Penn State enters the weekend seventh in Division I and first in the CHA with 78 goals. RIT vs. PENN STATE

Penn State is 28-18-5 all-time versus RIT. The Tigers went 0-2-2 against the Nittany Lions last season, including a 2-2 tie in University Park. Zanon scored for Penn State, while Aquaro tallied for the Tigers.

GAME CHANGING VOTE

A proposal was passed last January at the NCAA Convention during the Division III Business meeting which will allow RIT to offer scholarships to its Division I men's and women's hockey student-athletes. Multi-divisional intercollegiate athletics programs like RIT, which sponsors 22 Division III teams along with two Division I hockey teams, were previously not allowed to apply all Division I legislation to its Division I teams, including the inability to award athletic grant-in-aid to its players based on a 2004 bylaw. However, with the vote overwhelmingly passing by a 388-18-39 margin, the Tigers will be on the same footing as the rest of its peers across the country with a full 18 scholarships available to each hockey team.

TIGER CUBS

RIT features 16 underclassmen in 2022-23. Sophomore forward Athena Vasdani led all RIT first-years with five goals, eight assists, and 13 points last season. Sophomore forward Kylie Aquaro finished fifth on the team with 11 points (four goals, seven assists), and sophomore defender Kyla Bear finished fifth in the CHA with 64 blocked shots and sixth on the team with 10 points (two goals, six assists). The Tigers welcome six first-year players in goalie Sophia Bellina, defenseman Camryn Brownschidle, forward Ella Fesette, defenseman Hayley Glazer, defenseman Karly Kolssak, and forward Lexi Sung.

TRANSFER-MATION

The Tigers welcome graduate student forward Amy Dobson (Penn State) and junior forward Nicole Ness (St. Cloud State) to the team in 2022-23. Dobson scored 11 goals and 19 assists for the Nittany Lions last season, tying for third in the CHA in power-play goals her junior year. Ness spent two seasons at St. Cloud State University, where she played in 46 games for the Huskies.
