted also said there's been a change in attitude as well.

"I've just been staying positive," the 6-foot-3 Georgia native said. "In the other games, I've been very negative when I make a mistake or I miss a shot. These past few games I've been working on keeping my head up all of the times and that really helped me staying positive.

"My teammates do a good job of finding us on the inside. We've talked about the guards looking inside more, passing and getting more touches. That helps a lot and offensive rebounding has helped me a lot, too, because I've been crashing the basket hard and getting some extra buckets there." Whitted's play has transformed through hard work in practice.

"The coaches have been really on me. I've been working on finishing through contact, rebounding, jumping up with two hands and pursuing the ball. That's really helped me in practicing it and going into the game and doing the same thing."

Penn State coach Coquese Washington has been waiting to see that kind of aggressive play and confidence from Whitted, who entered the season as actually one of the more experienced Lady Lions, having averaged 11 minutes per game in her freshman season.

"A lot of time in basketball, the more aggressive person makes the plays," she said. "The more aggressive teams make the plays."

Washington said that she's "keeping her fingers crossed" that Whitted's dynamic play off the bench will continue.

"It's being OK with being wrong hard," Washington said of aggressive play. "Sometimes with a young team — and this team in particular — they're thinking so much about doing the right thing that they're not just playing. I think that's what we're seeing with them as they are getting used to what's happening on the court — the game is slowing down. They're not thinking as much. They are just playing, being decisive and reacting to what is going on."

Redshirt Lindsey Spann, who Washington has lauded for picking up things quickly, said players pick up things at different paces.

"I think the light is coming on for a lot of people now and that is only going to make this team even better," said Spann, who leads the Lady Lions with a 14.8 scoring average. "It might have taken time. It's a process. Things take time, new things and new adjustments. ... I think people are doing a great job of filling in their roles and we've gotten bette."

When Whitted plays well, she gives Washington options at several positions.

"With her size and her versatility it adds another element that I think it makes it tough," Washington said. "With her size and she's pretty long and can play at multiple positions, she gives us a lot of versatility. She adds an element on the backboards when she's pushing the ball in transition and leading the break, she helps our transition game and helps us play a little faster.

"She adds an element to everything we're doing that is pretty dynamic. She's a very skilled player and when she's playing the way that she's played the last (three) games, she's very impactful."

Whitted and her teammates will need to make big impacts if Penn State (5-16 overall, 2-8) is to upset Rutgers (15-5, 6-3).

The Scarlet Knights defeated the Lady Lions 71-51 earlier this season, in a contest that was much closer than the final score. Rutgers' pressing defense forced an astounding 38 turnovers. The Scarlet Knights had 22 steals.

"They are an active team defensively — hands up, in there getting boards," Spann said. "It was mainly us. If we just take care of the ball, things will be simple. Make smart decisions and good passes and we won't have 38 turnovers. It will be a good game."

"Hopefully, we will take care of the ball a little better," Washington said. "If we can do that, we'll be in better shape. That's probably the biggest adjustment dealing with their pressure and not giving the ball away as many times as we did. We've got to be on the boards against Rutgers because they do a great job of crashing and getting second-chance points."

Penn State had a season-low 11 turnovers against Minnesota on Wednesday and has not committed more than 18 in its last four games.

"I'm very excited to play them again because we were in the last game, even though we had 38 turnovers," Whitted said of Rutgers. "Think about if we had 20 less turnovers. You see how we're taking care of the ball better and playing better against pressure. I'm excited to see how that goes."

FOLLOWING ACL TEAR LAST YEAR, LINDSEY SPANN READY TO GO FOR LADY LIONS

Redshirt freshman Lindsey Spann leaned forward while sitting on the bench of the Lady Lions' practice gym — her two palms loosely gripping a basketball. She spoke with the enthusiasm of someone who hasn't played in a game in quite some time.

Sunday's exhibition against Indiana University of Pennsylvania will be a benchmark moment for Spann, who's endured a tumultuous start to her college career.

In July 2013, while preparing for what was supposed to be her first season in a Penn State uniform, the point guard tore her anterior cruciate ligament during a workout. She was sidelined for the entire campaign and has spent the last 15 months trying to get her right knee back to full strength.

After a strenuous rehab process, Spann is in good spirits, saying she's ready to get back on the court.

"The knee feels great," Spann said. "I don't even remember I hurt myself."

Instead of feeling self-pity, Spann maintained a positive attitude and looked at the injury as a learning experience. She said she's mentally tougher now because of everything she's had to go through.

The highly touted recruit out of Laurel, Maryland is no stranger to adversity.

At Our Lady of Good Counsel High School, Spann broke her foot. She said that having already been through a situation where she was forced to miss significant playing time made things easier this time around.

As most parents under the same circumstances would, Spann's mother offered words of encouragement in the wake of the ACL tear.

"My mom talked to me a lot about it," Spann said. "She was like, 'You've overcome injuries before. You've overcome a lot of things, so just stay strong and I know you're going to get through it.' She's always told me that and I got through it. I'm here now."

Often times when players return to live action after months of rehab, it takes a while to overcome the fear of reinjuring their ACL and reach the point where they're not thinking about it on the court. Spann insists this has not been an issue for her. In the first month of practice leading up to the start of the regular season, the Maryland native has been playing as if nothing ever happened. Coach Coquese Washington has not sensed any hesitation in Spann's game from what she's seen.

"I kid you not," Washington said. "The day she got hurt, she was like, 'All right, I'm going to come back.'

Washington has been so impressed with what Spann has shown her that on Wednesday she named her one of the team captains for the 2014-15 season, along with Tori Waldner and Sierra Moore.

Once she was cleared to play again, Spann focused on ways to improve as a player. She said knocking down outside shots consistently has been a point of emphasis, but her main concern is lateral movement on the defensive side of the ball. The redshirt freshman wants to be able to press up on opposing point guards and change direction the way she did before the injury.

Being able to watch from the sidelines without losing a year of eligibility may have been a good thing for Spann, sophomore Peyton Whitted said. She added there are certain things that Spann would not have noticed on the court last year that she was able to pick up on from the bench. She can apply what she learned on the court this season, Whitted said.

Spann's debut has long been anticipated by team members. As a senior at Good Counsel, she averaged 15.9 points per game, 5.3 assists and 2.4 steals, while knocking down 80 percent of her free throws.

Now she gets her chance to prove what she can do at the next level.

"Lindsey has a pretty high basketball IQ," Washington said. "She's really fun to watch, especially with the ball in her hands. She's a very gifted passer and makes things easier for her teammates."

While the Lions were in the midst of a 24-8 season that came to an end in the Sweet 16 of the NCAA tournament, Spann was doing everything in her power to get back onto the court as soon as possible. Her teammates' support helped Spann get through what were some difficult times. Having people around her who she could turn to was invaluable throughout the rehab process.

"I'm so excited," Whitted said. "It's been a long time coming. She worked her butt off this summer and last year."

"Excited" is the same word Spann used to describe how she's feeling with her first collegiate game looming. She said she's looking forward to getting back on the floor with the rest of the Lions and helping them play at a high level.

The situation that was handed to Spann last July may seem less than ideal, but she doesn't look at it that way. She described it as a "minor setback for a major comeback."

Soon enough, she'll get a chance to put her talents on display for the outside world to see what they missed out on a year ago.

"We can't wait for everybody else to see," center Candice Agee said. "...Because we already know what she can do."

BANKS DOING ALL SHE CAN FOR LADY LIONS

Web address: http://www.centredaily.com/2015/01/24/4570341 penn-state-womens-basketball-banks.html?rh=1 Publication Date: January 24, 2015 Writer: Walt Moody

Brianna Banks has seen more losses this season than she had in her entire college career before she arrived at Penn State.

While at Connecticut, she was a member of two national championship teams as the Huskies went 108-9 over the past three seasons.

The transfer, who is sitting out a season per NCAA rules, has watched her new teammates go 4-15 and lose eight straight before knocking off Indiana 79-75 Thursday.

Does she regret her decision to leave Storrs, Conn., for University Park?

"I feel like it was the best decision for me from Day 1," said Banks, who will be cheering on her teammates at 2 p.m. today against Northwestern at the Bryce Jordan Center. "Every day it gets better and it reminds me why I'm here. I enjoy being here."

And Lady Lion coach Coquese Washington is glad she's here.

Banks has made an impact on the practice floo, a place where she can participate.

The 5-foot-9 left-hander stands out during workouts, whether she's playing with her teammates or along with the practice team.

"She's fantastic," Washington said. "She's an ultracompetitive kid. When we're in the gym and she's playing with us or against us, the intensity level certainly is very high. Her competitiveness, her intensity just adds a lot to the practice environment."

"I'm enjoying myself," Banks said. "I'm trying to stay focused in school and come out here in practice and help my teammates out. I just try to help them get better in practice every day, while they help me get better every day. We are all in this together because we are one team, even if I am not playing."

Banks says she has always been super competitive, no matter what she's doing.

"I hate losing no matter what I'm playing basketball, pool, checkers," Banks said. "It doesn't matter. I'm out to win every time."

And that's what has made watching her teammates struggle so hard to watch. The Lady Lions are on pace to have the worst season in program history.

"It sucks so bad because all you can do is encourage them," Banks said. " When you see them struggling, you want to do nothing but help. It just sucks so bad that you can only practice and not produce."

Banks has shown she can produce at an elite level. She averaged 7.3 points in 17.1 minutes before her sophomore season at Connecticut was cut short by an injury.

Washington said the Lady Lions don't often bring up Banks' years and success at Connecticut.

"I look at her impact as what she brings to practice this year," Washington said. "The competitiveness, the intensity and focus that she plays with it certainly rubs off on our team and also on some of the young players with how hard you have to work and how competitive you have to be every day. I think that's helped us continue to grow as our season has gone on."

And Banks sees her teammates making progress. That tempers the losing somewhat.

"It's crazy in a way that it's not something I'm used to," she said of losing. "They're young and I understand as to why we are where we are right now.

... Winning is something you work hard for. As long as we're working hard and making progress every day, then I'm satisfied.

Banks says she enjoys hanging out with her teammates off the floor and feels like she fits in perfectly with the group.

"Surprisingly, we are all so much alike," she said. "It's great how Co recruits because you can tell that she recruits players who all have the same personality and the same goals. It's very rare that we clash or have a disagreement."

Banks admits her biggest problem with Penn State is finding her way around

"The campus is still kind of big," she said with a chuckle. "I don't know where all of the buildings are, but I'm getting there. I know where my classes are - and the food."

The latter is very important — at least one spot. You can often find Banks chowing down at one particular spot in the HUB-Robeson Center.

"I'm a huge Chik-fil- eater," Banks said. "I love Chick-fil-A. That's the main reason I came here outside of basketball. I love Chick-fil- so I indulge in it. I just had it a couple of hours ago, actually."

"Bri has like eight percent body fat so she's allowed," chimed in senior Tori Waldner, when overhearing Banks.

Banks can't wait until she puts that sculpted body on the floo . Until then, she'll continue to cheer and practice hard.

"They are really starting to get the competitive spirit," she said of her teammates.

PENN STATE-OHIO STATE RIVALRY CLOSER TO HOME FOR LADY LIONS' WILLIAMS

Web address: http://www.collegian.psu.edu/sports/women_basketball/article_58109f96-7056-11e4-b5dd-b79151b75c98.html Publication Date: November 20, 2014

Writer: Mark Fischer

Jaylen Williams thought she was just along for the ride.

Then a heavily recruited high school sophomore, Williams joined her parents as they dropped her older brother, Camren, off at Ohio State for his freshman year. Camren was set to begin his football career with the Buckeyes.

But she came home with a new opportunity.

Williams received an impromptu offer from the Ohio State women's basketball program when touring the Buckeyes' basketball facility.

The Braintree, Massachusetts native comes from a long line of athletes that extends further than her brother, now a junior linebacker on the No. 7 Buckeyes. Her father, Brent, played in the NFL for 11 seasons and her eldest brother, Brennan, was drafted in 2013 by the Houston Texans.

Despite briefly considering Ohio State during that trip to Columbus in 2012, Williams verbally committed to Penn State later that summer. The 6-foot-3-inch forward made firm her commitment to the Lady Lions' program last week when she signed her letter of intent on National Signing Day.

Have we met before?

Williams began receiving recruiting letters from prospective schools when she was in middle school.

Jim Foster, then the Ohio State women's basketball coach, invited Williams to tour the Buckeyes' facility while she was in town.

From a recruiting standpoint, Foster knew that Williams was a potential 2015 target, but had never seen her play. The Williams family thought the meet and greet was just supposed to be a chance for the two to get acquainted with each other.

As the two were talking, one of Foster's assistant coaches nearby realized the 15 year-old looked familiar. Williams was the same eighth grader that the assistant coach watched shut down a then-Ohio State signee in an AAU tournament a couple years earlier.

Brent Williams said he recalled Foster telling his daughter, "I have not had a chance to see you play, [but if my assistant] says you can play, then you can play at Ohio State. We're going to extend you an offer."

The Buckeyes were the first team to give Williams an offer. After leaving her brother behind in Columbus, she told her parents on the car ride back to their home that she thought she wanted to join her brother at Ohio State.

"Jaylen, relax," Brent told his daughter in the car. "It's just your emotions right now. We'll think this through."

By the end of the 12-hour trek back home, she heeded her father's advice and decided to keep her options open. Williams, who tagged along for many recruiting trips with her older brothers, had previously grown a strong interest in Penn State, as well.

She soon committed to the Lady Lions' program, which offered her later that summer.

Ironically enough, Penn State was the same school Camren had changed his mind about just a few months earlier. He had originally committed to a Joe Paternoled Lions program in March 2011. Camren has played sparingly for Ohio State since decommitting from Penn State in January 2012.

'She wasn't a princess'

Williams' first official visit to Penn State came back in 2010. Already fond of the campus, she wanted to make sure Washington and the rest of the coaching staff provided a good fit for her on and o f the court.

"I really liked how family oriented [Washington] made the team feel," Williams said. "Right when I was talking to her, it just clicked, and right when she was talking to my parents, it clicked. I just knew she was going to be my coach one day."

Despite raising two Division I football players, Brent has always felt his daughter was the most athletically gifted of his children.

"For a very long time, [Brennan and Camren] were frustrated because she got away with things they had to work harder at," Brent said.

And as is the fate for most little siblings, Williams' two older brothers would often team up and tease her.

Washington could tell that Williams wasn't the prototypical teenage girl when she first began recruiting her as a freshman at Archbishop Williams High School.

"She wasn't a princess growing up", the coach said on signing day. Brent said his daughter was raised in a competitive atmosphere that has made her a more determined player on and off the basketball court.

Seeing Brennan and Camren go through the college recruiting process and eventually signing with Division I schools has been invaluable for Williams.

"I feel more prepared, I know what they went through," Williams said. "I know how hard they've had to work to get to where they are right now."

Her high school basketball coach, Jim Bancroft, said she is "more mentally tough growing up with them," Bancroft said.

When Williams tore her ACL and was forced to sit out her junior year, her two other brothers — who also have had their share of injuries on the football field being by her side was key.

"I'm just starting to get everything back together," she said of the injury. "Nothing really feels awkward anymore."

Before the missed season, Williams scored 8.5 points per game and added 11.6 rebounds and 3.5 blocks per game during her sophomore season.

Bancroft characterized Williams as a solid defensive player in the paint and said the post player has begun to take her offensive game to the next level as well.

A house divided

When Penn State played Ohio State in football on Oct. 25, Williams was put in a difficult spot

Should she root for the school she'd be spending the next four years, or root for her brother wearing the scarlet red and grey?

Her father, Brent, made it clear that the household roots for Penn State football every game but one: when the Lions play Ohio State.

Meanwhile, Camren will be a senior when the Lady Lions visit the Buckeyes next season. Brent guaranteed that you'll be able to pick Camren out of the sea of red when the two schools match up in Columbus.

"Camren will be wearing blue even though that's a color [Ohio State] is not allowed to wear," Brent joked. "He'll have to get an exemption."

LADY LIONS' WALDNER MAY HAVE COACHING IN FUTURE

Web address: http://www.centredaily.com/2015/02/22/4616255 penn-state-womens-basketball-lady.html?rh=1 Publication Date: February 22, 2015 Writer: Walt Moody

Tori Waldner could have just four games left in her college basketball career - three regular season and one in the Big Ten Tournament.

But maybe the Penn State senior isn't ready to leave the sport when the Lady Lions' season is complete.

Waldner, who leads the Lady Lions (6-20 overall, 3-12 Big Ten) on the road against No. 5 Maryland (24-2, 15-0) at 7 p.m. on Monday, is one of 58 players to have been selected to participate in the Women's Basketball Coaches Association's "So You Want to Be A Coach Program." Waldner will attend a three-day workshop in April where the focus will be recruiting, the administrative side to coaching, how to get hired, skill development, the importance of knowing the rules and how to balance work and life.

"I think coaching is definitely an option," said Waldner, a kinesiology major. "I'm really setting myself up for any options. Helping younger girls, whether it's coaching at the collegiate or a lower level, ... going to this "So You Want to be a Coach" conference is definitely going to show me what level that might be at. I think even a (graduate assistant) spot would be amazing. I'm really open to any opportunities."

Lady Lion coach Coguese Washington believes Waldner would be an excellent addition to the ranks.

"Tori has a really bright mind and has a very good basketball IQ," said Washington of Waldner, who was part of three Big Ten regular-season title teams prior to this season. "She's one of the people that knows everything that's going on on the court and what everybody is supposed to do and where everybody is supposed to be.

"I think when you have that kind of intellect and intelligence about the game that bodes well for a career in coaching. Tori is such a people person and a leader and a natural teacher. She likes teaching and being a part of the information flow and helping people understand things. Having that teaching spirit will help her a long way in her coaching career."

Waldner said with her degree - the study of the human movement — that she hopes to be involved in sports, whether it be coaching or not.

She does like a number of facets that leading a basketball program offers.

"I definite y like the strategy," she said. "I also like watching people develop, the progression not just as players but as people."

The Georgia native definitely has done the latter in her four years at Penn State. She has become a leader on campus, serving as the president of the Student-Athlete Advisory Board (SAAB) and is part of the university's "It's On Us" campaign to stop sexual abuse.

Her work ethic has impressed her teammates.

"It's not only on the court, but a big impact off the court," guard Sierra Moore said. "She's involved in so many things. Off the court, she's showing how much academics mean to us and that we have a life after basketball."

Waldner has weathered the challenge of leading a team that is going through the worst season in program history. She's remained a steadying influence despite many lows this season

"I think it's tough on her but Tori has shown a tremendous amount of focus and poise," Washington said. "She's been a good leader. She hasn't let the ups and downs of the season weigh on her. She's continued to be a strong example of trying to get better. ... As her season and career wind down, she's been incredibly coachable and positive and fighting to finish the season on as high a note as we can.

Waldner said she's remained realistic this season in the wake of watching four starters graduate from a Sweet 16 team a year ago.

"Honestly, we weren't going to better extremely fast," Waldner said. "Our hopes were to do really well. As you can see now, we have to see the slow progression of getting better."

Waldner is coming off the best scoring game of her career. The 6-foot-5 forward netted 16 points and grabbed eight rebounds in an 85-77 loss against Minnesota (22-6, 11-5).

Penn State will need more of those numbers to contend against the Terrapins, who thanks to Ohio State's 100-82 upset of Iowa on Saturday, clinched the Big Ten title without having to play a game over the weekend.

The former ACC power, a Final Four team last year, has rolled through the Big Ten.

The Terps knocked off the Lady Lions on Feb. 5, netting a 77-62 triumph in a contest they led by 25 points in the second half.

"I don't think we were ourselves against Maryland when we played them here," Moore said. "We got off to a slow start."

Shatori Walker-Kimbrough had 21 points (on 10 for 14 shooting) to lead Maryland in that contest. The Terps scored 22 points off of 17 Penn State turnovers.

"I do think that we did a lot of good things that game," Washington said. "One of the areas that we struggled in is that we turned the ball over. Even though the number isn't astronomical, they capitalized on those turnovers and scored a ton of points in transition."

It could be one of a handful of games Waldner, who is averaging 5.1 points and 5.8 rebounds, has left.

"I'm just focusing on Maryland," the senior said. "I've played a lot of basketball, but it's not going to get to me until probably the season is over."

And once that is done, coaching could be in her future.

"I think she will be a good coach," said Moore, who offered a piece of advice. "She might need to get a little bit tougher. I think that comes with age when she sees how tough it is to coach girls."

"If she actually goes into it, I think she has a tremendous coaching career ahead of her," added Washington.

DELONE CATHOLIC GRADUATE SIERRA MOORE RETURNS HOME, FLOURISHES FOR PENN STATE WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Web address: http://www.ydr.com/sports/ci_27537270/delone-catholic-graduate-sierra-moore-flourishing-penn-stat Publication Date: February 16, 2015 Writer: Bill Arsenault

Sierra Moore found a new home to show off her basketball talents – with the Penn State Nittany Lions, to be exact.

And the 5-foot-11 redshirt sophomore guard is doing quite the job in her first season with the program

When Moore was a senior at Delone Catholic she earned a bundle of awards including being named Pennsylvania's Gatorade Player of the Year and the Associated Press Class AA Player of the Year. She was rated as the 21st player by Blue Star Report and was a McDonald's High School and Parade Magazine All-American. Moore scored 2,595 points in her career with the Squires.

That resume drew the interest of major colleges across the country. Moore decided to attend Duke of the Atlantic Coast Conference, but saw limited action as a freshman with the Blue Devils and would ultimately transfer.

"I left Duke for personal reasons," she said. "But it was a good experience playing at the college level with an elite team."

Penn State was one of those colleges interested in Moore when she was at Delone.

"We recruited Sierra and we were quite disappointed when she opted to attend Duke," Nittany Lions coach Coquese Washington said. "At the time, I told her that if things ever changed to give us a call."

The call came.

"Sierra and her mom came up for a visit and we had a long discussion about what she wanted out of her college experience moving forward," Washington said. "After the talk, I knew that Sierra would be able to come to Penn State and thrive as a student and as an athlete."

Because of the NCAA transfer rule, Moore had to sit out last season. She did practice with the team.

"Redshirting my first year at Penn State helped me see more of a coaching perspective of things while being on the bench," she said "It also gave me a chance to get back to a guard's mentality." Moore has been the only Penn State player to start all 26 games this season. She also leads the team in minutes played (34.0) and is averaging 11.8 points and 5.2 rebounds. She's second on the team in assists (86) and steals (34) and has 12 blocked shots. Moore had a college career-high 18 points in a 76-75 victory over Northwestern and had 17 points, six rebounds and eight assists in an 85-77 loss to Minnesota last Sunday.

"I wasn't sure if Sierra would be a starter but I was pretty confident that she would be a contributor," Washington said. "She was aggressive in practice last year and her athleticism on both ends of the floor stood out daily."

Moore said she's had to make very few adjustments switching from Duke to Penn State.

"It wasn't hard because I felt at home here," she said. "My teammates felt like sisters and my coaches are great role models."

The Nittany Lions have struggled so far this season – a 6-20 overall record and a 3-12 mark in the Big Ten Conference.

"The team has grown over the course of the season," Washington said. "We knew this would be a transition year with us having graduated the bulk of our production and experience the past two years."

Moore is philosophical about the situation.

"It's hard because we are young, but wouldn't it be boring not having to overcome any challenges?" she said. "We have matured a lot and I do believe that we are getting better every game and every practice and that is really exciting to see."

Moore talked about the highs and lows of her season.

"The highlight would have to be finally being able to get on the court and play again," she said. "As far as lows, I can't say that I've had any because my career essentially has just started."

Another one of her highs is seeing her parents in the stands. Her dad Edwin played basketball at Millersville and her mom Jill coached the girls' basketball team at Delone before Sierra joined the program.

"My mom and dad have great basketball knowledge and I try to listen to what they have to say whenever the opportunity presents itself," she said. "They make all my home games and their love for basketball is what started my love for the game, too."

HARRIS TO LEAD LADY LIONS AGAINST MINNESOTA

Web address: http://www.centredaily.com/2015/02/14/4603503 penn-state-womens-basketball-harris.html?rh=1 Publication Date: February 15, 2015 Writer: Walt Moody

Alex Harris had no impact as the season started for Penn State women's basketball team.

The sophomore missed the first 10 games for "personal reasons."

But back on the floor and seeing her minutes increase, the 6-foot-3 forward is making her presence felt.

Entering Sunday's 2 p.m. clash against Minnesota at the Bryce Jordan Center, Harris has been a force on the boards for the Lady Lions (6-19 overall, 3-11 Big Ten).

Harris has been pivotal in two of the Lady Lions' recent league wins. She scored a career-high 11 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in a 76-75 upset of Northwestern and last Sunday she had a careerhigh 13 rebounds and four blocked shots in a 54-50 victory against Purdue.

In limited action this season, Harris is still second on the squad with 6.1 rebounds per game. She averages a rebound for every 21/2 minutes she plays.

"She's a rebounding machine and her athleticism in the post is something that is really positive feature for us," Lady Lion coach Coquese Washington said. "When she comes into the game she always makes an impact on the defensive end and rebounding, allowing us to get out in transition. We need it. We need her defensive prowess, her rebounding."

Harris is under no illusion that she's coming into the game to pile up points.

"We all have our roles," the Lorian, Ohio native said. "They are written down. Co says I am a great rebounder and that's what I do. If I can't score or do anything else, I'm going to make sure I'm going to get the ball and get the rebound."

What makes a great rebounder?

Washington said it is a combination of things, but the most important is the ability to get off the floor quickly.

"She has a good knack and instinct for the ball but her quick jumping is a part of it," Washington said of Harris. "She's often the first person to the ball. If you can be the first person to the ball, you've got a better chance of getting it."

Harris said she's spent time both with Washington and assistant coach Itoro Coleman refining her technique.

"I focused on grabbing the ball with two hands, just going after it," she said.

Harris is happy to be getting significant minutes since she started the season away from the program. She did not play during the first semester and got her first taste of action against South Florida in the final nonconference game.

Harris said she prefers to keep the nature of her absence personal but thinks that the time away was more of a benefit than a hindrance

"It's been a big process, a big learning process for me," she said. "It would have helped if I played, but I don't think it set me back. It gave me some time off. It was much-needed time off. I think it might have helped."

Teammates, who are going through the midst of the worst season in program history, are glad she is back to help.

"She's a huge key to our success," guard Keke Sevillian said. "We all have those roles and we are a puzzle piece to complete that puzzle. Her piece is rebounding. She's a monster on the boards."

Washington said that Harris' return was relatively seamless.

"She's doing a great job," Washington said. "To her credit, she's come in and tried to fit in with what we're doing. We haven't had to adjust what we're doing to fit Alex. She found her role and her place so that she can contribute to what we're doing.

"She's a kid who wants to fit in and be a part of the team," Washington added. "... She's an ultimate team player. Right now, we need her to be a great defender and rebounder and that's what she's putting her focus on."

Harris hopes her play translates into more playing time. After 13 rebounds against Purdue, she grabbed seven more in a 74-67 loss against Michigan State on Wednesday.

"It gives me a lot of confidence," Harris said. "These last couple of games have been really good for me. I'm looking forward to the next couple of games."

Harris will need to be good inside if the Lady Lions are to knock off the Golden Gophers (19-6, 8-5). Intimidating center Amanda Zahui B. had a tripledouble (16 points, 13 rebounds and 12 blocks) as Minnesota knocked off Penn State 75-64 on Jan 28. For the season, the 6-foot-5 sophomore is averaging 17.8 points and 11.5 rebounds per game.

"We've got to do a better job of limiting her effectiveness," said Washington, whose team lost a 12-point second-half lead to the Gophers. "They made a lot of threes (10) against our zone so we have to shore up our rotations in the zone."

BROOKS FINDS A PLACE WITH LADY LIONS

For some people, you know exactly where you're supposed to be and how to get there.

For others, it takes a little bit longer.

Penn State women's basketball player Domingue Brooks is an example of the latter.

In 2012, Brooks, or "Domo" as her teammates affectionately call her, graduated from Thorton Fractional South Senior High School in Lansing, III., with dozens of basketball accolades. She was named to the Northwest Indiana Times Illinois Girls Preseason All-Area twice, an AAU Illinois X-citement player, and a participant in the U18 Team USA trials in 2012. She was the 95th overall basketball recruit in the country and the 11th-ranked post player by ESPN/HoopGurlz.

With teams across the nation vying for the 6-foot-4 post player's attention, she was able to narrow her choices to Mississippi State and Penn State. On National Signing Day, she chose Mississippi State.

But before she even enrolled at the Starkville campus, longtime Bulldogs coach Sharon Fanning retired after 17 years.

In that moment, everything changed for Brooks.

"The coach, she had resigned, and then it was other issues - if I wanted to stay, if I wanted to leave and if I liked it," Brooks said of her feeling at the time. "So I just decided I was going to go to a junior college."

She headed to Trinity Valley Community College in Athens, Texas, a small junior college that had a very respectable women's basketball program.

"I knew going there would help me develop as a person on and off the court," Brooks said.

During her two years at Trinity Valley, she was able to help the team to a 72-1 record with two National Junior College Athletic Association titles. As a post player, she made 51.1 percent of her shots and was named to the Regional XIV Athletic Conference All-Academic Team.

The experience helped her prepare for the next level of basketball.

She got her chance when Lady Lions coach Coquese Washington called.

"When I got the phone call from Coach Washington saying that she wanted me to come back to Penn State, I already knew that was where I wanted to go," Brooks said.

As a longtime Penn State fan, she was ecstatic at another opportunity to play for the Lady Lions.

Her parents also embraced this new opportunity, too.

"They knew that Penn State was the right spot I needed to be," Brooks said. "They didn't hesitate. They knew exactly saying, 'Hey, Dominique this is where you need to go."

Washington likes what she sees from the junior.

"Domo is an extremely hard-working post," Washington said. "She runs the floor hard and scores well in the paint. She attacks the boards with abandon and works to create opportunities for her teammates. Her energy is simply off the charts."

The transition hasn't been completely smooth as Brooks found playing for the three-time defending Big Ten champions more intense than Trinity Valley.

"You've got to go harder. Harder each and every day," Brooks said. "Back in Trinity Valley, I had to go hard, but here they pound you to do it every day, every single day, no matter what."

She admitted to at first being a little bit out of shape with a different training and weight-lifting regimen. She's thankful she had the support of the team. The camaraderie within the team allowed her to communicate and find help. She shares a special bond with senior captain Tori Waldner, who she talks with daily and can always rely on for a quick answer.

Her roommate, junior Candice Agee, also has been there to lend a hand.

Agee says that the two have become friends and notes that Brooks is a great person. Brooks' electric energy transfers onto the court with her defense.

"I've thought of calling her happy feet, because her defense, she just moves and bounces," Agee said. "It's great, I think she brings a lot of intensity, a lot of passion."

Even with a difficul transition, it's clear Brooks has improved since joining the team.

"There's definitely been a change to the first day she's gotten here to now," assistant coach Itoro Coleman said. "She's gotten better. Right now, she's probably the most consistent post player in terms of getting better because there was a lot of things she needed to work on. She's gotten stronger. She's very coachable. She loves to learn and it's just a joy coaching her."

Brooks has seen limited time so far in the first two games of the season.

In Friday's 71-64 win against Towson, Brooks played for a total of three minutes. In her short time, she was fouled when putting up a jump shot and was able to make both free throw attempts. Moments later, she fouled a Towson player when going up for a rebound before going back to the bench. She played two minutes in Sunday's 54-53 loss against Albany.

As a new player, Brooks knows her time may be limited to short bursts.

"Even if I don't get in the game, it's more about supporting the team and what the team needs," she said.

Brooks' long road to Happy Valley detoured through Texas, but she now finds herself happy and is finally at peace knowing that the journey was worth every step.

"I'm glad I made my decision and I'm glad I went through the junior college route, it really helped lead me to Penn State," she said.

WASHINGTON RELISHES SHOT TO HELP OTHERS

Coquese Washington is such a delight, plus she's the rare individual in sports that you just know would be successful at anything she chooses to pursue in life, even if it had nothing to do with athletics.

The Penn State women's basketball coach spoke Friday afternoon to the Bishop Guilfoyle Catholic Marauder Club luncheon, sharing stories about her philosophies for building a winning culture in a college basketball program.

She's an engaging speaker, of course - one doesn't reach that level of the coaching profession without the skill - and Washington's goal to turn the PSU program back into a consistent power has been realized with three straight Big Ten titles.

But listening and talking to Washington, one quickly realizes she's far, far more than just a basketball coach.

She's a role model of the highest degree, and basketball just so happens to be her outlet to help young women.

"For the players on my team, I see myself as a dream maker," Washington said. "My job and what I'm passionate about is finding out what their dreams and what their goals are and making them come true."

What an eloquent answer to a simple question of how the coach sees herself. Go back and read it again, and you'll notice that she's not talking about basketball. She's talking about life.

"We get to use basketball as a vehicle to teach them how to chase their dreams and live the life that they want to live," Washington added.

She recently finished her seventh season at Penn State, taking the Lady Lions to the Sweet 16 for the second time in three years, but to describe Washington merely as a basketball coach is shortchanging her.

She has a law degree from Notre Dame. How many coaches anywhere can boast that?

She's not only a board member of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, she's also vice president/president-elect of that group's executive committee.

This is a born leader who, again, could be a star in any profession. The fact that she's an emerging star in the game of women's basketball is a huge benefit to Penn State, where she also just so happens to be the first black female head coach of a program

Washington relishes all of her leadership positions and values because, collectively, they can help her make real change in people's lives.

"I absolutely embrace the notion that we have to give back and give ourselves to others," Washington said. "So for me, that's what it's about. It's not about stockpiling trophies and all that stuff. Don't get me wrong, those are nice. But that's not the end goal.

"The end goal is to have an impact on people's lives and to inspire people to do more, live more, be more. And I do take that responsibility very seriously."

Washington represents so many things about the modern world, not just the modern world of college athletics. She's a highly successful woman, a highly successful minority, a person of vision, a person who cares greatly about others around her and, one thing that cannot be overlooked, a person of tolerance.

In that last regard, she's exactly what Penn State University needed following how Rene Portland's tenure ended in disgraceful bigotry.

Talking to the BG group Friday, Washington stressed over and over how forming a successful basketball team is as much about having everyone respect each other as individuals and treat each other like family as it is about talent.

"If you have the right kind of culture, the talent will want to be a part of it," she told the crowd.

Things didn't start out well for Washington as Penn State as she went 24-36 her first two seasons. But she knew she had the right plan in place and never lost faith in herself, and she established a warm, welcoming, winning culture that has helped the program return to prominence. But while winning a lot of games is great, that doesn't define Coquese ashington.

This statement she made is a far better indicator.

"It's so gratifying to get the calls or texts from a kid like Maggie Lucas, who says, 'Coach, I'm living my dream."

To a self-described dream maker, that's as good as it gets.
