WELCOME

Chad Avret
Schenkel Invitational
Committee Chairman

On behalf of the Schenkel Invitational Committee and Georgia Southern University, we welcome you to the 38th playing of the Schenkel Invitational at Forest Heights Country Club. We hope you enjoy a tremendous weekend of golf and that your stay in Statesboro is enjoyable. Should you need anything, please let myself or any of the staff from Georgia Southern or Forest Heights Country Club know, and we will do our best to fulfill your requests. Best of luck to all the competitors this weekend!

What coaches are saying about the Schenkel...

"Thank you, thank you, thank you. Everything was perfect as always. It really is a privilege for our team to compete in the Schenkel. There is not a better collegiate event in the country."

- Coach Brian Craig, University of Kentucky

"The Schenkel is and has always been one of my favorite events. There aren't many tournaments in which the town and club all get involved. Thanks for all the hard work."

- Coach Ernest Ross, Ole Miss

"We all love coming to Statesboro and playing in the Schenkel. It is Southern Hospitality at its finest. The guys talk about your event all year."

- Coach Scott Schroeder, University of North Florida

"The tradition of the Schenkel really is so neat. It's a first-class tournament that the community supports and embraces. We are honored to participate."

- Coach Scott Limbaugh, Vanderbilt University

Remembering When It All Started...

By Pat Murphy

What event first put Georgia Southern sports on a national stage? Think tall pines, azaleas, and springtime. Think fairways, bunkers, and greens. Think of an easy-going man with a smooth baritone voice who brought us our first vision of Arnold Palmer hiking his pants as he strode down the fairways at Augusta National. There's hardly a golfer in the Southeast who doesn't know what started it all. The Chris Schenkel E-Z-GO Collegiate Invitational, which held its inaugural competition at Forest Heights Country Club in 1971, proudly holds that distinction.

Today, however, few may realize that Georgia Southern's pigskin revival of the 1980s was not the first time a "town and gown" alliance brought top flight intercollegiate competition to our city. For nearly 100 years, our civic and university leaders have understood how important they are to one another. Their mutual endeavors have produced a quality of life unique for a municipality this size, whose citizens reap the benefits of exposure to first class art, entertainment, scholarship, and athletics.

It all began with a couple of synchronous events. During World War II, the U.S. Army sent a young Indiana lad to a language institute at the Georgia Teachers College. During his nine-month sojourn, while he lived in Sanford Hall overlooking beautiful Sweetheart Circle, Chris Schenkel forged a bond with Statesboro that, although dormant for a few years, would last a lifetime.

After the war, Schenkel embarked on what would become perhaps the most distinguished career in the history of sports broadcasting, one that included a number of "firsts" and "bests." He was the first to cover The Masters on television (1956), the first to anchor a live telecast of the Olympics (Mexico 1968), and the first to call a nationally broadcast college football game. In fact, for over two decades, when Chris Schenkel and ABC Television broadcast a school's home game, it was the same kind of "happening" – at least for that era – as when ESPN's Gameday visits a campus today. Schenkel was truly "The Voice of College Football." By the time he'd finished his lifework, he had been inducted into sixteen halls of fame and had received an Emmy for Lifetime Achievement. But during all those years, he never forgot the hospitality that he'd enjoyed during his sojourn in Sanford Hall.

During the 1968 Masters, a chance encounter with one of Statesboro's leading citizens resulted in Schenkel becoming reacquainted with the community that he remembered so fondly. That year, the late Charles "Cholly" Robbins and his family made their annual springtime trip to Augusta National. When his good friend, Savannahian Leo Beckman, who famously called the 18th green at The Masters, spotted Robbins after one of the rounds, he invited him for a drink and introduced him to the legendary broadcaster. When Schenkel learned that Robbins was from Statesboro, he surprised him with his knowledge of the city as "the home of Georgia Teacher's College and Sweetheart Circle."

Robbins came home inspired with a brainchild that eventually would bring his hometown and Georgia Southern national recognition. A savvy businessman who recognized opportunity's serendipitous knock, Cholly called his friend Ric Mandes to discuss ways they could get Schenkel back to Statesboro. Their first idea was to name the medalist's trophy from a high school golf tournament held at Forest Heights Country Club after the broadcaster, and, in the spring of 1969, Schenkel flew to Statesboro to present the Chris Schenkel Trophy to its inaugural winner, Screven County's Pat Lane. He returned the following season to crown the competition's second champion, Statesboro's Jody Stubbs.

Then, Georgia Southern president John O. Eidson, Athletics Director J.I. Clements, Mandes, Robbins, and community leaders such as Bo Hook, Hal Averitt, Clem Raith, and Bill Cook, along with many others, saw the potential for bigger things, something that might put the school and the city on the national map.

They were right. Once again, Statesboro's and Georgia Southern's visionary leaders hit one right on the "sweet spot." From its inception in 1971 until a ten year hiatus that began in 1989, the Schenkel grew to become one of the most prestigious intercollegiate golf events in the country.

Having their competition named for a world-class celebrity gave it instant credibility, but it was the unique way the organizers ran the event that made it special. Beginning a tradition that continues to this day, they made hospitality as much a part of the tournament as chip shots and birdie putts. In fact, it was as much social affair as athletic contest – not that the competition wasn’t fierce – with an agenda that provided the golfers with a welcome break from the “strictly business” atmosphere of big time college athletics.

From the beginning, a local family hosted each team, a tradition that lives. Some clans have entertained the same school for years and have established relationships that extend far beyond the 18th green; for example, Billy and Hilda Rushing with Ohio State; Wayne and Kristen Akins with Georgia; Walter and Dottie Garvin with South Carolina; and Alan and Debbie Tyson with Florida. A typical weekend begins with the host family providing a welcome basket or goodies for their team as they check-in to the hotel. Then formal festivities open with a BBQ on Thursday night for patrons and coaches, and a banquet on Friday night that every team attends.

But, what is Southern hospitality without Southern belles? Among the players favorite Schenkel amenities are the Phi Mu sisters who help host the event. The sorority assigns a hostess to each team. They add an extra sweet touch to the golfers’ weekend by baking cookies or cakes for them and then cheering them on during play. Like all athletes, golfers enjoy performing in front of appreciative spectators, especially those who enhance an already beautiful environment.

Often these relationships don’t end when the last putt drops into the cup. Like the family hosts, many a Phi Mu has formed a lasting friendship with the players they’ve hosted, keeping up with one another through birthday and Christmas cards, wedding announcements, and tidings of new births.

But the ingredient most vital to the Schenkel’s success is the level of competition. With Chris Schenkel’s name and endorsement, the tournament began drawing championship caliber teams to Statesboro from the outset. A call to then Florida coach Buster Bishop secured a commitment from the Gators and another to his friend Arnold Palmer helped convince Coach Jessie Haddock to bring traditional collegiate golfing power Wake Forest into the fold. Then, Clements, Robbins, and Don McDougald flew to the NCAA golf championships and hand delivered invitations to the 1971 competition. Over the years, the very best teams in the Southeast, along with a sprinkling of such national powers as Oklahoma State, Ohio State, The University of Southern California, and Northwestern, made the Schenkel an annual stop. Head coaches from these schools consistently ranked the Schenkel among the top three NCAA events.

In addition to drawing great programs, the Schenkel has been a proving ground for some of the game’s best players. Jay Haas, Andy Bean, Jerry Pate, Andy North, Bob Tway, Scott Verplank, Curtis Strange, Mark Calcavecchia and Georgia Southern greats Jody Mudd, Gene Sauers, Mike Donald, and Buddy Alexander are just a few who went on to star on the PGA tour.

It’s no mystery why the tournament grew in popularity over the years. Lured by the chance to participate in one of the NCAA’s most celebrated events and the fact that the Eagles received reciprocal invitations to play in other prestigious competitions, some of the best junior golfers in the U.S. chose Georgia Southern during the glory years of the Schenkel. Consequently, the Eagles developed a top-level program.

But, suddenly, in 1989, a scheduling conflict with the ACC Tournament forced it to shut down, a misfortune that almost destroyed the Georgia Southern program in the process. With the demise of the tournament, recruiting and funding pipelines dried up. GSU golf spent the next decade on life support.

That situation lasted until 1999, when, once again the community and the school came together to resurrect a great local tradition. Mike Perpich called Ric Mandes, and together they arranged to meet with Robbins and Phil Morris. This group, along with businessman Billy Griffis, GSU Athletic Director Sam Baker, and a host of other civic leaders joined forces to restart the Schenkel.

The Schenkel Invitational

Crucial to their efforts was securing a sponsor. With such prestige on the line, Augusta's E-Z-GO golf cart company stepped in to add its name and financial support. So, on March 27-28, 1999, one of Statesboro's, Bulloch County's, and Georgia Southern's proudest traditions teed off on a course that had only gotten better during the hiatus. Forest Heights general Manager Stacy Webb had overseen a 1993 Bob Cupp redesign of the course that had made its undulating fairways and greens even more beautiful and challenging.

It was as if the Schenkel had never gone away. Ten years had not been enough to make coaches – many of whom had played here as undergraduates – and athletic directors forget what a fine tournament it had been. Griffis, Baker, and the others had no trouble securing commitments from ten teams that had finished in the top 25 the previous year and whose rosters included eight individuals who made All American that season. In fact, the field was so impressive that The Rolex Collegiate Golf Tour added the Schenkel to its list of tournaments used to determine NCAA individual and team rankings. When Griffis first called to inquire about getting on the list, Rolex told him that he'd have to go to the end of a long waiting list. "But once I told them who we had coming, they moved us up and put us in immediately," Griffis recalls.

Schenkel traveled to Statesboro in 1999 when E-Z-GO committed to sponsor the Invitational. The tandem of Schenkel and Coach Erk Russell at that year's banquet, along with Michael Braz at the piano, produced one of the most memorable events ever. Just months later, Schenkel would deliver the eulogy for Robbins, his friend and fellow catalyst for one of the best collegiate golf tournaments in the nation.

The Eagles' golf program has undergone resurgence as well. One half of each tournament's net proceeds go to a scholarship fund, money that has helped current Coach Larry Mays restore the team to its rightful place among the nation's elite. They won the school's first Southern Conference title in 2003, and the Eagles have again become a fixture in NCAA postseason play. In addition, recent alum Aron Price won his professional debut when he finished first in the 2005 Grey Goose Tournament held in Port St. Lucie, Florida. None of these accomplishments would have been possible without the efforts of those who brought championship golf back to Statesboro.

And so, some order has been restored to the college golfing world. Thanks to the civic-minded men and women who love Statesboro and its hometown university, our city can once again boast of an event as fine as any in the country.

On Sept. 11, 2005, Chris Schenkel, an unassuming pioneer in sports broadcasting, passed away at the age of 82. In the years since his 1999 appearance, unable to travel, Schenkel always kept in touch with his Statesboro friends and, of course, eagerly awaited the results of the Schenkel E-Z-GO Invitational each March.

Richard Sykes A Schenkel Mainstay

By Elisabeth Dichiaro

Almost as much of a major component of The Schenkel Invitational as Forest Heights Country Club is NC State coach Richard Sykes, who brings his 32nd team to the tournament for his last go-round.

The 46-year leader of the Wolfpack men's golf program announced his retirement, effective at the end of the 2017 season, in January. No coach has been a part of as many Schenkels as Sykes.

NC State made its Schenkel debut in 1975 and finished third, one of the Wolfpack's eight top-5 team finishes in the tournament. He also had two individual champions at the tournament, Matt Hill in 2009, and Justin Walters in 2002.

Hill's win was part of a remarkable run that saw him win eight tournament titles that season, including the ACC Championship, the NCAA Regional and the NCAA Championship. The Canada native is one of eight players to win the Schenkel and the NCAA title. Hill now plays professionally and has been on multiple tours including PGA Canada and Web.com.

Inducted into the Golf Coaches Association Hall of Fame in 2001, Sykes led the Wolfpack to the program's first ACC championship in 1990. He is a four-time ACC Coach of the Year (2000, 1990, 1988, 1982).

The Wolfpack's successful golf fortunes during Sykes' tenure are numerous. NC State has qualified for 23 NCAA Regionals and 12 NCAA Championships as a team, finishing seasons among the nation's best for over four decades. Sykes' squads have won a total of 52 team tournament titles throughout his career, averaging more than one per season.

Sykes has coached six ACC Champions, two ACC Players of the Year, three ACC Rookies of the Year, 47 All-ACC selections and 34 All-Americans during his time in Raleigh. His team won the 1996

NCAA East Regional in Kiamesha Lake, New York, and he coached individual golfers to NCAA Regional titles in 1996 (Tim Clark), 1997 (Tim Clark), 2009 (Matt Hill), 2011 (Mitch Sutton), and 2012 (Albin Choi). He was also elected as the coach of the West squad in the 1999 East-West All-Star matches and has seen many former players enjoy solid professional careers, including Tim Clark, Carl Pettersson, Marc Turnesa, Garth Mulroy, Hank Kim, Jeff Lankford, Kelly Mitchum, Vance Heafner, Justin Walters and the aforementioned Matt Hill.

Sykes' love for NC State started long before he became a coach there. He graduated from the school in 1968, earning a degree in recreation and parks administration. He was a member of the freshman track team while with the Wolfpack and was also on the men's varsity golf team during the 1965-66 season.

"I love NC State and have been a part of it for the past 46 years," Sykes said. "It has been a dream come true. My age is now an even-par 72. Since we try to keep scores at par or better, it's time for me to step aside. Hopefully as the season goes along, I will have the opportunity to thank all of the players, their families, donors, NC State administrators, and fans who have made my time here so special."

Legends of the Schenkel

For 37 years, the Schenkel Invitational has attracted the top teams and players around the country. Taking a look back in history, there are several individual champions of the Schenkel that have gone on to have outstanding careers on the PGA Tour.

Bubba Watson - Bagdad, Fla. - Georgia Won the Schenkel in 2000

Won The Masters in 2012 and 2014 and has posted nine PGA Tour Wins and 50 top-10 finishes in 251 events during his 15-year career. Watson represented the United States in the Ryder Cup in 2010, 2012 and 2014 and in the Presidents Cup in 2011 and 2015. He posted a 2-2 record in the 2012 Ryder Cup, a 1-3 mark in 2010 and an 0-3 record in 2014.

Bubba Watson

Scott Verplank

Scott Verplank - Dallas, Texas - Oklahoma State Won the Schenkel in 1984

While a collegiate student-athlete, Verplank became the first amateur to win a PGA Tour event since 1956 when he took the title at the Western Open. Verplank has five PGA Tour wins and two Ryder Cup appearances in 2002 and 2006. He has recorded top-10 finishes in every Major Championship and has earned 27 top-3 and 94 top-10 finishes since he turned pro in 1986.

Bob Tway - Oklahoma City, Okla. - Oklahoma State Won the Schenkel in 1981

Tway turned professional in 1981, recorded eight PGA Tour victories and spent 25 weeks in the top-10 of the Official World Golf Rankings. He won the PGA Championship over Greg Norman in 1986 off a greenside bunker on the 18th hole of the final day. Tway was named the PGA Player of the Year in 1986.

Bob Tway

Hal Sutton - Shreveport, La. - Centenary College
Won the Schenkel in 1980

Sutton won his first PGA Tour event at the 1982 Walt Disney World Golf Classic in a playoff with Bill Britton. His first and only major win came a year later at the PGA Championship. Sutton was ranked in the top-10 of the Official World Golf Rankings for over 50 weeks from 1986-87 and then again from 1999-2001. He played on four United States Ryder Cup teams and was named non-playing captain of the team in 2004. Sutton played in 646 PGA Tour events since turning professional in 1981, earning 14 first-place finishes and 124 top-10 placings.

Andy Bean - Lafayette, Ga. - Florida
Won the Schenkel in 1977

Bean took his career to the professional ranks in 1975 and played on the United States Ryder Cup team in 1979 and 1987. After competing in 588 PGA Tour events, he currently plays on the Champions Tour. Bean has 11 first-place finishes in his career and holds three Champions Tour victories.

Curtis Strange - Norfolk, Va. - Wake Forest
Won the Schenkel in 1974

A member of the World Golf Hall of Fame, Strange spent over 200 weeks in the top-10 of the golf rankings. He is considered one of the best golfers of the 1980s, when he won 16 of his 17 PGA Tour titles. He won back-to-back U.S. Opens in 1988 and 1989 and topped the tour money list in 1985 and 1987. In 1988, he became the first player to win a million dollars on the Tour in a single season. Strange played in 598 PGA Tour events, winning 17 and finishing in the top-10 129 times.

Will Gordon tied the tournament record with a 63, and Vanderbilt shot a 19-under-par 269 in the final round of the 37th Annual Schenkel Invitational to win the team title Sunday at Forest Heights Country Club.

The Commodores' team score tied the second-lowest for a round in Schenkel history, and their tournament score of 823 also tied for the second-lowest. Gordon rolled in nine birdies on the day to tie four others for the best round in tournament history. It was the lowest score since 1989, when Richie Bryant of Georgia Southern also fired a 63.

Gordon moved up 20 spots into a tie with Auburn's Michael Johnson at 13-under to force a playoff for medalist honors. After both players parred the par-4 1st hole, they moved on to the par-5 9th. Johnson's drive leaked to the left of the fairway and in the rough, but he smoked his approach to just in front of the middle of the green, which had a left front pin placement today.

Gordon's drive found the center of the fairway, but his approach went into the rough on the left side of the green. His chip rolled past the hole and down off the front of the green, leaving the door open for Johnson. The senior chipped up past the hole to within four feet and rolled it in for birdie to win the playoff.

Vanderbilt (-41) won the tournament by 10 strokes over Wake Forest (-31). NC State (-25) shot 16-under today and tied Kentucky for third. Auburn (-23) finished fifth, and Georgia State (-22) placed sixth. The top four teams in the event all posted three-round team scores in the top-10 lowest in tournament history.

Cameron Young (-12) of Wake Forest and J.J. Grey of Georgia State tied for third. Ben Griffin (-11) of North Carolina placed fifth. Three Vanderbilt players finished in the top-10 as Theo Humphrey (-10) finished sixth, and Patrick Martin (-9) and Matthias Schwab tied for seventh. Forty-two individuals shot under par for the tournament.

Georgia Southern shot 2-under-par in the final round and fell to 10th place. Henry Mabbett shot a 67 in the first round and finished with a 211 (-5) to tie for 21st. Steven Fisk carded a 67 in the second round and posted a 212 (-4) to tie for 25th.

Annually one of the top collegiate golf tournaments in the country, this year's Schenkel Invitational field featured eight teams ranked in the top-50 and 13 out of 14 ranked in the top-100.

Men's golf coaches and student-athletes from Georgia Southern and teams that are in town to compete in the Schenkel Invitational have participated in the annual Schenkel Nationwide Youth Clinic at Forest Heights Country Club. Student-athletes from North Florida, Iowa and Kentucky were on hand for last year's clinic.

Approximately 75 youth golfers turned out to meet and get some tips from some of the top players and coaches in college golf. Coaches and student-athletes helped the youth golfers with their games at three stations – hitting, chipping and putting.

The free clinic began at 4:30 p.m., and youth players spent about 20 minutes at each station. Youth golfers received a free dinner from Chick-Fil-A following the clinic, and random drawings for prizes were conducted to finish the evening. The Schenkel Committee has made the Nationwide Youth Clinic an annual event prior to the tournament.

"All of these guys remember being young and somebody helping them learn the game of golf so it's a privilege for us to be a part of the youth clinic and give back," said Georgia Southern coach Carter Collins.

"The main thing I want them to learn is to just have fun," added redshirt senior Henry Mabbett. "There can be a lot of added pressure out there so I want them to always remember to have fun playing golf."
