THE CHAMP IS HERE

•Following a win on 2/26 over Tulane and league results, the UTSA women's basketball team has clinched its first conference championship since the 2008-09 season and the fifth regular-season title in program history, with two games remaining on its American Athletic Conference schedule.

•With a win in either of its final contests against Florida Atlantic on Saturday or the following Tuesday at East Carolina, UTSA would cement itself as the outright champion and the No. 1 seed in the 2025 American Women's Basketball Championship.

•Additionally, the 'Runners 15 league wins are tied for the second-most in the UTSA annals, behind the 2002-03 Southland Championship squad that went 17-3.

•Along with the 2002-03 title, the 2008-09 team compiled a 14-2 mark to tie for the top spot in the Southland's West Division.

•UTSA won two championships prior as a member of the Oil Country Athletic Conference, going 8-1 in 1983-84 for an outright crown and tied West Texas A&M for the top spot with a 9-1 ledger in 1984-85.

JOINING THE CLUB

• Via a 24-point 10-rebound double-double against Tulane on 2/26, redshirt senior Jordyn Jenkins has joined UTSA's prestigious 500 rebound club

• Now at 501 rebounds for the Roadrunners, Jenkins becomes the 17th squad member to accomplish the feat and the first since current Director of Operations Elyssa Coleman did so in the 2023-24 season.

•UTSA also has gone 12-0 inside The Convo in the 2024-25 campaign.

CASH IN TRACKER

For the past two seasons, the UTSA women's basketball team has honored their Player of the Game with the prestigious Cash In Chain. This is not always the person who stuffs the stats sheet or is the leading scorer, but the one who had the most impact on the game, be it a double-double or a big momentum-shifting shot. The person who wins the chain dons it until the next game when Director of Basketball Performance Carl Austin III reclaims it before redistributing it to whoever helps the squad

Defense has been a staple of Aston's teams her entire coaching career. Each of her eight teams at Texas ranked in the top-25 nationally in rebounding margin, including three years in the top-five. Her 2017-18 and 2018-19 teams ranked third in the NCAA in rebounding margin. Four of the top-eight single-season team rebounding averages in Texas history came during Aston's tenure, as did five of the top-nine best seasons in field-goal percentage defense.

Aston's prowess as one of the nation's best recruiters is also well known. Five of the classes she recruited to Texas were ranked among the top-11 in the nation according to ESPN.com, including three top-five classes. Recruits Charli Collier and Joyner Holmes were both No. 2 prospects according to ESPN and were listed as the nation's top recruits by some services. Aston brought 14 McDonalds All-Americans to Texas during her eight seasons.

In a season shortened due to COVID-19, the 2019-20 Longhorns posted a 19-11 overall record and finished third in the Big 12 Conference. A season that began with off-season injuries to a number of key contributors featured some impressive accomplishments. Texas defeated three Associated Press Top-25 teams, including knocking off No. 1 Stanford, which marked the program's first win against an AP No. 1 squad since 2004. The Longhorns also won at No. 17 and previously undefeated Tennessee, and earned a road victory against No. 25 TCU. Texas led the nation in double-doubles during the 2019-20 campaign with 31.

Aston mentored Collier, a sophomore center, to First-Team All-Big 12 Conference honors, as she was one of only six players in the league to average a double-double. Collier became the first player in program history to average more than seven defensive rebounds per game in a single season. Freshman guard Celeste Taylor was a Big 12 All-Freshman Team selection and earned three Big 12 Freshman of the Week accolades.

In 2018-19, Aston led Texas to a 23-10 overall record and a third-place showing in the Big 12 Conference with a 12-6 overall mark. The Longhorns advanced to the semifinals of the Big 12 Conference Tournament for the sixth consecutive year. It marked the sixth year in a row that the Longhorns had won 20 or more games.

Under Aston's tutelage, junior point guard Sug Sutton earned First-Team All-Big 12 Conference honors in 2018-19 and was named to the Big 12 All-Tournament Team. She led the Longhorns in scoring [12.7 points per game], assists per game [5.4] and steals per game [1.3]. Sutton scored in double figures 23 times, including four 20-point performances, and her 178 assists on the year marked the seventh-most in a single-season in school history. She was the conference's best all-around point guard as a junior.

In 2017-18, Aston led the Longhorns to a 28-7 overall record and a second-place finish in the Big 12 Conference with a 15-3 overall mark. Texas advanced to the championship game of the Big 12 Conference Tournament for the third time in four years. It marked the fourth year in a row that the Longhorns had won 24 or more games.

For the third time in four seasons, Aston had one of her players selected in the WNBA Draft in 2018. Atkins was chosen with the No. 7 pick by the Washington Mystics, making her the third-highest draft pick in Texas history.

Under Aston's direction, Atkins and fellow senior Brooke McCarty concluded their decorated Texas careers in 2017-18. It marked the end of an impressive four-year span that saw the Longhorns post a 108-32 [.771] overall record, four NCAA Tournament appearances, four NCAA Sweet 16 appearances, one NCAA Elite Eight appearance and three Big 12 Conference second-place finishes. Aston was a semifinalist for the Naismith Coach of the Year award.

Aston was named the Big 12 Conference Coach of the Year in 2016-17, as the Longhorns swept the league's annual honors. McCarty was named the Big 12 Player of the Year, Brianna Taylor was selected as the Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year and Holmes earned Big 12 Freshman of the Year accolades. Aston was one of four finalists nationally for the Naismith Coach of the Year honor.

The Longhorns recorded a 25-9 overall record during the 2016-17 campaign. Texas strung together a 19-game winning streak during the course of the season, which ranks tied for the 10th-longest spree in program history. With a rigorous slate that featured 14 top-25 opponents, the Longhorns recorded seven victories against ranked foes. Texas won 14 consecutive games to start Big 12 Conference play, which marked the best start to the Big 12 schedule in school history. The Longhorns charted a 15-3 record in Big 12 play to finish second in the conference for the second consecutive year.

In 2015-16, Aston led Texas to an historic season. The Longhorns posted a 31-5 overall record, which marked the school's most victories since the 1987-88 season, and tied the school record for most Big 12 Conference wins [15] in a single season. Texas hosted the NCAA First and Second Rounds for the first time since 2010 and advanced to the NCAA Elite Eight for the first time since 2003. The Longhorns opened the year with a 16-0 record, marking the third-best start in program history.

McGee-Stafford, a senior center, was named an honorable mention All-America selection from both the Associated Press and the Women's Basketball Coaches Association in 2015-16, and became the first player in program history to reach the combined milestone of 1,000 career points, 1,000 career rebounds and 200 career blocks. McGee-Stafford was the fourth player in school history to be drafted in the first round of the WNBA Draft, going to the Chicago Sky with the 10th overall pick.

The 2014-15 Longhorns began the season on a 13-game winning streak and capped the year with a run to the NCAA Sweet 16. Texas finished with a 24-11 overall record and advanced to the championship game of the Big 12 Tournament for the first time since 2004. The Longhorns won nine of their last 12 games and posted what were then their most wins in more than a decade. Enemkpali was selected by the Seattle Storm in the third round of the 2015 WNBA Draft.

In 2013-14, Texas began a steady incline that included five wins against ranked opponents, a third-place finish in the Big 12 standings, a 10-win improvement from the previous season, and winning a game in the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2008. UT's tie for third place in the Big 12 was its highest league finish since 2005.

INTRODUCING HEAD COACH KAREN ASTON

Aston returned to the Forty Acres in 2012 after five years of experience reviving the women's basketball programs at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and the University of North Texas.

NINA DE LEON NEGRON FUELING UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S HISTORIC START

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

Relentless.

To capture the essence of Nina De Leon Negron, one need only reference the single, meaningful word tattooed in script on her right arm. She added the ink this past May after committing to the UTSA women's basketball program as a graduate transfer.

"It's to remind me that you can do anything you set your mind to," she said. "It's motivation."

De Leon Negron, a graduate transfer from UIW and the first Puerto Rican-born UTSA women's basketball player, is now the engine that's driving the Roadrunners' historic 7-1 start to the 2024-25 season, the second-best record over the first eight games in program annals. The 5-foot-6 point guard ranks in the top-25 nationally in assist-to-turnover ratio (+2.92) and is providing significant leadership to one of the most talented teams in UTSA history.

"She has some really cool qualities about herself that you don't hardly even see anymore," UTSA's fourth-year head coach Karen Aston said. "She was a wonderful gift – for our program, but also for our players. They understood that we really needed someone like her. They get to be around someone who has super confidence in herself and great leadership skills."

Teammate Jordyn Jenkins, a preseason favorite for the American Athletic Conference Player of the Year honor, believes that De Leon Negron brings the basketball and leadership traits that the team needs to reach its collective goals.

"She's brought a seriousness that we wish we would have had earlier," Jenkins said. "She works really hard and is always in the gym. She is the point guard who is going to assist and facilitate, but she's also going to shoot the three, so she gives opposing defenses a really good challenge."

De Leon Negron grew up in San Juan, the daughter of Angel and Denise, both of whom played collegiate volleyball in Puerto Rico. She was so drawn to basketball at an early age that Angel entered her into a basketball club called Las Vaqueras de Bayamon.

"I kind of got into it because every time I would see a ball, I would try to bounce it and dribble it," De Leon Negron said. "My dad said 'We should take her to a club.'"

De Leon Negron always knew she would play collegiate sports, like her parents, but never envisioned she would have the opportunity to compete at the Division I level in the United States. Added exposure from playing for the Puerto Rican National Team at the Centrobasket U17 Women's Championship – De Leon Negron averaged 15.0 points per game and 5.0 assists per game during that event – ended up changing the course of her athletic career.

She came on the radar of Laura Harper, the coach of Monteverde Academy, a college preparatory school in the greater Orlando area that is well known for its basketball prowess. De Leon Negron was offered an opportunity to attend and compete for the school in her senior year of high school.

"Once I got the call to move to Orlando, I thought, 'If I have the opportunity, why not do it?'" she said. "I have so many Puerto Rican friends that would love to have the opportunity and, since I had it, I thought, why not? At first it was hard and I felt homesick. I just kept saying that I wanted to make my family proud. The sacrifice has been worth it."

It was during the experience at Monteverde that De Leon Negron began considering the possibility of playing high-level basketball in the United States.

"It had never been a dream because I didn't think I could do it," she said. "I was just thinking that I was going to go to a college in Puerto Rico. But once I moved to the United States my senior year, I was like, I think I can achieve that."

De Leon Negron played her first two collegiate seasons at Austin Peay in Clarksville, Tenn. As a sophomore, she led her squad and ranked fourth in the Ohio Valley Conference with 111 assists on the year. De Leon Negron ranked among the top-60 players nationally with a +1.95 assist-to-turnover ratio, and helped lead the Governors to a postseason appearance in the Women's Basketball Invitational.

She arrived in San Antonio in the fall of 2022 as a transfer to the University of the Incarnate Word. In two years there, she totaled 201 assists and charted six 20-plus-point performances. She was the Southland Conference Newcomer of the Year as a junior in 2022-23 and was a First-Team All-Southland Conference selection as a senior last season.

In her first season with the Cardinals, De Leon Negron turned in one of her best collegiate performances against UTSA, scoring 25 points. She made an immediate impression on Aston, who would later recruit her as a graduate transfer.

"She came on our radar because she kicked our tail two years ago," Aston said. "We played against them and she just wore us out. You could really tell how competitive she was. We didn't really have a grasp on her other qualities, but we knew her competitive spirit and we knew that she could contribute in that manner. We also knew she could shoot the 3 and thought it would help us to have another perimeter player that could stretch the floor."

De Leon Negron didn't enter the graduate transfer process with any preconceptions about where she might play next. She knew countryman Jhivvan Jackson, UTSA men's basketball's all-time scoring leader, and he had told De Leon Negron about the school.

She thought her history of success against UTSA might be a barrier to her moving across town to play for the Roadrunners. What she found was quite the opposite; the candor of the UTSA coaching staff was a difference-maker in De Leon Negron's decision-making process.

"I loved the coaches," she said. "Once I got here and saw what the coaches were telling me, it felt like family, it didn't really feel like business. The coaches told me the truth and I knew that they were telling me the truth. I knew that Coach Aston's intentions were real and that's kind of hard to find."

Leadership is perhaps the trait that De Leon Negron has been most counted upon to bring to her new team. Joining a team as a fifth-year player and immediately taking the lead can be a challenge for even the most confident players, but De Leon Negron has handled it with grace.

"It's probably what indicates who she is best of all," Aston said. "That she was able to walk in here and blend so quickly with the group. I think it has just been a tribute to her personality and her skillset as a human being. She understands relationships. She literally came in here with the understanding and the concept of getting to know everybody and who they are, and she didn't force herself or her personality on anybody. She has been accepted by the whole group."

De Leon Negron admits that the situation was somewhat intimidating to enter, but the support of her coaches and, particularly, her teammates has made her transition nearly seamless.

"The first month was a struggle," De Leon Negron said. "I had to prove myself. But I feel like it would have been like that at every single school that I could have gone to. The coaches just gave me that freedom since the moment that I walked in here. Coach would kind of say, 'We brought Nina here because we needed a leader.' The girls allowed me to do that. They started listening and there was never a problem with it."

She perfectly navigated what could have been a challenging relationship with junior Sidney Love, a hometown favorite from nearby Cibolo who was one of Aston's first recruits. Love's commitment to UTSA early in her head coach's tenure provided an early indicator to other top area players that the Roadrunners were taking big strides to become an elite program. Many of the talented student-athletes on UTSA's current roster soon followed with their commitments to the program.

The Roadrunners have relied on Love, who came to the program as a point guard, to start since her freshman season of 2022-23. She had to quickly learn how to be an NCAA Division I floor general from the very beginning of her collegiate career. Love has moved to the shooting guard position with De Leon Negron earning the starting nod at point guard. What could have been an awkward situation has turned into a strong relationship.

"Sidney really had to learn her own way of doing things without having a role model," Aston said. "I had some anxiety about bringing someone else in here with a now-three-year starter, but it has been really fun to see her relationship with Sidney and how they've meshed together. I think that Sid really looks up to her and has shown her a different way to be. And that's super cool."

The bond between De Leon Negron and Love has given the Roadrunners a dynamic backcourt that has been central to their success. Both players rank among the top-60 nationally in assists per game and are both equally threatening to opponents as scorers.

"We go into the film room with coach every single week and we watch point guard film," De Leon Negron said. "Sidney has been starting since she was a freshman so she had to be a leader because she had no other choice. When you're a freshman, that's hard."

From the outside, it also might seem unexpected that De Leon Negron has built a strong relationship with Jenkins, the 2022-23 Conference USA Player of the Year, whose name is synonymous with the program and brings definite star power to the roster after transferring from USC in 2022. It is a tribute to the humility and dedication of both players, as well as their shared goals for the program.

"Nina and I have really good chemistry," Jenkins said. "I feel like a lot of people wouldn't have expected it because she's new. Her love and care for the game allows us to have that chemistry because we're on the same page."

De Leon Negron credits the closeness of her team for helping make her transition that much smoother.

"We hang out a lot outside of basketball," she said. "We're in each other's apartments and we're always talking. Nine times out of 10, we're talking about basketball and the team."

As if destiny and reality are on the same track for De Leon Negron, she is constantly finding indications that things are falling perfectly into place for her.

For the first time in her collegiate career, she had the opportunity to play at home in front of her family when the Roadrunners traveled to San Juan to play in the Puerto Rico Clasico over Thanksgiving.

"Who would have thought?" De Leon Negron wondered aloud. "I don't think I've ever felt a better feeling than what I felt at that first game when I saw my family there. It was amazing; I hadn't felt that in years."

In a pair of wins during her homecoming, De Leon Negron averaged 9.5 points per game, 6.0 assists per game and 5.5 rebounds per game. Her coach was equally delighted for her player to get to experience the moment with family.

"That was one of the coolest experiences I've had as a coach," Aston said. "Mainly because of the fact that it wasn't pre-planned. For that to play out the way that it did, for her to decide to come here and to be able to see her show everybody in our program her surroundings was really cool. You could tell that she was proud to be able to see her family and she got to spend Thanksgiving with them, which she probably hasn't done since she first left home."

Over the years, De Leon Negron has modeled her game after two prominent Puerto Rican basketball players who have played at the highest level – former Dallas Mavericks player and Puerto Rican national team member J.J. Barea and former Atlanta Dream and University of Texas player Carla Cortijo. Cortijo was recruited and mentored by Aston, who was an assistant with the Longhorns at the time.

De Leon Negron's passion for the game of basketball is palpable and she hopes to continue playing professionally once her time at UTSA has concluded.

"If I keep playing how I've been playing, I think that I would really like to [play professionally]," she said. "I know for sure that I would like to play in Puerto Rico but, if I ever get the opportunity to go overseas, I might just go ahead and take it."

De Leon Negron earned her bachelor's degree at UIW, where she was a member of the Dean's List, and is currently pursuing a graduate certificate in health from UTSA's College for Health, Community and Policy.

Regardless of when the ball stops bouncing for De Leon Negron, she never plans to be far from the game. She looks to pursue a career in coaching, a desire that has only been increased since she began playing for Aston.

De Leon Negron has built a strong bond with Associate Head Coach Jamie Carey, who was an All-Big 12 Conference point guard at Texas, where she was recently inducted into the Athletics Hall of Fame, and led the Longhorns to the 2003 NCAA Final Four. Aston, who was an assistant at Texas during Carey's playing days, sees many of Carey's best attributes in De Leon Negron.

"Nina puts everybody before herself and Jamie has that type of personality too," Aston said. "Jamie's a little more serious and Nina can be super bubbly at times. She has really helped our team change its personality because she balances out the seriousness of Jamie and I. I think she's a real benefit in that manner. Her desire to study the game, to pick the brains of the people that she's playing for, and then to get to know her teammates and what they need from her is very similar to Jamie. Those are all the point guard qualities that you're looking for."

Carey has become a pivotal mentor for De Leon Negron, guiding her to pursue her passion as both a point guard and, in the future, as a coach.

"Coach Jamie and I have had so many conversations about basketball and, every time, she's like, 'You need to be a coach.'" De Leon Negron said. "She helps me a lot. I feel like we see the game the same way."

For now, De Leon Negron is focused on helping the Roadrunners be the best team they can be on a daily basis. She won't allow herself to get caught up in the statistics or the accolades or the wins. She embraces the process of being great.

"We've been working so hard and Coach keeps talking about stacking wins," De Leon Negron said. "Even when we win, we don't see it as we've won so many in a row, we just see it as another game. It's just another step to reaching the goal. We can't get too high or too low, we need to keep it neutral. That's how I see it. That's what championship teams do."

And while she's careful not to look too far ahead, De Leon Negron believes that this UTSA team has the potential to be one of the best in program history.

"We have a really talented team," she said. "Everyone is talented in their own way. I say we can get to wherever we set our mind to. I really believe it."

FOCUSED ON FAMILY: UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S IDARA UDO

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – Family has always been the most important thing in Idara Udo's life.

A native of Plano, Texas, Udo is a first-generation American as her parents Ituru Inim and Efrung Udo immigrated from Nigeria in their late 20s. She takes great pride in both her Nigerian heritage and in the opportunities afforded to her.

"The chance to represent my parents and represent the sacrifices they made for me is something that I'll forever hold close to my heart," Udo said. "All in all, I just want to make them proud and take advantage of the opportunities that they didn't have growing up."

Udo's UTSA family is equally as important to her and was the main reason she chose to join the Roadrunners.

"I think if you ask everybody on our team why they came here, it would just be the feeling," she said. "It's a feeling of trust within the coaching staff and within Coach Aston. You know you're going to be taken care of when you come here. You know that Coach has faith in you and, if you work hard, she's going to reward the hard work."

* * * * *

Basketball, to Udo, has always been something she has done for fun, even as she has established herself as one of the top post players in the American Athletic Conference.

Growing up in Plano, Udo's mother was looking for activities for Idara and her sister, Sema, to participate in. For Udo, now 6-foot-1, basketball just made sense.

"My mom put my little sister in gymnastics, but gymnastics was just not for me the way I was built, so she decided to put me in basketball. She signed me up for a rec league and that's how I started playing."

Udo excelled both in academics and basketball as a prep player at Plano East Senior High, a program rich in girls basketball tradition. She helped lead her team to two district championships and was a First-Team All-District selection each of her last three years, and was an Academic All-District honoree. Udo scored more than 1,000 career points for the Panthers and was the District Defensive Player of the Year in her sophomore and senior campaigns.

By a turn of fate, Udo came on Karen Aston's radar early. Aston, who had been hired as UTSA's head coach in April 2021, was recruiting another player at Plano East, when Udo caught her eye.

"I saw Idara a year younger than what we would usually target someone, but I just thought that she had a lot of potential at the time I saw her and I thought she would fit our style," Aston said. "That's what you look for – someone who is not going to have a dramatic transition in style of play. And then you take it from there and you work on development."

Udo possesses two of the most important qualities that Aston – who has, for decades, been known as one of the nation's top recruiters – looks for in a prospective student-athlete. Most importantly for any player, she has what Aston terms a "high motor," an intangible inner drive that she can spot as soon as she sees it. Udo also came from a winning high school program, an experience that teaches a player the importance of collective team success, not just individual accolades.

"You look at Idara, she's smart and she has a high motor," Aston said. "Sometimes kids at her position don't get to move in a lot of space and, when they come out of high school, they have to figure out how to rev their motor up. She already came with that. She played in a high school program that's very used to winning. It's a big key for me to bring in kids who are used to winning and have that cultural mindset."

Playing college basketball wasn't something that Udo had ever really considered until she started to get looks from Division I programs, especially UTSA. She wasn't caught up in the recruiting process as some players can be. She's always just been a player who loves basketball.

"I didn't really feel like that was an attainable possibility," Udo said. "I had no idea probably up until the summer of my junior year when I started getting offers. Up until that point, I was playing basketball for fun just to have something to do and just because I was kind of good at it."

* * * * *

It didn't take long upon her arrival at UTSA for Udo to make an impact on her team. By the third game of her collegiate career, she had cracked the starting lineup and finished her rookie campaign with 22 starts, averaging 7.4 points per game, 5.9 rebounds per game and 25 total blocked shots.

Playing in the post alongside former standout and current Director of Basketball Operations Elyssa Coleman gave Udo a crash in being successful at the collegiate level.

"She had a lot of responsibility last year because Jordyn [Jenkins] was out, so it escalated her growth," Aston said. "She had a wonderful experience playing with Elyssa and I think it helped her grow."

Much like the opportunity to play college basketball was unexpected for Udo, so too was the big role that she played on her team as a freshman. What wasn't a surprise was that she immediately stepped up to the challenge.

"I had no idea that my freshman year was going to go the way it did or that I was going to have such an impact for my team," she said. "I put in a lot of work in the gym. Our coaching staff had a lot of faith in me and I had faith in myself. As I trusted in my work, I gained confidence."

One of the most memorable moments of the 2023-24 season for Udo, and for the team, came last January at the Convocation Center in a game against American Athletic Conference-leading Charlotte.

Udo missed a turn-around jumper at the end of regulation that would have given the Roadrunners the win. In the first overtime, she hit two clutch free throws with nine seconds left to seemingly clinch the victory, but the 49ers hit a buzzer-beating shot to tie the game. With 1.8 seconds remaining in double overtime, Udo connected on a put-back to secure the 81-80 win for UTSA. She raced over to the sideline and lifted Aston in the air in celebration. Udo finished that game with 26 points, nine rebounds and three blocks.

"To this day, that is probably my favorite moment at UTSA," Udo said. "It was just crazy, especially as a freshman. I had a really good game and then I had two other opportunities to win the game before that, so it was just a special moment to be able to seal the win. I picked Coach up and all my teammates jumped on me. We deserved to win that game and I feel like I helped us do that."

Udo's impressive rookie season drew national attention and, in the current landscape of college athletics, she could have sought opportunities to play for other programs. But Udo's roots are cemented in San Antonio with the Roadrunners.

"Even though I may have had the opportunity, it never really crossed my mind," she said. "I love it here. I love our coaching staff. I think we have a really elite coaching staff and a really elite team. I love San Antonio. Coach and the coaching staff have done nothing but put their trust in me, so I'm just here to make them proud."

* * * * *

If her first year and a half as a college basketball player are any indication, Udo has a long future ahead of her in the game. But when the ball stops bouncing, it should come as no surprise that she aspires to work in a career field focused on helping others.

Udo is majoring in medical humanities within the College of Liberal and Fine Arts. She long considered a career in nursing, but is since exploring the possibility of pursuing a career in sports medicine.

"Since I've been part of college athletics, I've been really interested in sports medicine and it's been crossing my mind a lot," she said. "I definitely still want to be in the medical field, but if possible, I want to do something like sports medicine or sports physical therapy, maybe helping rehab injured athletes."

As long as she can remember, Udo has been focused on the medical field, inspired by her mother's lengthy career as a nurse.

"I've never really been interested in anything else," Udo said. "I always watched the medical shows. My mom's been a nurse for over 20 years, so that's another big factor that influences me. It's just something that I feel like I've been called to do. I feel like I was meant to be in the medical field. I really love basketball, so if I can combine working in the medical field along with sports, that would be really fun for me."

* * * * *

Udo considers every member of the UTSA women's basketball program to be her family. But that will take on even more meaning next season when her younger sister, Sema, joins the team.

"Honestly, it's a dream come true," Udo said. "I'm extremely excited to have my little sister with me, especially going through college basketball. There are going to be a lot of ups and downs for her coming into college and I'm just glad I can be here with her and kind of guide her since I have a head start on the process."

Sema Udo has been a two-time First-Team All-District selection at Plano East Senior High and has been named her team's Most Valuable Player each of the last two seasons. Aston is looking forward to having both Udo sisters take the court for her team next year.

"I'm super excited about that," Aston said. "I kind of see the same things in Sema that I saw in Idara. They both have fun-loving personalities and they're competitive. Sema is a different type of player. She's more of a three or four as she's built. Obviously, it will be a learning curve for her to get to the level that we play at, but I'm excited about her future."

For Idara Udo, it's not just the addition of a sibling on her team, but a chance to welcome her closest friend to the program she loves so much.

"My whole life, she's just been my best friend," Idara Udo said. "Through thick and then, through everything we've been through, she's my favorite person. I'm just excited that I get to play college basketball with my favorite person."

* * * * *

Thirteen games into the 2024-25 season, Udo has helped lead the charge in what the Roadrunners will be a historic campaign. She has started all 13 contests, averaging 7.2 points per game and 5.8 rebounds per game. Udo has scored in double figures on four occasions this year and continues to work hard to expand her game.

"I feel like I've gained versatility from last season to this season," she said. "I think I'm taking more outside shots and I've attempted a few threes this year, as well. I think I've improved on my defense in terms of my defensive IQ. I'm more comfortable doing more stuff besides just being a low post."

While Aston is pleased by Udo's continual development and commitment, she still sees much more potential in her standout sophomore.

"She's pretty serious about what she does," Aston said. "She's one of those who takes prep seriously and takes the scout seriously. That's kind of unique for a kid her age. Normally, it's probably another year from now before they really understand game plans and all of that. But I still think her ceiling is super high. She's got a lot more that she'll get from being in the gym on a daily basis."

Just like her teammates, Udo isn't motivated by individual accomplishments. She's focused on helping her UTSA team reach new heights.

"I think that our team has endless possibility and endless potential," Udo said. "I think this year's team has a different mindset – a hungry mindset with unfinished business. Even though our program made history last year, we knew we could have gone further.

"I'm really excited to see how far we go this year because I know that everybody on our team has put in the work and I think we're going to get rewarded for the work that we've put in. That's our mindset this year – yes, we know we can go far, but let's do more."

Udo has been on the forefront of pushing UTSA to its historic start. With Wednesday's win against Charlotte, this year's Roadrunners have now matched the best start in school history with the 1985-86 team. Countless milestones have already been achieved with more to come.

"It's kind of hard to wrap your mind around it," Udo said. "I think it's incredible. I didn't really know much about UTSA's history when I came here, but it was very evident to me when I first started playing that we were going to have the opportunity to make history. It's special to put work in and grow a program and make a program proud, because that's something no one can take away from you. It's something you'll be a part of for the rest of your life."

Through the lens with which Udo views every aspect of her life, she believes that the biggest key to the Roadrunners' record-breaking success will be their family-like bond.

"Family, to me, is everything," Udo said. "Not only blood family, but the family I've created coming to UTSA, on and off the court. Our team is a big family and my teammates are like sisters. That reflects on the court. Our chemistry that we've built throughout these years shows on the court. Family is the way to everything. I just love all my family – my UTSA family and my family at home."

DEFENSIVE DOG: UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S MAYA LINTON

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – Two defining moments have made Maya Linton the basketball player that she is today.

The first took place during the summer before her senior year of high school. It was a time in her life that UTSA's junior guard from Duncanville, Texas, will never forget.

"All we did was defensive drills, defensive drills, defensive drills," Linton said. "It put it in my mind that you've got to be a dog on defense. I just had fun with it – all the nitty gritty. That's where I got it from."

Linton came from a storied girls basketball program at Duncanville High School, which has won 12 state titles in its illustrious history. She was familiar with Pantherette greats Tiffany Jackson, Empress Davenport and Ariel Atkins, all of whom played for UTSA head coach Karen Aston at the University of Texas. Atkins, who was the seventh overall pick in the 2018 WNBA Draft, has been a five-time WNBA All-Defensive Team member with the Washington Mystics. It was part of what drew Linton to UTSA.

"I always heard that [Aston] loves the dogs," Linton said. "You have to do all the dirty work and be able to run through a brick wall. If that's my role on the team, I'm going to do it to the best of my ability."

As a high school player, Linton possessed all of the intangible qualities that Aston looks for in prospective student-athletes.

"I look for players that have a high motor, I'm not necessarily looking for the most skilled players in the world," Aston said. "I think we have great coaches who are more than willing to get in the gym with players and help them improve in the areas they need to, but you can't teach motor. You can't teach competitive spirit. And you can't teach a winning attitude. Maya has the tools. She's really putting a lot of time in, but I think she's also embracing what her special gifts are."

* * * * *

Growing up in Fort Worth, Texas, Linton first hit the hardwood in third grade, but there was another sport that had her heart even before she started kindergarten.

"My first love was football," Linton said. "I played football when I was little – flag football and tackle football. That's probably why I'm so aggressive, because I really got it from football."

She played football through the fourth grade, but Linton was also game for any sport that came her way, including volleyball and track & field. There was a common theme that crossed all of the sports she played in her youth.

"Just being coachable," Linton said. "I've been through all of these sports and there are different techniques. The whole time, the thing you have to be is coachable and you have to be motivated."

* * * * *

The second defining moment in Linton's basketball career came this past fall and it was a result of that willingness to be coachable.

Linton approached Jamie Carey, UTSA's associate head coach who was the starting point guard on Texas' 2003 NCAA Final Four team and played four seasons in the WNBA, asking for help to become a better player.

"I came up to her one day and I was like, 'Coach, you've got to make me into a guard.'"

Carey agreed to put in extra work with Linton, but insisted on a strong commitment from her pupil.

"I said, 'Yeah, we can work out. But here's the deal – it's every day," Carey said. "I told her, 'It's time to get committed to being a guard. You can't do it every once and a while.'"

Since that time, Carey has put Linton through a one-on-one workout nearly every day at 7:15 a.m.

"She gets up in the morning and works," Carey said. "Our relationship has grown a ton this year. I think any time you show up for each other at 7 o'clock in the morning, whether it's been good or bad, you learn a lot about each other. We've grown to trust each other and share a little bit more about our lives. To be honest, that's why I coach - to form relationships like that. I'm really proud of her and the progress that she's made."

Linton's growth can be matched only by her unselfishness. She's often tasked with guarding the opposing team's best player and charged with focusing primarily on defense. They're assignments that, even when executed well, don't often appear on Linton's individual stat line.

"I take it personally that Coach trusts me to guard this person," she said. "It's my job to stop them from scoring. Coach thinks I can do this and I'm going to do it."

And while the numbers may not show up next to Linton's name, Carey believes there are numerous ways that Linton's stifling defensive presence contributes to UTSA's collective success.

"What Maya does is that she impacts the entire stat sheet," Carey said. "She does a lot of gritty work that you have to have somebody on your team who is willing to do that. She's a ball magnet with the amount of plays she impacts, the amount of deflections she has and the number of times she gets her hands on the basketball. Those are game-changing plays. I think those hustle plays that she has given us are really, really critical in combination with the other skill sets that we have on the floor."

Just how important is it for the Roadrunners to have a player like Linton?

"I think every team you look at from a championship perspective, there is one," Carey said. "There's somebody who is okay if they don't score 20 points, but they shut down the other team's best player, they're physical and gritty, and they're willing to make plays on the ground."

Carey points to Bruce Bowen's role on three NBA Championship teams for the San Antonio Spurs and her former teammates Tai Dillard and Annissa Hastings on Texas' 2003 Big 12 Conference Championship team as examples of the importance of Linton's contributions.

"That's what Maya has committed to and it's changed her game," Carey said.

Linton's teammates have taken notice of her evolution since last season.

"Maya has been the pesky, up-in-your-grill defender since she was a freshman, but she's grown so much this past year," said Jordyn Jenkins, an early favorite for the American Athletic Conference Player of the Year accolade. "To be a starter and to be guarding the best player on the opposing team, we knew she was a defender, but it goes unnoticed sometimes. I'm grateful for Maya."

In many ways, Linton's penchant for defense is a throwback to an earlier era of basketball, but it also gives the Roadrunners an edge against their opponents.

"It's hard to find nowadays because everybody looks at social media and who scored the most points," Aston said. "But I don't think you can have a successful team for the long haul and have a chance to do special things if you don't have one or two players who are willing to give up their focus offensively to focus on a defensive game plan and embrace themselves as a defensive stopper. I can think of championship teams I've been a part of and every one of them had someone who was like, 'give me whoever they've got.'"

* * * * *

Faith plays a central role in Linton's life. To find peace within her busy schedule as a student-athlete, Linton regularly reads the Bible, along with a wide variety of other books, just before bedtime to quiet her mind.

Her decision to come to UTSA also involved a leap of faith. At the time, the Roadrunners had not had much recent success in women's basketball and won seven games in Aston's first season as head coach. Linton believed in Aston's vision for the future and was eager to be a part of it.

"It was definitely the coaches," Linton said. "Right when I met them all, even talking to them on the phone, I could just tell that they're really bought in, they know what I can do and they believe in me. I knew they could help me throughout the process of my four years here. With them, I could see that I could get better and better. It was just how they spoke about it."

Since arriving in the fall of 2022, Linton has been an important part of the ascent of the UTSA women's basketball program. The building process is something she has found particularly fulfilling.

"It's such a blessing, especially for the juniors here, because we've been able to see it all get built from the ground up," she said. "To be able to be a part of that, especially with an amazing group of coaches and girls, it's unbeatable for sure."

Despite last season's 18 wins, which included a trip to the Women's National Invitation Tournament and the first postseason victory in school history, Linton and the Roadrunners finished the year unfulfilled. UTSA let a game against East Carolina in the semifinals of the American Athletic Conference Tournament slip away and the 55-54 loss prevented the Roadrunners from having an opportunity to play for the league tournament title and advance to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2009.

"We can still feel the loss last year; it just hurt," Linton said. "We never want to feel that again. I think that drives our hunger to win and to want to make it to the NCAA Tournament. Yes, we did postseason, but we've already been there, so now we're trying to get even further."

* * * * *

The energy that Linton brings to all aspects of her life is contagious, but also antithetical depending on the setting. It's practically impossible to spend any time with Linton away from the court and not see her flash her trademark smile. It's equally difficult to spot a moment on the court when she's not serious about the task at hand.

"I would say I've always been a positive person off the court," Linton said. "It's kind of funny because people are like, you don't seem like you play like that. Off the court, I try to be a positive, great teammate and a good person. On the court, it's game time; you've got to be a dog."

Just as Linton is able to compartmentalize her game and not worry about contributing to an offensive highlight feed, so too is she able to focus on being a model teammate in those times when she's not playing her best.

"Even if you're not having a good game, you have to be positive and you have to be cheering," Linton said. "It's so important to lift other people up so they can step up and have the game that you're not having. I think that's something you always need to remember. It's not about you; it's a team sport. Even if you're not doing something on the court, you can always do something positive off the court with your attitude."

Linton's passion for lifting others up will translate well into her future career plans. She's a psychology major in UTSA's College for Health, Community and Policy, and aspires to one day work with kids in some capacity.

"I have two nieces and a nephew and, ever since they were born, I just fell in love with them," Linton said. "I've always wanted to work with kids."

* * * * *

There's a different feel to this year's UTSA women's basketball team and it's palpable. Linton sums it up in one word – poised.

"This year's team, especially when we get in crunch time, we just think 'stay poised, stay poised,'" she said. "In previous years, we would have sped up or freaked out. This year, we've got it. We're comfortable with each other on the court, off the court and we know each other's tendencies. We know if you're there, I'm here. We're just comfortable and it's helped us win a lot of games for sure."

Linton's poise shined through particularly bright in the team's win at Tulsa on Jan. 4. Her assignment that day was to guard Delanie Crawford, who entered the game as The American's leading scorer at 19 points per game. The Roadrunners led by just three points with 4:04 remaining. Linton's defensive prowess was on full display, holding Crawford to just 10 points, and helping UTSA earn the win.

"I thought she was the difference in the game, no question about it," Aston said. "Delanie is a wonderfully gifted offensive basketball player and Maya committed to not being concerned about anything other than making it difficult to get her shots off. It was a collective effort, but I think Maya set the tone for us defensively."

Rather than be overwhelmed by the task of guarding one of the league's best offensive players, Linton welcomed the challenge.

"Before the game, Coach told me, 'Your job today is shut down,'" Linton said. "I was like, okay, I've got you. It's a mindset. If my shots aren't falling, it can't affect me on the defensive end and that helped my performance for sure. That was my job for the game."

Early in her collegiate career, Linton was a player who had the tendency to overthink. She was hard on herself, Aston said, and, at times, expected things to come to her too fast. This season, Linton has been able to live in the moment.

"It's one play at a time and you move on to the next play," she said. "You mess up? Okay, erase it, next play. It doesn't matter. Personally, that's what has helped me so much. If you want to win the game, you're going to make mistakes, you just have to move on from it. More importantly, it's about living in the moment, going play to play and having fun."

Through 16 games this season, Linton and the Roadrunners have been having a lot of fun. They're 14-2 overall and sit atop the AAC standings with a 5-0 league mark. But they also know this is just the beginning.

"We are nowhere close to hitting our potential," Linton said. "We're not even scratching the surface yet."

PLAYERS LEADING UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S HISTORIC START

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – The most successful teams in sports history share one important trait: they are all led primarily by their players rather than by their coaches. The motivation comes from within those on the court instead of being driven from the sideline.

The UTSA women's basketball team took another step forward in its impressive 2024-25 season on Saturday with a 69-51 win against Wichita State in the Convocation Center. The Roadrunners improved to 14-2 overall and 5-0 in the American Athletic Conference, extending their home winning streak to 10 games – the second-longest home win streak in program history.

UTSA, which led by 18 points at halftime and was up by 22 points midway through the third quarter, saw its advantage trimmed to nine points (46-37) at the start of the fourth quarter. The Roadrunners ran off 15 consecutive points to open the final frame and seal the victory.

"The good thing about this group is they're pretty good about self-checking in timeouts," UTSA head coach Karen Aston said. "It's not like we have to say a lot. I think our team understands when we need to reset and when we need to refocus. We can give them some things to adjust, but they talk a lot amongst themselves before we even get in the timeout, which is good. They're starting to recognize when they're not doing things well and when they need to make some changes."

Throughout the season, Aston has continually seen growth in the team's ownership and dedication to improvement.

"It speaks to the commitment that they've got right now to fix things, be better themselves and not feel like we have to fix everything for them," she said. "That's been a process this year, but it's so much better than it was a month ago. I think it will continue to get better."

UTSA's standout post player Jordyn Jenkins credits the addition of graduate transfer point guard Nina De Leon Negron and the maturity of junior guard Sidney Love for the team's internal drive.

"We have a lot more leadership than we've had in the past," Jenkins said. "Nina really takes charge of the huddles along with Sid. We are looking at coach to see what we need to run and everything, but it's been our point guards leading us. Those huddles really make us play and lock in."

The player-led approach was on full display during the Roadrunners' 15-0 run in the fourth quarter. As she was for most of the day, Jenkins was double-teamed with the ball on the low block. She executed a behind-the-back pass around her defenders to sophomore post player Idara Udo. Under stifling defensive pressure, Udo struggled to control the basketball, flying out of bounds to save the possession. Udo flipped the ball to De Leon Negron at the top of the key, who drained a three-pointer.

"I pulled a Nina on Nina," Udo joked, alluding to De Leon Negron's trademark court vision. "Jordy saw me and recognized we were getting doubled. She tried to pass it to me, but Wichita State made some adjustments, so I kind of fumbled the ball. I just tried to save it and I saw Nina in my peripheral vision and she just caught it."

For Aston, the play epitomized the evolution that she has seen in her team's self-leadership.

"We make progress every day," Aston said. "It's definitely fun for a coach when you start to see players connect without having to do it as a coach."

"Growth Steps"

In her fourth season leading the UTSA women's basketball program, Aston looks for many indicators of the program's growth in addition to the team's results in the win-loss column. Signs of increased interest in the Roadrunners are abound.

Attendance at the team's annual preseason potluck has grown exponentially since Aston's arrival prior to the 2021-22 season. Saturday was the team's Alumni Day, welcoming back players from throughout the history of the program and celebrating them with a halftime on-court recognition. Support from program alumni has continued to increase over the last several years.

"To someone on the outside, that might not look like it was a big deal," Aston said. "The amount of people that were on the court today is a big deal compared to two years ago. Alumni are a really important part of who you are when you're trying to build a program. They're proud to come back and watch their team play. That's just another small dose of growth steps and the progress we've made with this program."

Attendance at UTSA games has increased each year of Aston's tenure and Saturday's game included a special dignitary sitting courtside across from the Roadrunners' bench – Becky Hammon, head coach of the Las Vegas Aces, a six-time WNBA All-Star who played for the San Antonio Stars from 2007-14 and a former longtime assistant coach for the San Antonio Spurs.

"She has a really unique place in San Antonio history as far as basketball is concerned," Aston said. "I wanted to try to get her out here and it's important for our players to see her be willing to step outside of her busy schedule and support women's basketball in our community."

Hammon spoke to the Roadrunners in the locker room following the game. It was particularly inspiring to Jenkins, who hopes to become the first UTSA player ever to be selected in the WNBA Draft.

"We had a little chat postgame and she gave us some great advice," Jenkins said. "She talked to us a little bit about her players, which was really cool. She was just telling us how to be better players and what it's like to possibly be at the next level."

CONFIDENT CHEYENNE ROWE BRINGS CHAMPIONSHIP EXPERIENCE TO UTSA'S HISTORIC RUN

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – When the second season of one of young Cheyenne Rowe's favorite anime wasn't available in English, she came up with a simple solution. She would learn Japanese on her own.

"I decided to teach myself Japanese so I could finish watching it," Rowe said. "The manga where the anime came from wasn't translated to English either. I would say I was in grade four."

There may be no better story that captures the essence of Rowe, UTSA's 6-foot-2 forward from Ajax, Ontario. A cerebral hard-worker with a perfectionistic streak who embraces the opportunity to do whatever is asked of her on the court, in the classroom and for her teammates.

What's Rowe's biggest focus in games? It's not taking the most shots or garnering the spotlight.

"Productivity," she said. "I may not score the most points, but I will get on the floor, I will get a rebound and I'll play defense."

Rowe, who joined the Roadrunners last season as a transfer from James Madison, has been an important contributor for UTSA, which is in the midst of a historic season at 17-2 overall and 8-0 in the American Athletic Conference.

* * * * *

Rowe has been to the destination that the Roadrunners are targeting. Playing for the Dukes as a freshman in 2022-23, she helped her team chart a 26-8 overall record, and claim a Sun Belt Conference Tournament Championship and an NCAA Tournament berth. She has used her experience to help her teammates visualize what reaching their end goal would look like.

"I always ask those questions of our team: Who's won a championship? What did it feel like? And what experience did you have?" UTSA head coach Karen Aston said. "I've asked them who has held up a trophy and who has cut down a net? It's very, very helpful for them to share their wisdom and experience. Cheyenne is definitely one of those who can spread that."

As grateful as Rowe is for the experiences she had at James Madison, the opportunity to win a championship and advance to the NCAA Tournament while at UTSA would be that much more satisfying.

"I want a ring on this team so badly. Oh, I want it so bad," Rowe said. "There's something different about the NCAA Tournament and being on a winning team is just something else. You have to put something more into every single day and that's what I learned from it. Being on this winning team with my new-found family, putting in something more every day is amazing."

What initially brought Rowe to San Antonio to play for the Roadrunners was her search for a home. She was seeking a place where her role would be defined and her possibilities endless. It didn't take long before Rowe found what she was looking for.

"When the coaches reached out to me, they were very kind," Rowe said. "They made it seem like a family and, when I got here, it was. There was nothing that was hidden. Everything was at face value and that's really what I care about. That's definitely what drew me here."

The family atmosphere has only grown since Rowe's arrival and the team's common mission, she believes, has been a driving force behind the team's success.

"It's a found family," she said. "Everyone is great. I love being on this team; we all want the same thing. We all work for it. We'll even get on the ground in practice and that is something I really admire about this team."

Aston initially recruited Rowe to fill a personnel need on her team entering the 2023-24 season, knowing that she had the potential to fit the team's style of play. In Rowe, Aston got much more than just a role player.

"When you're looking at film on people in the portal, you try to look at who you potentially see in your system," Aston said. "She had some qualities as far as post play that fit the way we play. We did know a coach in Canada who was able to give us some feedback and it was very positive. We received glowing reports on her character and her academics. I loved what Cheyenne's vision was for her own self. I knew that she had something really special in her."

* * * * *

Family has always been one of the central themes in Rowe's life.

Her parents Waine and Hilary both had played basketball and encouraged their daughter, who first got into sports as a soccer player, to try basketball when she was in the sixth grade. As she began to develop a proficiency in the sport, her parents pushed her to take it seriously.

"My father would take me out and tell me to shoot baskets before I could play video games inside," Rowe said. "My father has been a big part of my basketball career. And then my mother was always there on the sidelines, supporting me and driving me around everywhere."

Rowe said the possibility of becoming a collegiate basketball player in the United States first entered her mind as a high school freshman at Bill Crothers Secondary School. As she prepared for the next level, Rowe gained valuable experience playing for Team Ontario beginning at age 14. She was named a First-Team All-Star at the U17 Canadian National Championships in 2019.

Rowe was selected for Team Canada's U18 National Team that competed at the 2022 FIBA Women's Americas Championship, helping her country to the silver medal. It was an opportunity that she believes, to this day, benefits her as a member of the UTSA squad.

"It was really cool seeing different styles of play by the different teams internationally," Rowe said. "I think I was able to take a piece of that from every single team and bring it to my game. Also, the experience of defending all these different play styles helps me now with learning how to defend each player that I face."

Her parents have been there for her every step of the way as she's navigated each level of basketball.

"They're definitely a different set of eyes," Rowe said. "Knowing me and knowing how I'm more of a perfectionist, they'll be like, 'Okay, you did this, you can look at doing this better.' And we bounce ideas back and forth of how I need to improve."

And it's not just basketball that runs in the Rowe family. Her father, Waine, shared with her a love of reading.

"We were at a bookstore one time and he picked up a book and said, 'I think you would like this,'" Rowe said. "It was Throne of Glass by Sarah J. Maas. And I loved it. I love fantasy, horror, science fiction, mystery and all of those things. I read every day."

Rowe's penchant for reading is well known by her teammates. In fact, for Rowe – who lists The Perks of Being a Wallflower as her favorite book – UTSA's team trips provide one of the most productive reading opportunities.

"I will take one to three books with me on every trip," Rowe said. "If I bring three books with me, I'll finish at least two."

* * * * *

For a student-athlete who seemingly possesses all the tangible and intangible qualities for success, Rowe – until recently – was missing one major component: confidence.

In her first season with the Roadrunners, Rowe appeared in 30 games, averaging 2.3 points per game and 2.4 rebounds per game. Both Rowe and her coaches believe that her biggest area of growth entering the 2024-25 campaign has been the development of confidence.

"She wasn't very confident when she got here," Aston said. "To me, an essential part of why she's so much better is that we were able to show her what needed to be done to improve. We gave her the tools and she was the one who did the work. Confidence comes from work; it's hard to get around that."

As a highly intellectual individual, Rowe benefited from seeing data that supported her performance, good or bad. During the offseason, Aston and her staff keep track of a number of statistics and maintain a leaderboard of which players are making the most shots and what their shooting percentages look like. This past summer, Rowe took more shots than any of her UTSA teammates.

"Numbers make a big difference to her," Aston said. "Every week, we gave them an update on who is shooting the best and who is getting the most shots up. As cerebral as she is, that really resonated with her. She was able to equate that she wasn't going to get any better if she didn't do the work. She was able to gain confidence through her work. Slowly but surely, she is seeing the rewards through the analytical side."

Rowe credits her coaches for their individualized approach and finding a way to help her break through her confidence block. On the court this season, she has felt the impact of increased self-assurance.

"I'm a very logical person and I like stats, so my coaches would show me the stats and say, 'Hey, look at this. You're being productive. Be confident in yourself,'" Rowe said. "Now I'm looking to the basket and I'm actually making passes that I didn't think I would be able to make before. I'm more willing to do more things now."

Rowe's development, Aston says, is a result of her receptiveness to the feedback the coaching staff provided and her commitment to following the process they detailed for her. This season, Rowe has played in each of her team's 19 games, is averaging 14 minutes per game and has elevated both her scoring average (5.3 ppg) and rebounding average (3.4 rpg) from a year ago.

"She was able to take those ideas that we gave her and she ran with it," Aston said. "She took it extremely serious and was in the gym nonstop. She is a lot responsible for her own improvement."

* * * * *

Born with a natural inquisitiveness, Rowe is constantly learning but brushes off the notion that she loves being studious. She says she is driven more by the perfectionistic desire of "getting As" than she is drawn to the classroom.

Rowe is majoring in psychology and minoring in Japanese. She has read extensively about Japanese culture since first learning the language and has immersed herself in the culture as much as one can while living in America.

"I can cook any of the foods," said Rowe, who lists her favorite Japanese food as Tonkotsu Ramen. "If I was lost in Japan, I would say that I could find my way around."

Watching Criminal Minds, the CBS series about criminal profilers who work for the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Behavioral Analysis Unit, while growing up, Rowe was immediately drawn to the field of psychology and knew right away what path she would take following her playing career.

"Oh, that's a job?!" Rowe said recalling her initial reaction to watching Criminal Minds. "I thought, 'That's cool, I like that.'"

She plans a career as a psychologist and says her "big, big dream" is to be a psychologist for NASA.

"At first, I started with an interest in forensics and crimes and then branched out and realized that there's so much more to psychology," Rowe said.

* * * * *

In the midst of her second year at UTSA, Rowe has found the home she sought when she first transferred to the Roadrunners. In every sense of the word, it feels to her like a family, including her relationship with Aston.

"Every once in a while, I'll just pop in her office and steal some of her snacks, so I think it's a pretty comfortable relationship that we have," Rowe said with a laugh.

Just like all of her teammates, Rowe has only the ultimate goal in mind. The Roadrunners are focused on winning an American Athletic Conference Championship and advancing to the NCAA Tournament. To this day, she still viscerally feels the emotions associated with UTSA's narrow loss to East Carolina in last season's AAC Tournament semifinals.

"I'm still mad about it," Rowe said. "That's the biggest fire I have in me. That's how much I want it."

With each game, UTSA seemingly hits a new milestone or breaks a years-old record. Still, Rowe believes that she and her teammates haven't yet reached their peak.

"We're not even close to where we can be," she said. "We're at a really good point right now, but I feel like we can go so much higher. We can build on every single game. As we have more experiences, we have more knowledge and more tenacity to want to keep going."

"WE DON'T HAVE BENCH PLAYERS"

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – It's true that the UTSA Women's Basketball team has its fair share of star power.

But the identity of this year's squad, which on Saturday defeated Temple 70-61 to earn its school-record 12th consecutive home victory, isn't based on a handful of players who score the most points. The Roadrunners opened February by winning their 18th game – matching the 2023-24 edition's win total – with the total-team effort that has characterized its historic season.

"It shows in practice," said starting point guard Nina De Leon Negron. "We don't have bench players, it's just people that don't start. Every time they're on the bench, the energy is good. I can feel it. They're locked in, they want to play and they're ready."

That readiness was on full display in the second quarter of Saturday's game. Foul trouble plagued the Roadrunners as post player Cheyenne Rowe had three first-half fouls and starters De Leon Negron, Sidney Love and Idara Udo all had two. UTSA's fourth-year head coach Karen Aston counted on her entire roster to help the Roadrunners weather the storm.

"In the second quarter, it was a lineup that hasn't played a lot of minutes and hasn't played together a lot," Aston said. "It was chaotic and maybe didn't feel great, but I thought it was huge because they competed. They tried really hard to make plays and do the things that they needed to do. They kind of got our energy up defensively. It was a huge team win for us."

One of the biggest examples of that came with 5:04 remaining in the game. The Roadrunners, who trailed by as many as 14 points in the second half, were down 56-53 with the shot clock winding down on the possession. De Leon Negron drove to the free-throw line, but didn't have an open shot. She passed the ball to Rowe on the left wing. Rowe, who entered the game with only one made three-pointer on the season, was heavily guarded, but faked out her defender and launched a step-back three to tie the game as the shot clock expired.

"The fact that she had the presence to get the shot off was just one of many things Cheyenne did really well today," Aston said. "When she shot it and hit it, she threw up the three sign like it was just an everyday thing."

Just like Rowe's improbable three-pointer, no challenge has been too big for this year's UTSA women's basketball team. The Roadrunners have faced double-digit second-half deficits in several games this season and continue to find ways to win.

"I think that's our team in a nutshell," said Udo. "Our team just responds to adversity very well. We're always up for a challenge and we're always up to fight for each other and just represent the letters on our chest with everything we have in us."

Senior standout Jordyn Jenkins, the early favorite for the American Athletic Conference's Player of the Year accolade, embodied that spirit and delivered a gutsy performance on Saturday. Still recovering from getting banged up in the Roadrunners' win against Tulsa on Jan. 22 which prevented her from playing in UTSA's last game against South Florida, Jenkins' status entering the game against Temple was unknown.

Jenkins delivered in one of the biggest ways possible. Having scored only two points by halftime and only seven entering the fourth quarter, she dropped nine points, including five clutch free-throws, forced two steals and brought down two rebounds in six minutes of play in the final frame. Jenkins' fast-break layup with 45 seconds remaining all but sealed the victory for the Roadrunners. But her effect on the game went far beyond the stat sheet.

"I thought it was one of her most impactful performances," Aston said. "Sometimes you need to see what someone has inside of them. It's not about the points. You have to see what they're going to give to their team. I think that our players felt she was trying to give them everything she had today. I think that's really critical when you start to get down the stretch of a season. The players have to know what each other is going to give them."

Off the court, an important factor in UTSA's success was the impact of its fan base. The Roadrunners welcomed 1,412 fans to the Convocation Center, their third consecutive home game with an attendance of better than 1,300 supporters.

"I think it's everything for me and for our team as well," Udo said of the fans in attendance. "Just hearing the crowd and hearing the encouragement we get. Not just hearing it, but seeing how many people come out and support us and are rooting for us and want us to be successful, that means the world to us. It motivates us to play even harder."

For the Roadrunners, it was just another step on their quest towards the ultimate goal of winning an AAC Championship and advancing to the NCAA Tournament. One day at a time.

"It's just resilience," Aston said. "You don't draw up a game to look like that, but I think that's kind of how we're made. We're not going to give up."

THROUGH HER LENS: UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S DAMARA ALLEN

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – Damara Allen enjoys observing the world through her own lens.

The 5-foot-10 freshman guard for UTSA's 18-3 women's basketball team who aspires to be a professional sports photographer and videographer, Allen is most comfortable working hard behind the scenes. But her high-level basketball background, coupled with her trademark competitiveness has brought Allen into the spotlight in her rookie season with the Roadrunners.

"Damara loves photography and to want to be behind a camera and look at the art of things is something special that you don't see in a lot of kids her age," said Jamie Carey, UTSA's associate head coach who directly instructs the team's guards. "She comes from a place of listening and, in a world with a lot of voices, I think it's really unique to have that."

In a society driven by social media influencers, Allen's interest in working in the creative realm came from quite the opposite perspective. It originated from an interest in capturing special moments for others. A communications major in UTSA's College of Liberal and Fine Arts, she has taken a particular interest in the work done by the Rowdy Creative team covering the Roadrunners' student-athletes.

"I never really got pictures at my high school, so I wanted to take pictures for people who never got them," Allen said. "That's how I got an interest in that. I'd like to do what the Rowdy Creative team is doing and take it farther after my basketball career."

Allen's motivation to pursue her passion for photography and videography epitomizes what she brings to the court as a teammate.

"I think it speaks to her character and who she is," Carey said. "She's kind of sitting behind the lens right now and she's going to find herself in front of it just by what she does every single day. I think that's a little bit poetic for her."

* * * * *

As quickly as Allen first came on UTSA's radar, she just as rapidly became a top target for the Roadrunners.

UTSA head coach Karen Aston and Carey were in Dallas, attending a club basketball event in the spring of 2023 when they first saw her play. Derek Griffin, head coach of Allen's Hardwood Elite team and a long-time connection of Carey, pointed out his accomplished pupil.

"I went to sit on the baseline at her next game," Carey said. "I texted Karen and said, 'You might want to come look at this kid.' She had a lot of the things that Karen appreciates in recruiting in terms of motor, athleticism, being able to defend and her competitive spirit. We decided we wanted her pretty much that day."

Aston observed all of those traits when she watched Allen play and knew she would be a perfect fit at UTSA.

"Immediately, I thought she fit our style of play and I just loved everything about the way she played the game," Aston said. "Everybody that we spoke to spoke so highly of her. We attacked her pretty hard in the recruiting process because I thought she was a great fit."

Allen was equally drawn to the Roadrunners and felt an instant connection with the coaches and her future teammates.

"The thing that interested me the most about UTSA was definitely the coaching staff and how involved they were with my recruiting process," she said. "I have a lot of respect for the coaches and I really vibed with the team. I like the environment in San Antonio."

Players who have experienced being part of a winning team culture have always been particularly appealing to Aston, who has long been hailed as one of the nation's top recruiters. A prospect's capacity to be a great teammate and contribute to team success are perhaps an even more critical indicator of her future collegiate success than individual accolades.

With Hardwood Elite, Allen led her team to the 2023 Adidas National 17U Championship. As a high school player at Cherokee Trail in Aurora, Colo., Allen propelled her team to the state semifinals and earned first-team All-State accolades.

"Being part of a good high school system and filtering through a very good club system, she was able to understand what it takes to play at a high level where she was in that moment," Aston said. "Some of that is her personality – she's a high achiever. But she's also been fortunate to have been in those systems where they expect to win."

The ability to play on big stages has been particularly valuable for Allen as she navigates her freshman season at UTSA.

"Definitely being in the spotlight and also being under a lot of pressure has helped me in the long run," Allen said. "Coach Derek pushed me a lot. He was on me a lot about defense and how things were going to be in college. That helped me and I feel like I was well prepared before coming here."

* * * * *

Basketball first entered Allen's life as an attempt by her parents, Devaron and Michelle, to help their daughter make friends and be less introverted. That she had a natural propensity for the sport was a bonus.

"It's actually funny," she said. "My parents put me in it in second grade because I was really shy and didn't talk to a lot of people. I just happened to be really good at it."

From eighth grade until 11th grade, Allen also competed in track & field. She was a two-time regional qualifier in the long jump. Skills that she learned from the track were beneficial in accelerating her progress on the basketball court.

"The reps of track footwork and speed helped me," Allen said. "As a jumper, jumping high and being athletic has helped me a lot in basketball."

Many of Allen's UTSA teammates were also multi-sport athletes growing up. It's a trait that Aston feels extends far beyond the skill development that takes place in other sports.

"It's competition," Aston said. "If they're always competing at something, then that's what their mindset is. Especially if you're in the high school environment that she was – they expected to win. She was always in a competitive spirit, she didn't spend months turning off her competitive juices. She always has them turned on."

The desire to win that Allen displays each day in practice is elite, according to Carey.

"I think her competitive spirit is really special," said Carey, a fellow Colorado native. "She's serious about what she's doing. From a culture perspective, you can't ask for anything more. Her coachability has been fantastic."

* * * * *

As the UTSA women's basketball team enters the stretch run of the 2024-25 season, Allen – who has played in 20 games with five starts – is prepared to contribute in any way her team needs her.

She arrived in San Antonio with only one expectation of herself – to compete. That trait has allowed her to become an important contributor for the Roadrunners as they pursue their ultimate goal of an American Athletic Conference Championship and an NCAA Tournament berth.

"I just came here knowing that I had to work hard, no matter the outcome," Allen said. "It's been very exciting. I'm happy to be here with my teammates on the journey. But the job's not finished. I'm very blessed that I'm in this position and have this opportunity."

WRITING A LEGACY: UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S SIDNEY LOVE

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – When junior UTSA guard Sidney Love soared to block a shot as time expired in a 54-52 win against North Texas last Tuesday at the Convo that gave the Roadrunners sole possession of first place in the American Athletic Conference, it was hard not to think about what a journey it has been for both she and her team.

"I've come a long way," Love said. "I used to be a horrible defender. I can't win the game by myself; it was just a big play at the right time. But it feels good to win for this program, these girls and these coaches. It was exciting."

When Karen Aston was hired as UTSA's head coach on March 29, 2021, the Roadrunners had won just two games the season prior. She immediately went to work recruiting top talent, but it wasn't going to be easy. Aston didn't have wins or accolades to sell, so she banked on her stellar reputation as a highly successful head coach at Charlotte, North Texas and Texas, and the potential that existed at UTSA under the direction of Vice President for Intercollegiate Athletics Lisa Campos. Recruiting San Antonio would be critical for the future of the program.

One of the players she immediately set her sights on was Love from Steele High School in Cibolo. Love, a well-known player in the Greater San Antonio area who came from a family of accomplished athletes, finished her prep career as the 2022 Co-District MVP, was the District Defensive MVP as a junior and a TGCA All-Star. She helped her team to the district championship in 2020 and 2021. Love also was a four-time academic all-district honoree with a 4.0 high school GPA.

For a variety of reasons, Love's commitment to UTSA will go down as one of the most pivotal moments in the history of the program.

"I think it was really big to be able to get one of a couple of local products to buy in really early," Aston said. "She was very well-respected in the community and had been part of a winning program that went on a great run her senior year. I think everybody knew that she was committed to helping us be better. It just sort of dominoed as far as the class she came in with."

Putting together the pieces of a puzzle is the perfect analogy for Love's growth during her time at UTSA.

As a Christmas gift to Love in her freshman season, associate head coach Jamie Carey – who directly coaches the team's guards and was, in her own right, a standout player at both the collegiate and professional levels – understood the symbolism. She encouraged her pupil to blaze a new trail both for herself and the program.

"She gave me a puzzle," Love said. "It was a customized puzzle of me. She gave me a book with it about creating your own legacy. It really meant a lot and showed that she cared. It was this book about writing my own legacy, staying true to myself and doing what I know best. Just being comfortable with who I am as a player and a leader, to keep progressing and trusting the process. It was a really meaningful present."

Carey knew that for the program to reach the lofty goals that the players and coaches had for themselves, it would require Love to set a high standard. She understood, from the beginning, the significance of Love's decision to attend UTSA.

"When we first came here, we needed somebody that wanted to build a legacy," Carey said. "This was a way for me to let her know that's what I thought of her. I see a lot in Sid. She's somebody that is very loyal, hard-working and first in everything. She doesn't miss a dotted I or a crossed T. She is a kid who is a legacy builder."

It was a role that Love didn't realize that she was assuming, but one that she welcomed.

"To be honest, I didn't know that, but I hoped for that," Love said. "That's the type of person that I am. I'll stick with the process and hopefully make something shake or turn something around that makes people notice us. I feel like the people I came here with are exactly those types of people too. We've stuck together for three years now and that's another thing that makes us so strong."

Love's transition to UTSA was anything but easy.

There's always an adjustment from the high school to collegiate levels, but she didn't have time to observe and learn from the bench. The Roadrunners' need for a player like Love immediately thrust her into a starting role. She averaged 28.5 minutes per game as a freshman, making 23 starts.

Just like Love, the UTSA team was experiencing growing pains as the culture was still being built. The Roadrunners were victorious in 13 games that 2022-23 season, which nearly doubled the previous season's win total.

"It was really, really tough," Love said. "I had to find where I could help this team grow little by little. They were baby steps because I was still trying to grow myself. I'm still growing to this day, but we're a little further along in the process now. I try to embrace challenges and take them head on. I don't want to quit or let them get the best of me. I've been surrounded by people who want to make me a better person and a better player to help the team in general."

While Love was forced to grow at a rapid pace, she had a tremendous role model in Kyra White, a Converse native who had transferred to UTSA from the University of Southern California and now plays professionally overseas. Like Love, White played the point guard and shooting guard positions.

"Kyra White really helped me be a leader," Love said. "I was really just listening to her and trying to absorb information from her. Watching her and talking to her. Coach Jamie and Coach Aston told me as a point guard that it was going to be hard. A lot of stuff was going to be on me, but I had to learn to take it with a grain of salt. I had to learn how to be a positive and effective leader through the negatives. I feel like I've just grown so much here."

There as mentor every step of the way, Carey has watched Love's evolution with pride.

"We watched her struggle when she was young and playing every single minute as a freshman," Carey said. "Not everybody gets that opportunity, but it's also a heavy load to carry. She took her lumps from it. But to watch her grow and see how much confidence she has now, it's just been amazing to watch. I'm glad she's feeling the success that she is because she's earned it."

The opportunity to make women's college basketball relevant in San Antonio was exactly what Love was seeking when she made her collegiate decision. Instead of opting to play for a program with an established tradition, Love wanted to build something special in her hometown.

"I knew a lot of people around San Antonio knew me, so I just wanted them to know you can make basketball a dream, a legacy and a path for yourself in your own city," she said. "I hope a lot of San Antonio kids want to come here, especially since they see this growth in such a short amount of time."

Looking back at the influences on UTSA's program that have created the foundation for its impressive ascent, Love is a central figure whose fingerprints can be found all over the building blocks.

"She's had her hand in everything," Carey said. "She's been the foundation of what we've been building here since the day that she became one of our early commits."

Entering Wednesday night's game against East Carolina, the Roadrunners are 20-3 on the season with an 11-1 mark in American Athletic Conference play. UTSA is off to the best start in school history and has achieved the first 20-win campaign since 2008-09.

Love is committed to staying in the moment and helping the Roadrunners achieve their ultimate goals.

"We're at 20 wins right now – that's hard to do and I'm super proud of us," she said. "But we're just going to keep going. We're hopefully going to go dancing. That's the goal and everybody is invested in that goal."

THE LAST LAP: UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL FINE-TUNING AS IT ENTERS STRETCH RUN

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – In the UTSA women's basketball team's 80-61 win against Memphis on Saturday, head coach Karen Aston felt her team made progress that extended far beyond its 22nd win of the year that gave the Roadrunners their 15th consecutive home victory.

UTSA (22-3, 13-1 The American) benefited from valuable contributions up and down its roster. It's a trait that will serve the Roadrunners well as they work to achieve their goals in postseason play.

"When you get into tournament play, you never know what's going to happen," Aston said. "You're playing, we hope, three nights in a row and someone's probably going to have to step up. Other teams focus on who I guess people think are our main scorers. The fact that we're starting to get some major contributions from other players has really been the story of the last two games."

One of the biggest standouts on Saturday was sophomore guard Aysia Proctor, who scored a season-high 15 points, including a trio of three-pointers, brought down three rebounds and dished out three assists.

"She was crucial," Aston said of Proctor. "Obviously the shot-making, but I think her defense is improving, which has been something that we've focused on quite a bit. It's just learning how to go play to play and you can definitely see that she's starting to find her groove. I think that her contributions today really opened up the other players a little bit."

The Roadrunners have also gotten solid contributions from Cheyenne Rowe all season long, and have seen the emergence of Taylor Ross in recent contests.

Depth was particularly important in Saturday's game as Jordyn Jenkins, the early favorite for the American Athletic Conference Player of the Year award, was plagued with three first half fouls that forced her to the bench for most of the second quarter. Jenkins, who entered the game as the AAC's leading scorer at nearly 19 points per game, played fewer than 15 minutes on Saturday and scored eight points.

"Whenever Jordy is scoring 30 points, that just makes everybody else's lives easier," joked point guard Nina De Leon Negron. "I just think that we feed off each other. We play like a team. Whoever's scoring, we try to feed them and score in transition. We just keep it going and play together."

Despite some players not seeing much action early in the season, Aston is pleased that her entire team has trusted the process. She is starting to see that commitment pay off across the board.

"This is what I was hoping for," Aston said. "That people would stay engaged and not get down because they weren't getting to play in certain games, and I've seen a lot of that. They just keep working."

Aston trusts her team and its leadership to be able to work through challenges that it faces in games. On Saturday, the Roadrunners trailed by as many as 12 points, powered by a 9-0 Memphis run that concluded early in the second quarter. UTSA didn't use a single one of its timeouts against the Tigers.

"It goes back to who we are and who we've been the whole year," Aston said. "I have a lot of trust in these guys. Sid [Love] and Nina were on the floor at that time and I just don't think I have to call a timeout when they're on the floor. They can get our team organized if there's a dead ball. I thought they could work through it."

As their opponents have tried to stop the high-powered Roadrunners this season, they have employed a number of different approaches. Regardless of what they're facing, UTSA's players have found a way to adapt.

"We've seen all kinds of different defenses," Aston said. "There's been a lot of different looks. That's probably what I'm most proud of – that they've learned how to handle and read the defense. That's why I think our second halves have been better – because they've managed to figure out how people are playing us."

Twenty-five games into the season, the Roadrunners seem to get better with every outing. It's the right formula for them to achieve their ultimate goals headed into March.

"With four games left, it's kind of the final stretch; like the last lap of the race," said sophomore post player Idara Udo. "Now, more than ever, we're just honed in on trying to get a ring, but also keeping our minds on the American Tournament and the NCAA Tournament. We are still locked in on the moment, but also on what's ahead as well."

HOLDING (HOME) COURT

Saturday's win against Memphis marked the Roadrunners' 15th consecutive victory in the Convocation Center dating back to last season.

An important part of the team's success has been the support of its growing fan base. On Saturday, the third-largest crowd in program history (1,523) turned out to cheer on UTSA. The Roadrunners average better than 1,000 fans per game on the season.

"It's mind blowing," Udo said. "Just being here for two years – the difference from year one to year two, even from the beginning of the year until now is tremendous. I think that we're really appreciative for all the fans that come out every single game. People who you don't even know are your biggest fans. It just means the world to us."

WHATEVER IT TAKES: UTSA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S TAYLOR ROSS

By: Sean Cartell / UTSA Athletics

SAN ANTONIO – Taylor Ross recalls, as a child, watching her older brother suit up collegiately for Auburn and then Missouri. He was playing the game they both loved in front of packed arenas and national television audiences. She knew then that, someday, she wanted the same experience.

"I still remember when I was like 7 or 8 years old, seeing him on the screen and in front of those big crowds. I wanted to be part of that, I wanted to do that," Ross said of Earnest, Jr., who now plays for the Guam National Team. "He was definitely my biggest motivation when I was little. Just watching him and seeing everything that he accomplished, it made me want to become that and more."

A freshman forward on the UTSA women's basketball team, Ross is in the early stages of her journey to continue her family legacy of success on the hardwood. Seeing limited playing time early in the season, Ross has willed her way into the regular rotation on the court with her tenacity and hard work. Over the last two games – critical American Athletic Conference wins for the Roadrunners against East Carolina and Memphis – Ross averaged 14 minutes per game with 5.5 rebounds per game and 2.5 blocks per game.

"She's earning her playing time right now by doing the things that other people won't always do – rebounding, guarding bigger players, diving on the floor and blocking shots," said Cameron Miles, UTSA's assistant coach who works directly with the team's post players. "Those are the things that don't always show up on the stat sheet. The rebounds and the blocked shots do and I think those things kind of fuel her. She's a kid that's hungry for playing time and she'll do anything and everything she can to get it."

While it would be easy to focus on points and headlines, Ross' only concern is contributing to her team's collective success.

"Being able to help your team win doesn't always mean scoring all the points," she said. "It sometimes means being a great teammate, lifting up somebody else that you see is having a bad game. Sometimes it's doing the dirty work that some people don't want to do. It can mean assisting. Just doing whatever you can do to help your team win whether you're on the court or not."

In the midst of UTSA's historic season that has the Roadrunners at 22-3 overall and atop the American Athletic Conference at 13-1, fourth-year head coach Karen Aston has been pleased that all of her student-athletes, regardless of playing time, have remained bought in to the process. Ross is seeing the results of that commitment.

"If she didn't put me in, that's for a reason," Ross said. "It means I have to work harder and that's what I've been doing. Every time I didn't get in the game, it just motivated me to get back in the gym and keep trying. At the beginning of the season, I felt like I was very timid and I wasn't understanding a lot of things. After being in this program for a while, you realize that sometimes what you're used to in high school is not going to be what you are in college. You've just got to make yourself fit in a program so you can help them. I know once the opportunity presents itself, I won't fail."

Ross has appreciated the support from her head coach. It has helped fuel her drive to earn playing time and has eased the growing pains experienced in the transition from high school to college.

"As a freshman, things are going to be tough," Ross said. "Even after bad practices she will still be like, 'It's okay. You're going to do better and things are going to get better if you just stay locked in and keep working.' That means a lot."

* * * * *

Ross is someone who has never been afraid of the work. Her mother, Regina, set an example that she is inspired to follow daily.

"I saw her work tirelessly when she was in the military," Ross said. "She used to come home tired a lot and she would cook dinner for us, get up, make us breakfast, take us to school and then have to go to work herself. She would do it all again every day. Thanks to my mom for showing me the way."

Ross' mother was also the one who guided her toward basketball the age of four. A passion for the sport quickly developed.

"At first, I actually started by playing soccer," Ross said. "Right before my first game, my mom was like, 'This ain't it.' She put me in basketball and I've just been rocking with it ever since."

Competing in both volleyball and track in middle school, Ross was a relative late-comer to high-level basketball. But she quickly established herself as a top talent at Brennan High School in west San Antonio and for San Antonio's Finest at the AAU level.

Ross helped Brennan claim three consecutive District 29-6A Championships and advanced to the UIL State Championships her senior season of 2024. Her final high school team finished the season 32-4 and a perfect 16-0 in district play. Ross was an All-State selection and a two-time member of the All-Region Team, in addition to being named District 29's Most Valuable Player her senior year.

As a junior in high school, she had no NCAA Division I offers, despite her impressive track record. Ross' AAU coach, Ray Caldwell, instilled in her the importance of staying the course and focusing on putting in the work.

"I was getting a little discouraged," Ross said. "I knew I was good enough to play at the next level, so I didn't understand what was going on. Coach Ray just encouraged me to keep working hard and he didn't give up on me. All of the coaches that I've had have made their imprint in helping me grow as a player and as a person."

She soon made her way onto UTSA's radar and it wasn't long before Ross became a Roadrunner.

"During that summer, we watched her in AAU and we were really impressed by her athleticism," Miles said. "It was just the pure talent that she had. We did some research and found out that she hadn't been playing that level of basketball very long, so the sky was the limit for her. It was a no-brainer from there."

* * * * *

At 6-foot-1, Ross is slightly undersized to be a post player at the highest level of the collegiate game. Because of that, she's always had to play smarter and work harder to outmatch her opposition. It's a challenge that she's never shied away from.

For inspiration, she's studied the game of Patrick Beverley, the former Arkansas standout who played a decade in the National Basketball Association despite being only 6-foot-2.

"He's an annoying defender," Ross said of Beverley. "I think being physical with some of the posts is really helpful. If you can just use your body a little bit, it really helps you to maneuver and helps you to guard some of these post players. I'm not that small, but I'm still undersized."

Ross' ability to adapt and grow at a rapid pace has been one of the major keys to her success at UTSA.

"It's drastic, actually," Miles said of Ross' evolution since she first arrived on campus. "I think the biggest thing for her was just being able to go play to play. On the high school level and the AAU level, there are more breaks in the game than there are on the college level as far as just the playing time. She's gotten really good at if she made a mistake or if she did something well, just going from that play to the next play. That's helped her out a lot."

Not only has Miles helped Ross develop on the court, but he has helped her realize that her abilities are much greater than she could have imagined.

"I love Coach Cam as a post coach," Ross said. "He's shown me some moves that I didn't even know I was capable of doing. He helps me a lot with my footwork and my post work. He has shown me a whole bunch of different aspects of the game."

Miles, whose older brother C.J. played 16 seasons in the NBA, firmly believes that Ross has the ability to develop into a professional player if she continues to make steady progress towards reaching her potential.

"She's really talented," Miles said. "I've seen a lot of pros come through the gym and I grew up with a pro, so I know what it looks like. I believe she's a pro. Obviously there are things she needs to learn like the way to work and certain skills and details about the game, but she has things in her game that you can't teach. She's a natural."

* * * * *

While Ross was growing up in Military City USA, her hometown team didn't experience much success. That was, until Aston was hired in March 2021 and changed the trajectory of the program. Ross took notice.

"To see them grow and actually be a part of that, it took a lot to be where we are right now," she said. "I'm just that much more appreciative of Coach Karen and the culture than I was before."

Perhaps Aston's biggest program-changing commitment came when Sidney Love from Cibolo's Steele High School chose the Roadrunners in early 2022. When Love picked UTSA, a number of local players began to view the program differently, including Ross.

"I thought Sidney Love was a great piece for Coach Karen to pick up," Ross said. "I remember I played her my sophomore year and she absolutely whooped us. I thought, 'I need to be around that.' It's great being surrounded by local kids and having other people who are just as familiar with this area as you are."

The opportunity to represent her hometown and help elevate the UTSA program is one that is particularly meaningful to Ross.

"It means a lot to help the City of San Antonio grow and be a part of that," she said. "I've been able to preach to younger kids that it matters what you're doing so you can help yourself grow and you can help rep wherever you're from."

As the Roadrunners have excelled this year – they enter Saturday's game at Rice just two victories away from tying the school record for most wins in a single season – the attendance at UTSA games has soared. Average attendance at the Convocation Center is 1,094 fans and six consecutive home contests have featured a crowd of better than 1,000 fans.

UTSA seeks to break the all-time single-game attendance record at the program's home finale on March 1. It will be a full-circle moment for Ross, who will get the opportunity to play in front of a packed house – the kind she dreamed about being part of when watching her brother play all those years ago.

"It means so much," Ross said. "It motivates you to want to keep doing good so more people can keep coming out and supporting you. I've been able to watch myself grow and to watch the community around me grow as well."
