

IOWA CITY

"If you are lucky enough to arrive in time for one of the early season varsity football games, well, go catch Hawkeye fever. Join the fervent Iowa fans dressed up like bumble-bees in their black-and-gold regalia, cheering the team that has gone from laughingstock of the league to Big Ten powerhouse in about six years. Find out why Hawkeye coach Hayden Fry may be the next governor.

"But don't neglect other traditions that Iowa City is equally proud of. The centerpiece of the Iowa Center for the Arts on the west riverbank is Hancher Auditorium, a splendid hall that has hosted everyone from the Cleveland Orchestra and the Modern Jazz Quartet to the touring company of Evita. The University Theatre's home is the nearby Mabie Theatre, which is not only a beautifully designed little house, but a monument to depression-era pioneers who made Iowa a leader in educational theater. The Museum of Art is a rambling, serene space in which to view a mostly modern collection dominated by abstract expressionism and its offshoots.

"The biggest act on campus, however, is the Writers' Workshop, a magnet that draws hundreds of fledgling and famous writers to study, teach, and read their works. Combine these people with the 30 or so established foreign authors who come to Iowa City each fall under the International Writing Program, and you have a literary reading-and-lecture scene second only to that of New York City."

The walking mall in downtown Iowa City is a great place to shop, meet friends, or study.

Iowa City. A beautiful city, split by the Iowa River and engulfed by The University of Iowa. Surrounded by the smaller agriculture-rich farm communities so vital to the state's economy, Iowa City is an artistic and educational jewel; a cultural mecca full of diverse organizations and activities.

Although the town of approximately 60,000 is best known for its Hawkeyes, there's more to Iowa City than initially meets the eye.

Economically, businesses such as Rockwell Collins, American College Testing and Procter & Gamble help keep the city booming.

Culture and art are also important components of the community, beginning with the headliners who premiere at Hancher Auditorium to the amateurs who strum their guitars in the pedestrian mall downtown. Dancers and actors, painters and poets share their talents on the city's stages, in its museums and on the banks of the lazy Iowa River. Concert-goers have the pleasure of seeing popular performers.

The members of the community are not only economically and culturally enriched, they also take advantage of the numerous recreational facilities offered around town. The area's more than 30 parks provide opportunities for year-round activities including boating, hiking, swimming, fishing and skiing.

The city's greatest charm, however, remains the down-home goodness of its people, the sincere friendliness of its citizens and the successful "town-gown" partnership built between the community and University, making Iowa City the envy of her sister cities throughout the United States.

Iowa City is located in eastern Iowa and is an easy commute to such cities as Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Minneapolis. As well, Cedar Rapids, a city of more than 150,000, is just a short drive north of Iowa City. The Cedar Rapids Airport links residents to every major airport in the Midwest, nation and world.

Coralville Lake and Lake Macbride Nature Recreation Area are both minutes from Iowa City and The University of Iowa.
