IOWA TO MEET TENNESSEE IN 2024 CHEEZ-IT CITRUS BOWL

The 17th-ranked University of Iowa football team will face No. 21 Tennessee in the 2024 Cheez-It Citrus Bowl on Jan. 1 in Orlando, Florida. Kickoff is set for noon (CT) from Camping World Stadium and the game will be televised on ABC.

The Hawkeyes will be making their 36th bowl game appearance and their third Citrus Bowl appearance (formerly the Capital One Bowl).

Iowa is 1-1 all-time at the Citrus Bowl. The Hawkeyes defeated No. 11 LSU, 30-25, on an improbable Drew Tate-to-Warren Holloway 56-yard touchdown pass as time expired on Jan. 1, 2005. Kentucky scored the go-ahead touchdown with 1:48 remaining in the fourth quarter to down Iowa, 20-17, on Jan. 1, 2022.

The Hawkeyes have won four of their last five bowl games, including a 21-0 shutout of Kentucky in the 2022 Music City Bowl. Iowa is 18-16-1 all-time in bowl games.

Iowa is bowl eligible for the 22nd time in the last 23 seasons under head coach Kirk Ferentz. Iowa is 10-9 in bowl games under Ferentz, including a 21-0 victory over Kentucky in the Music City Bowl. Since 2001, only Ohio State and Wisconsin have won more bowl games (including the FBS championship game), than Iowa.

THE SERIES

The Hawkeyes are 1-2 against the Volunteers in program history. Tennessee won the only bowl meeting, winning 45-28 in the 2015 TaxSlayer Bowl in Jacksonville.

Iowa won the first ever meeting in 1982, winning 28-22 in Atlanta and the Volunteers were victorious, 23-22, in East Rutherford, New Jersey in 1987.

Iowa is 7-6 all-time in bowl games against current Southeastern Conference opponents.

Here are the series results:

12/31/1982	W	28-22 (N)
8/30/1987	L	22-23 (N)
1/2/2015	L	28-45 (N)

WOODY, AMOS & KIRK

Kirk Ferentz, in his 25th season as Iowa's head football coach and the longest tenured active head coach in college football, won his 195th career game as a member of the Big Ten Conference on Nov. 18 against Illinois. The victory moved Ferentz past Bo Schembechler for third in Big Ten history. He currently has 196 victories, trailing only Ohio State's Woody Hayes (205) and Chicago's Amos Alonzo Stagg (199).

Ferentz has 121 Big Ten wins, which also rank third all-time, trailing Hayes (153) and Schembechler (143).

Ferentz won his 200th career game on Sept. 11 at Iowa State. He is the 27th coach at an FBS institution to reach the 200-career win milestone and the 99th coach across all divisions. Former Hawkeye head coach Hayden Fry finished his career with 236 victories.

THE NATION'S TOP ASSISTANT COACH

Iowa defensive coordinator Phil Parker is the recipient of the Frank Broyles Award, given to the top assistant coach in the nation, and is the AFCA Assistant Coach of the Year. Parker is the mastermind behind an Iowa defense that is fourth in the nation, allowing 13.2 points per game.

• Parker is the first Hawkeye coach to win the Broyles Award.

• He is the third Iowa assistant to earn the AFCA honor, joining Norm Parker (2011) and Ron Aiken (2002).

ALL-AMERICANS

• Cooper DeJean – FWAA (first team), CBS (first team), The Athletic (first team)

• Jay Higgins – FWAA (first team), CBS (second team)

• Tory Taylor – FWAA (first team), CBS (first team unanimous), The Athletic (first team)

NATIONAL AWARDS

• Jay Higgins (Butkus Award semifinalist)

• Drew Stevens (Lou Groza Award semifinalist)

• Tory Taylor (Ray Guy Award recipient)

CHEEZ-IT CITRUS BOWL NOTES

THE NATION'S BEST PUNTER

Senior Tory Taylor became the first Hawkeye to win the Ray Guy Award, which is given to the nation's top punter. The Eddleman-Fields Big Ten Punter of the Year is third in the nation with a 47.9 punting average on a NCAA-most 86 punts. Taylor set Iowa's single season punting yardage record in three straight seasons.

B1G HONORS

Junior Cooper DeJean was selected as the Tatum-Woodson Big Ten Defensive Back of the Year and the Rodgers-Dwight Big Ten Return Specialist of the Year, while senior Tory Taylor was recognized as the Eddleman-Fields Big Ten Punter of the Year.

DeJean is the sixth Hawkeye to be voted the top defensive back in the Big Ten and the third player to earn the league's top returner honor. Taylor earns the top punter honor for the second time in his career (2020). He is the first punter in league history to earn the distinction more than once.

Iowa had 20 players earn All-Big Ten recognition, including first-team honorees Jay Higgins (linebacker), DeJean (defensive back, return specialist) and Taylor (punter). Sebastian Castro (defensive back) garnered second-team honors, while Joe Evans (defensive end), Nick Jackson (linebacker), Drew Stevens (placekicker), Logan Jones (center), Connor Colby (guard) and Nick DeJong (guard) were third-team honorees.

The Hawkeyes had four players garner Associated Press All-Big Ten honors -- Cooper DeJean (first-team; DB/all-purpose), Jay Higgins (first-team LB), Tory Taylor (first-team P) and Sebastian Castro (second-team DB).

B1G WEST DIVISION CHAMPIONS

The Hawkeyes clinched an outright Big Ten West Division title and a trip to Indianapolis for the Big Ten Championship Game with a 15-13 victory over Illinois on Nov. 18 in Kinnick Stadium. It is the third Big Ten West Division crown in program history and its second in three seasons (2015, 2021, 2023).

10 & COUNTING

The Hawkeyes notched their 10th victory in the 13-10 walk-off road win at Nebraska on Nov. 24. It was the seventh time the Hawkeyes have recorded their 10th victory during the regular season, including five under head coach Kirk Ferentz.

It is the 11th time in program history that the team has reached the 10-win mark (1985, 1987, 1991, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2009, 2015, 2019, 2021, 2023).

The Hawkeyes finished the regular season with a 7-2 Big Ten record. It is the fifth time Iowa has won at least seven league contests under Ferentz (2002, 2004, 2015, 2021, 2023).

Iowa will join an exclusive list if it can hoist the Citrus Bowl trophy on Jan. 1 in Orlando. The Hawkeyes would become just the fourth team in program history to reach the 11-win mark, joining the 2002, 2009 and 2015 teams.

UNLIKELY HEROES

The Hawkeyes had two unlikely heroes -- DL Ethan Hurkett and K Marshall Meeder -- who were instrumental in propelling Iowa to a Heroes Game victory over Nebraska in Lincoln on Black Friday.

Hurkett picked a good time to record his first career interception -- on Nebraska's final offensive series -- as he dropped into zone coverage, intercepted QB Chubba Purdy and returned it 16 yards to the Husker 37 to set up Iowa's game-winning field goal. The Cedar Rapids, Iowa, native led the team with a career-high nine tackles and 1.5 TFL in the game.

Meeder, who transferred to Iowa from Central Michigan and joined the team two weeks prior to the start of the season, will go down in Hawkeye lore after drilling a game-winning 38-yard field goal as time expired. It was Meeder's first career game as a Hawkeye and his first attempt of the season.

It was Iowa's second game-winning field goal this season as Drew Stevens made a game-winner in Week 9 in the road win at Northwestern.

PBU

In their first game without all-everything DB Cooper DeJean's season-ending injury, the Hawkeye defense finished with a season-high 13 pass breakups against Illinois in Week 11. They were the most PBUs by Iowa since amassing 14 in a win over Indiana in 2002.

Seven different Hawkeyes had at least one pass breakup against an Illini offense that threw the ball 47 times. Junior DB Jermari Harris had a career-high eight tackles and four pass breakups in the game -- the most since Quinn Schulte in 2022 against South Dakota State.

O COMES THROUGH

The Hawkeyes had their longest scoring drive in both plays (14) and time of possession (7:59) in the second quarter in the 15-13 victory over Illinois.

Iowa outgained Illinois, 281-280, in the game with 54 yards coming when it counted most on a four-play, 54-yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter. Sophomore RB Kaleb Johnson's 30-yard touchdown run propelled Iowa to its ninth win.

STIFLING SHUTOUT!

The Hawkeyes notched their first shutout of the season in its 22-0 victory over Rutgers. It was the team's first Big Ten shutout since 2019 (Rutgers) and third since the start of the 2022 season. Iowa has 16 shutouts during the Kirk Ferentz era.

Iowa limited the Scarlet Knights to 127 yards -- the fewest in a league game since 2019. The rushing defense held Rutgers 150 yards below its season average (34 yards) and bottled up the Big Ten's leading rusher, limiting Kyle Monangai to 39 yards on 13 carries.

The 127 yards are the seventh fewest allowed in the Ferentz era, while the seven first downs allowed are tied for the sixth fewest and the seven pass completions allowed are tied for the fifth fewest.

OFFENSE BREAKS THROUGH

After averaging 225.3 yards over its first nine games, Iowa's offense erupted for 402 yards against the nation's 10th-ranked Rutgers defense on Nov. 11. It was the first 400-yard game in the last 32 contests (Maryland, 2021).

The Hawkeyes had 223 passing and 173 rushing yards -- the first 200+ passing and 100+ rushing game since Northwestern in 2022.

QB Deacon Hill passed for a career-high 223 yards, completing a season-high 20 passes. Seven different receivers caught at least one pass and three running backs had 53 or more yards. Iowa didn't have a three-and-out in the game, had a season-high 21 first downs and punter Tory Taylor had just three punts -- a season low.

The offensive unit was 9-of-18 on third downs and 2-of-2 on fourth downs in the game and controlled the time of possession to the tune of 38:22 -- the seventh-best all-time under Kirk Ferentz.

STEVENS EARNS B1G SPECIAL TEAMS HONOR

Sophomore Drew Stevens was named the Big Ten Special Teams Player of the Week -- the third Hawkeye special teamer to be honored -- after drilling a game-winning 53-yard field goal with 14 seconds remaining in Iowa's 10-7 road win over Northwestern at Wrigley Field. It is Stevens' second career game-winner (at Minnesota, 2022) and tied for the second-longest field goal of his career.

It is Stevens' second career weekly honor as he was the Big Ten Freshman of the Week in 2022.

ROCK STAR TORY

Senior punter Tory Taylor was named the Ray Guy Award Punter of the Week on Oct. 24 after punting nine times for 444 yards, averaging 49.3 yards, against Minnesota. Four of his kicks traveled over 50 yards and four were downed inside the 20. Taylor has also been named to the Ray's 8 list five times in 2023.

Taylor punted seven times for 353 yards in the Big Ten Championship Game against Michigan. The yardage total was the second-most in BTCSG history, his seven punts were tied for third and his 50.4 average was fourth. He had a 67-yarder in the game, the second longest punt in the game's history.

Taylor earned his third Big Ten Special Teams Player of the Week honor on Nov. 20 after punting eight times for a 51.6-yard average in Iowa's 15-13 victory over Illinois. In his final home game, Taylor had six punts of 50+ yards and two punts downed inside the 20. His eight punts pushed him past Jason Baker for the most career punts in school history.

Taylor was named the Big Ten Special Teams Player of the Week on Oct. 9 after punting six times for 284 yards (47.3 average) in Iowa's 20-14 win over Purdue. Two of his six punts went over 50 yards (61 and 57) and two were downed inside the 20-yard line.

Taylor earned his second straight weekly honor on Oct. 14 after putting on a punting display in the road win at Wisconsin. He had a career-high 506 combined punting yards (50.6 average) with half of his 10 punts going over 50 yards (two 60+) and six punts were downed inside the 20.

Taylor has six career Big Ten weekly honors (2021 at Iowa State; 2022 vs. South Dakota State; 2022 at Rutgers, 2023 vs. Purdue; 2023 at Wisconsin, 2023 vs. Illinois). He is a midseason first-team All-American by the AP, ESPN, Sporting News, CBS, The Athletic and FOX and is a semifinalist for the Ray Guy Award.

DEJEAN/JACKSON EARN BIG TEN WEEKLY ACCOLADES

DB Cooper DeJean was named the Big Ten Special Teams Player of the Week on Oct. 2 after leading the Hawkeyes to a 26-16 win over Michigan State on Sept. 30. The Odebolt, Iowa, native had a 70-yard punt return for a touchdown in the fourth quarter to break a 16-all tie. It was the 15th longest punt return in school history, the first of his career and the first by a Hawkeye since 2020. DeJean also had six tackles and an interception in the game.

LB Nick Jackson was selected as the Big Ten Co-Defensive Player of the Week on Oct. 2 after recording 10 tackles -- his second straight 10+ tackle game -- a tackle for loss and a key fourth quarter forced fumble that led to a game-sealing Hawkeye field goal.

The honors are the first of DeJean and Jackson's careers.

CASTRO EARNS B1G DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK HONORS

Senior DB Sebastian Castro was named the Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week on Sept. 11. The Illinois native had a 30-yard interception return for a touchdown in the second quarter, had four tackles and added a pass breakup in Iowa's 20-13 road victory at Iowa State. Castro's pick-six extended Iowa's active streak to 16 consecutive seasons -- the second-longest streak nationally.

BROWN EMERGES

The Hawkeyes have an emerging weapon in the wide receiving corps in sophomore Kaleb Brown. The Illinois native has 19 catches for 176 yards and a touchdown over Iowa's last five games.

Brown had a key 23-yard completion on Iowa's eventual game-winning scoring drive in the road win at Northwestern before recording three catches for 27 yards and his first career touchdown -- a 10-yarder -- against Rutgers.

Brown's ascension continued against Illinois when he had career-highs in receptions (7), receiving yards (71), while tallying his longest career reception (31). The 71 receiving yards are the most by a Hawkeye wide receiver this season.

He had five catches for 34 yards in the Big Ten Championship Game. Brown has three or more catches in three straight games.

D STANDS UP TO MICHIGAN

Iowa's defense held second-ranked Michigan to a season-low 213 yards in the Big Ten Championship Game in Indianapolis – 182 yards below its season average. The Wolverines had just 66 rushing yards, 103.8 yards below their regular season average. Iowa allowed 26 points, but Michigan's two touchdowns came on 5 and 6-yard scoring drives.

MORE BIG TIME TIGHT ENDS?

Sophomore Addison Ostrenga has been one of Iowa's top receiving weapons during the final month of the season, pulling in 23 receptions for 133 yards and one touchdown. He had a career-high eight receptions for 47 yards against Rutgers before making five catches for 24 yards and his second career touchdown against Illinois in Week 12. Ostrenga had a team-high seven catches for 50 yards against Michigan in the BTCG.

His eight receptions are the most by a Hawkeye since Sam LaPorta had nine receptions last season at Illinois.

Ostrenga wasn't the only Hawkeye tight end who made a big contribution against Rutgers. Freshman Zach Ortwerth had a 54-yard reception to set up an Iowa field goal. It was the longest reception of the season by a Hawkeye.

LESHON TO THE HOUSE

RB Leshon Williams had an 82-yard touchdown run in the second quarter of Iowa's road win at Wisconsin. His rush was tied for the ninth longest in program history, the longest by a Hawkeye since 1997 (Tavian Banks) and the longest all-time by a Hawkeye against Wisconsin. It is tied for the seventh longest run in the nation this season.

Williams, who was an honorable mention All-Big Ten selection by the media and coaches, has a team-high three 100-yard games this season and is Iowa's leading rusher with 804 yards (36th-most in a single season) on 164 carries, averaging 4.9 yards per attempt. He is the 52nd player in program history to reach 1,000 career yards; he has 1,285 yards to rank 34th in program history.

He recorded his third 100-yard game in the road win at Nebraska, rushing 16 times for 111 yards. He had a 53-yard run in the second quarter, which is tied for his second longest and the team's fourth longest of the season, and a 22-yarder on Iowa's final drive to set up the game-winning field goal.

Williams' most productive game came when he finished with a career-high 174 rushing yards -- the most by a Hawkeye this season -- on 25 attempts in Madison. It was his second 100-yard game of the year. He had his first career 100-yard game, rushing for 145 yards on 12 carries against Western Michigan (and he had two receptions for 27 yards, including a 25-yard touchdown).

He has six "explosive" runs this season, including three runs of 53+ yards (82, 53, 53).

KJ GOES OVER 1K

In his first game since Week 2 at Iowa State, sophomore RB Kaleb Johnson returned to record his first 100-yard rushing game of the season and fourth of his career in Iowa's Homecoming victory over Purdue. The Ohio native rushed for 134 yards -- the second-highest total of his career -- on 17 attempts and scored a touchdown, a 67-yarder in the opening quarter. It was Iowa's longest offensive play of the season and the second-longest run of Johnson's career.

Johnson's 134-yard performance pushed him over the 1,000-yard mark for his career. He is the 51st player in program history to surpass the 1,000-yard mark; he has 1,208 yards as a Hawkeye, ranking 38th in school history.

Against Illinois, Johnson carried the ball 10 times for 53 yards and hit paydirt, scoring on a 30-yard touchdown run -- the game-winning score -- in the fourth quarter.

Johnson is second on the team with 429 rushing yards on 110 carries with three touchdowns.

Last season, Johnson rushed for an Iowa freshman record 779 yards on 151 carries, which included three 100-yard games and a team-high six touchdowns.

Johnson had his first career 200-yard game (second career 100-yard game), finishing with 200 yards on 22 attempts with one touchdown -- his fourth of the season -- in the road win at Purdue. The yardage and attempts were both career highs.

The 200 rushing yards were the 18th-most in a single game in program history and the second-most by a Hawkeye freshman all-time (Marcus Coker, 219 vs. Missouri, Insight Bowl). He was the first Hawkeye to rush for 200 yards in a game since 2015.

WHAT A STAND!

After a pass interference penalty gave Northwestern a first-and-goal from the 2 on Nov. 4 in Wrigley Field, Iowa's defense conjured up memories of Syracuse in 2005. The Hawkeyes stopped the Wildcats on four consecutive rushing attempts -- three from the 1 -- for a turnover on downs.

His three picks are eighth in the Big Ten and 47th nationally. Castro also had a forced fumble in Iowa's road win at Nebraska and a career-high nine tackles in the BTCG against No. 2 Michigan.

Castro was a second-team All-Big Ten honoree in 2023.

The Illinois native, who was a high school teammate of RB Leshon Williams, had seven solo tackles, including two TFL and a fourth quarter interception that sealed Iowa's road win in Madison.

Castro also came on a blitz in the fourth quarter against the Badgers in their own end zone. He flushed QB Braedyn Locke from the pocket to allow DL Yahya Black to record a sack and forced fumble, which ultimately resulted in a safety.

ROAD GRINDERS

The Hawkeye rushing attack churned out 381 yards in consecutive victories over Purdue and Wisconsin -- the most in a two-game stretch since 2020 (226 vs. Michigan State, 235 vs. Minnesota). Iowa's 200 yards against the Badgers are the most since 2008.

Iowa finished with 179 yards against Rutgers on Nov. 11 against the nation's 10th-ranked defense and 163 yards against the Huskers' fifth-ranked rushing defense. Nebraska entered the game allowing 86.5 yards per game.

The Hawkeyes rushed for 254 yards against Western Michigan on Sept. 16 -- the most for the program since 2019 versus Middle Tennessee State (351 yards).

D CREATES HAVOC

After combining for three sacks and 24 tackles for loss in Iowa's first five games, the Hawkeye defense created havoc in Week 6 against Purdue. Iowa finished with a season-high six sacks (by five different players) and had a season-high 12 tackles for loss, matching the defense's performance in the Music City Bowl victory over Kentucky.

DL Logan Lee had career highs across the board, finishing with 10 tackles, 2.5 TFL and two sacks. It was his first career game with 10+ tackles.

DE Joe Evans finished with seven tackles, including a career-best 4.5 TFL and one sack. The 4.5 TFL are tied for the fourth most in a game nationally this season.

1-2 PUNCH

Iowa linebackers Jay Higgins and Nick Jackson have been the definition of productive for the Hawkeyes in 2023. The duo have combined for 254 tackles this season, the most by a Power 5 tandem nationally.

In all games, Higgins has 155 tackles -- the most by a Power 5 player. The 155 tackles are the fourth-most in a single season in program history, trailing only Andre Jackson (171), Abdul Hodge (158) and Chad Greenway (156).

Higgins has led or tied for the team lead in tackles in 11 of Iowa's 13 games.

In Big Ten contests, Higgins had a league-best 109 tackles -- 21 more than Northwestern's Bryce Gallagher. Higgins averaged 12.1 tackles per game in nine league games.

Both Higgins and Jackson earned All-Big Ten honors and both were named to the Lombardi Award Midseason Watch List; Higgins was a semifinalist for the Butkus Award.

QB DEAC

Wisconsin transfer Deacon Hill took the reins of the Iowa quarterback position when Cade McNamara departed with a lower body injury in the first quarter of the Week 5 game against Michigan State. Hill completed 11-of-27 passes for 115 yards and his first career touchdown -- a 13 yarder to Erick All.

In his first eight career starts, Hill has posted a 6-2 record. He is 115-of-233 for 1,096 yards with five touchdowns and six interceptions. Four of Hill's five touchdowns have gone to Hawkeye tight ends.

The California native had his best game as a Hawkeye, completing a career-high 20-of-31 passes for 223 yards against Rutgers. He had a 10-yard touchdown pass to WR Kaleb Brown -- his fourth touchdown pass of the season and second in as many games. Against Illinois, Hill completed 19-of-29 attempts for 167 yards and one touchdown.

Hill was recruited to Wisconsin by Iowa senior special assistant to the head coach Jon Budmayr. As a prep, Hill threw for 3,102 yards and 33 touchdowns and ran for 461 yards and 13 touchdowns as a junior. He played in only three games during his COVID-shortened senior season.

SAFETY X 3

Iowa recorded its third safety of the season in the first quarter against Illinois when DL Joe Evans sacked Illini quarter John Paddock in the end zone to give the Hawkeyes a 2-0 lead. It is the first time since 2018 that Iowa has had three safeties in a single season.

The team's second safety of the season came in the road win at Wisconsin when DB Sebastian Castro came on a blitz and DL Yahya Black's sack forced a fumble in the end zone (that was recovered by the Badgers).

Iowa's defense has scored 12 points in 2023 via one pick-six and the three safeties.

DeJean returned a punt 54 yards for a potential game-winning touchdowns against Minnesota, but it was taken off the scoreboard following instant replay after officials deemed DeJean used an invalid fair catch signal.

T.O. CENTRAL

Iowa's defense forced multiple turnovers in three consecutive games in wins over Michigan State, Purdue and Wisconsin. For the season, the Hawkeyes are -4 in the turnover battle this season (19-15). Iowa forced three turnovers in Weeks 1-3, eight from Weeks 5-7, one in Weeks 8-12, and three in Week 12 at Nebraska.

The Hawkeyes forced a season-high four turnovers in Week 5 against Michigan State and followed with two more interceptions in Week 6 against Purdue. The four takeaways versus the Spartans were the most forced since 2021 against Penn State. Iowa had two fumble recoveries and a fourth-quarter interception (Ethan Hurkett) in Lincoln, turning the turnovers into six points.

Iowa picked off three Spartan passes on interceptions from Cooper DeJean, Sebastian Castro and Jermari Harris. They were the most turnovers by the unit since 2021 against Northwestern.

DeJean and LB Jay Higgins both had interceptions against Purdue and the Hawkeyes forced a fumble and Castro had his third interception to seal the road win at Wisconsin. Iowa also had a safety on a Yahya Black sack against the Badgers -- its second of the season.

His 18 stops in Happy Valley were the most by a Hawkeye since Jack Campbell had 18 tackles against Colorado State in 2021 and they are tied for the 10th-most nationally in a game this season.

CHEEZ-IT CITRUS BOWL NOTES

HAWKEYE LEGACIES

Iowa has seven players on its 2023 roster whose father played for the Hawkeyes: DB Amare Bickham (Lloyd, 1993-95), LB Eric Epenesa (Epenesa, 1997), DE Joe Evans (Spence, 1989), LB Jackson Filer (Rodney, 1993-96), LB Jayden Montgomery (Jerry, 1998-02), QB Tommy Poholsky (Tom, 1986-89) and LS Liam Reardon (Bill, 1993-96).

Epenesa's brother, A.J., played at Iowa from 2017-19.

RB Max White is the great, great grandson of Max Hawkins, a member of University of Iowa's famed "Ironmen" team in 1939 that included Iowa Heisman Trophy winner Nile Kinnick.

Four Hawkeyes had relatives that played for the Hawkeyes -- OL Griffin Liddle's father, Josh, wrestled at Iowa, DL Andrew Kraus' father, Matt, played baseball, DL Max Llewellyn's brother, Luke, played baseball at Iowa and TE Jalyn Thompson's father, Rod, played basketball.

EXPERIENCE ON DL

The Hawkeyes return two starters on the defensive line in 2023 in Joe Evans and Logan Lee. The duo started all 13 games for during the 2022 season and they have a combined 58 career starts.

Evans tied for the team lead with 6.5 sacks last season and he finished with 41 tackles, including 8.5 tackles for loss. The Ames, Iowa, has 41 tackles and team-bests in TFL (9.5) and sacks (5.5) in 2023, giving him 24 sacks for his career. Evans had a career-high seven tackles at Penn State and vs. Purdue and a career-best 4.5 TFL against the Boilermakers.

Lee, who has started 40 consecutive games -- the third most by an interior defensive lineman nationally -- had career highs in tackles (10), TFL (2.5) and sacks (2) in Iowa's Homecoming win over Purdue in Week 6.

DE Deontae Craig tied for the team lead with 6.5 sacks and had 10 TFL in a reserve role in 2022. He also forced three fumbles and had 31 tackles a season ago. Craig has 51 tackles, three sacks and 5.0 TFL in 2023.

DYNAMIC DREW

Kicker Drew Stevens' sophomore season has made 18-of-26 field goal attempts this season. The 18 field goals are tied for the second-most in the Big Ten and tied for 31st nationally.

In Week 10 against Northwestern, Stevens made a game-winning 53-yard field goal with 14 seconds remaining to give Iowa a 10-7 win at Wrigley Field. He was named the Big Ten Special Teams Player of the Week on Nov. 6.

In Week 5 against Michigan State, Stevens tied a career high with four field goals, including a make from 53 yards -- the second-longest of his career. The 53-yarder is tied for the ninth-longest in program history. Stevens made three field goals in the win over Rutgers, his third career game with three or more makes. He has 10 games with two or more field goals in his career.

He has made 34-of-44 field goal attempts (77.3 percent) in his career and is 39-of-40 on PATs. He is 4-of-6 from 50-59 yards in his Hawkeye career.

Stevens has two career game-winning field goals. He made a 21-yarder with 28 seconds remaining in a road win at Minnesota in 2022 and a 53-yarder in the road win over Northwestern on Nov. 4 at Wrigley Field.

This season, Stevens has a team and career-high 73 points (18 FG, 19 PAT), which are tied for eighth in the Big Ten. He has had a touchback on 40 of his 53 kickoffs.

As a freshman, Stevens earned freshman All-America honors during the 2022 season after making 16-of 18 field goals -- the most by a Hawkeye freshman all-time (passing Mike Meyer and Nate Kaeding). In the offseason, Stevens added 20 pounds to his 6'1" frame.

The South Carolina native went 7-for-7 from 20-29 yards, 3-for-3 from 30-39 yards, 4-of-6 from 40-49 and 2-for-2 from 50+ in 2022. Stevens finished tops in the Big Ten and 16th nationally with an .889 field goal percentage and he was sixth in the Big Ten in field goals per game (1.23).

Stevens was a semifinalist for the Lou Groza Award for a second straight season (2022, 2023).

Stevens made a career-long 54-yard field goal in Iowa's 33-13 win over Northwestern in 2022. It was one of a career-high four field goal makes against the Wildcats, which led to him earning Big Ten Freshman of the Week and Groza Stars of the Week honors on Oct. 31. The 54-yarder tied for the seventh-longest in program history and was the longest by a Hawkeye since Marshall Koehn drilled a 57-yarder in 2015.

2023 PLAYER COUNCIL

Fifteen players -- three sixth-year players, six seniors and six juniors -- are on the 2023 Player Council. The purpose of the group is to assist in formulating policies and being involved in team decision-making throughout the year. Players were selected following coaching staff and player input.

The group consists of sixth-year student-athletes Joe Evans, Nico Ragaini and Noah Shannon, seniors Kyler Fisher, Jay Higgins, Logan Lee, Cade McNamara, Quinn Schulte and Tory Taylor and juniors Deontae Craig, Cooper DeJean, Jermari Harris, Luke Lachey and Mason Richman.

Punter Tory Taylor's senior season -- his fourth as the Hawkeyes' starting punter -- has 86 punts for a 47.9-yard average in 2023 with 36 punts of 50+ yards (six punts of 60+), 27 being fair caught and 30 being downed inside the 20, 11 inside the 10 and six inside the 5. Taylor only has six touchbacks and opponents average just 8.8 yards per return.

Taylor, who leads the Big Ten and ranks third nationally with his 47.9-yard average, is Iowa's first Ray Guy Award recipient. Taylor broke the Iowa career record for most punts against Illinois in Week 12. He has 288 punts for 13,297 yards -- both Iowa career records (passing Jason Baker).

He was also named to the Ray's 8 for his efforts in Weeks 1, 2, 4 and 5. In Week 4 at Penn State, Taylor punted seven times for 366 yards, including a 62-yard boot. His 52.3 per punt average was a career best.

CHEEZ-IT CITRUS BOWL NOTESHEAD COACH KIRK FERENTZ

Kirk Ferentz (pronounced FAIR-rintz, rhymes with parents) is in his 25th season as Moon Family Head Football Coach at Iowa. He is the dean of NCAA Division I football coaches and is Iowa's all-time winningest coach, surpassing Hayden Fry in 2019. His contract runs through the 2029 season.

- Named Big Ten Coach of the Year four times in his career (2002, 2004, 2009, 2015). Only Michigan's Bo Schembechler (6) has more conference coach of the year awards.
- Guided Iowa to Big Ten titles in 2002 and 2004, and Big Ten West Division titles in 2015, 2021 and 2023.

- Named Woody Hayes, Eddie Robinson, and Bobby Dodd Coach of the Year in 2015. Was a finalist for the Maxwell Football Club, Paul "Bear" Bryant Coach of the Year award.
- Ferentz is third all-time with 196 overall wins as a member of the Big Ten, trailing only Woody Hayes (205) and Amos Alonzo Stagg (Chicago). He has 122 Big Ten wins, which are the third-most all-time, trailing only Woody Hayes (153) and Bo Schembechler (143).
- Named the 2002 Associated Press and Walter Camp National Coach of the Year and AFCA Regional Coach of the Year.
- Iowa has made two BCS bowl appearances, including a 24-14 win in the 2010 FedEx Orange Bowl, and one CFP Bowl (2016).
- Iowa has played in 12 January bowl games with five January bowl victories (2004 Outback Bowl, 2005 Capital One Bowl, 2009 Outback Bowl, 2010 FedEx Orange Bowl, 2019 Outback Bowl).
- Iowa has posted a 187-96 (.653) overall mark and a 118-71 (.617) Big Ten record since 2001. Ferentz has placed in the top one-half of the conference 17 times, including Big Ten titles in 2002 and 2004, a second-place finish in 2009, and West Division titles in 2015, 2021 and 2023.
- At Iowa, Ferentz holds an overall record of 196-118 (.624) and a 122-85 (.589) mark in Big Ten games. He is Iowa's all-time winningest football coach with 196 wins. In 26 seasons as a college head coach, he holds a career mark of 208-139 (.599), giving him the fourth most wins among active head coaches.
- The only Division I head coach to coach three sons at the same college. Brian, an assistant coach since 2012 and Iowa's offensive coordinator, was a Hawkeye letterman from 2003-05. James was a three-year starter on the Hawkeye offensive line before graduating in May, 2013. Steve was a senior offensive lineman in 2016. James Ferentz is in his eighth NFL season as a member of the New England Patriots. Steve Ferentz is in his first season as a member of coaching staff at the University of South Dakota (outside linebackers coach).

CHEEZ-IT CITRUS BOWL NOTES

PHIL PARKER'S IOWA DEFENSE

- Phil Parker is the best assistant coach in college football. He is the 2023 recipient of the Frank Broyles Award and the AFCA Assistant Coach of the Year. He was also named PFF's top defensive coordinator in college football in April, 2023.
- Since Parker took over as Iowa's defensive coordinator, Iowa is second in the Big Ten and fifth nationally in points (18.41), first in the Big Ten and fourth nationally in total offense (322.44) and the unit leads the nation in interceptions (184).
- Iowa's defense has allowed 400 yards or less in 27 straight games dating back to the 2021 season -- the longest active streak nationally.
- Iowa is 18-4 under Parker all-time when returning an interception for a touchdown.
- The Hawkeyes have top-six scoring defenses nationally in three of the past four years. The scoring defense has ranked in the top 20 in the nation in each of the last eight years.
- Iowa's 3.986 yards per play during the 2022 season were the lowest by any team at the FBS level since Florida State's 3.853 in 2012.
- In 2022, the Hawkeyes led FBS in points per drive (1.09), yards per pass attempt (5.3), yards per rush (2.8) and ranked second in FBS in points per game (13.3) and yards per game (270.8).
- Iowa's 270.8 yards per game surrendered was the fewest by an Iowa defense since 1981.
- The defense had a 79 percent stop rate -- drives that ended in punts, turnovers or turnovers on downs -- to lead the country.
- Iowa has 234 interceptions since the start of the 2009 season -- the most nationally in that span. The "BallHawks" had a school record 25 interceptions in 2021.
- A principle of Parker's defense is to limit explosive plays, forcing the offense to sustain a drive. Iowa surrendered just 15 explosive plays out of 883 defensive snaps over 13 games during the 2022 season and 15 such plays during the 2023 season.
- Iowa has had six players win the Big Ten Tatum-Woodson Defensive Back of the Year since 2012: Micah Hyde, 2012; Desmond King, 2015; Josh Jackson, 2017; Amani Hooker, 2018; Riley Moss, 2021; Cooper DeJean, 2023).

Hawkeyes Set Records in Bowl Games

Iowa set a team record for points allowed (zero) vs. Kentucky in the 2022 Music City Bowl, while the team punting average of 48.2 yards was also a record (though not an individual record). Iowa's defense also tied the Music City Bowl record with five sacks.

Iowa WR Ihmir Smith-Marsette tied a bowl record with a 98-yard kickoff return for a touchdown vs. Southern California in the 2019 Holiday Bowl. He also set a record for kickoff return average with a 47.3 average (3-142 yards) in the Holiday Bowl.

Iowa set individual and team marks for kickoff return yards in the 2019 Outback Bowl, as Ihmir Smith-Marsette had 150 yards on five returns.

Iowa set team records for the Outback Bowl for fewest first downs allowed (11 vs. Florida, 2017), and fewest penalties (0) and fewest penalty yards (0) vs. Mississippi State in 2019.

Running back Akrum Wadley set Pinstripe Bowl records for kickoff returns (5) and kickoff return yards (171) in the 2017 Pinstripe Bowl win over Boston College.

DE Anthony Nelson tied the Pinstripe Bowl record with two sacks, P Colten Rastetter tied the record for most punts (6), and DB Jack Gervase and DB Josh Jackson tied the bowl record with one interception.

Kickoff returner C.J. Jones set an Orange Bowl record when he returned the opening kickoff 100 yards for a touchdown against Southern California in the 2003 Orange Bowl.

Kickoff returner Jordan Cotton set an Outback Bowl record for kickoff return average when he averaged 42.7 yards (3 for 128 yards) per return in the 2014 Outback Bowl vs. LSU.

Linebacker Abdul Hodge set the Outback Bowl record for most tackles when he registered 19 against Florida in 2006.

Punters Nick Gallery (1996) and Jason Baker (1997) established bowl records for longest punt in two of Iowa's bowl games. Gallery had a 59-yard punt in the 1996 Alamo Bowl and Baker had a 76-yard punt in the 1997 Sun Bowl.

GAME RECAP

Switching from the mighty defensive role they played all season (which included four shutouts), Iowa put on a great offensive show to defeat Oregon State 35-19 in the 43rd Rose Bowl. It was the school's first bowl appearance. Iowa assumed an early lead on game MVP Kenny Ploen's 49-yard run. Ploen also completed 9-of-10 passes. Collins Hagler scored two TDs and totaled a game-best 85 rushing yards. Iowa played Oregon State during the regular season and had also won that encounter, 14-13. The Rose Bowl win was the Big Ten's 10th win in 11 games against its west coast opponents. Over 15,000 Hawkeye fans attended the game.

GAME RECAP

Washington's Jacque Robinson rushed for 142 yards and two touchdowns as the Huskies blanked Iowa 28-0 in the 68th Rose Bowl game. One of the key plays was late in the first half when Iowa tried to convert a fourth-and-seven situation at Washington's 40-yard line. Pete Gales' pass was incomplete, and the Huskies moved the ball downfield and scored with 0:19 left for a 13-0 halftime lead. Iowa's offense turned the ball over five times while Washington had just one turnover. The game marked the third bowl game in school history and the first in 23 years.

GAME RECAP

Iowa's attempt to become the winningest team in Hawkeye history came up just short at the hands of Ty Detmer and Brigham Young. The 1990 Heisman Trophy winner passed for 350 yards in rallying the Cougars back from a 13-0 halftime deficit. Iowa built its lead on two touchdown runs by Mike Saunders. Saunders joined Iowa's exclusive 1,000-yard in a season club. He had 103 yards on 19 carries in the Holiday Bowl to give him 1,022 for the season and 1,476 career rushing yards. Iowa QB Matt Rodgers completed 19 of 28 passes for 221 yards. Jon Filloon caught a career-high seven passes for 107 yards in his final game as a Hawkeye. All-American defensive end Leroy Smith was injured in the first half and never returned to the Iowa lineup. BYU had a chance to win the game with under 30 seconds to play. The Cougars had a first down on the Iowa 18-yard line with the score tied. However, Detmer's final pass was intercepted by Carlos James at the goal line. Teddy Jo Faley led Iowa's defenders with 14 tackles, including 13 solo stops. The Hawkeyes finished the season ranked 10th in both the AP and CNN/USA Today polls with a 10-1-1 record.

GAME RECAP

In its first trip back to San Antonio since losing to California 37-3 in the inaugural 1993 Alamo Bowl, Iowa's defense put on a clinic in stopping the run - one runner in particular. Iowa's group of run-stoppers, headed by sophomore linebackers Matt Hughes and Vernon Rollins, held Doak Walker Award winner and 2,000-yard rusher Byron Hanspard to 64 yards rushing on 18 attempts. In the process the Hawkeyes shut down Texas Tech for a dominating 27-0 win. Hanspard's longest run of the evening was 17 yards, as Iowa controlled the line of scrimmage and limited the Red Raiders to 60 yards total rushing. The victory was Iowa's second shutout of the season (the Hawkeyes also blanked Wisconsin 31-0). And while Hanspard was held in check throughout, Iowa senior Sedrick Shaw was unstoppable as he rushed for 113 yards on 20 carries and one touchdown. Shaw's second touchdown run was impressive, as he broke three tackles enroute to the end zone. Matt Sherman led a consistent Iowa offense with 126 yards passing - 105 to wide receiver Tim Dwight. The Hawkeye ground attack churned for 217 yards. Hughes finished with eight tackles, while Rollins added five. Sophomore Jared DeVries finished with two sacks and five tackles, three for a loss. Shaw and DeVries were named offensive and defensive MVP's, respectively.

GAME RECAP

An incredible defensive effort by Arizona State picked apart Iowa's ninth-ranked offense and earned the Sun Devils a 17-7 win in the Norwest Sun Bowl. The Sun Devil offense overshadowed Iowa, as ASU rushed for 268 yards and compiled 377 yards total offense. RB Tavian Banks sparked the offense unit on Iowa's second possession, breaking loose for a 26-yard run to the ASU 30. Unfortunately, for Iowa, ASU held the nation's fourth-best rusher to only 52 yards in the game. In the second quarter ASU set a seven-play, 55-yard scoring drive into motion, and never looked back. The Sun Devils recovered an Iowa fumble late in the first half and added a field goal for a 10-0 halftime advantage.

Iowa was able to score on a six-play, 87-yard scoring drive, under the direction of quarterback Randy Reiners, late in the fourth quarter. LBs Raj Clark and Matt Hughes led the Iowa defense, each recording 12 tackles, while CB Ed Gibson added 11. Jared DeVries contributed nine tackles, two tackles for loss and one sack. Iowa punter Jason Baker was named Sun Bowl Special Teams MVP after averaging 48.9 yards per punt, including a Sun Bowl-record 76-yarder.

Iowa used record setting performances on both offense and defense to earn a 27-24 win over 12th-ranked Missouri in the 2010 Insight Bowl. The win was the third straight bowl victory for the Hawkeyes and the fourth of the season (in eight games) against a nationally-ranked opponent.

Freshman RB Marcus Coker was the key player for the Iowa offense, rushing 33 times for 219 yards and two touchdowns. Both the rushing attempts and yards established Iowa bowl records.

Sophomore DB Micah Hyde scored the winning points with 5:32 remaining in the game on a 72-yard interception return for a touchdown. That set an Iowa bowl record and ranks as the eighth longest return in school history.

Coker gave the Hawkeyes an early 7-0 advantage with a one-yard scoring run to complete the opening drive. Missouri responded with a field goal on its first drive, but Coker added a 62-yard scoring run early in the second period to give Iowa a 14-3 advantage.

The Hawkeyes added a 34-yard Mike Meyer field goal later in the period before Missouri scored on a 10-yard run to cut Iowa's halftime advantage to 17-10.

Iowa's only offensive points of the second half came midway through the third period when Meyer added a 21-yard field goal for a 20-10 advantage, capping a 93-yard scoring drive. The Tigers cut the lead to 20-17 later in the third quarter and took their first advantage at 24-20 with under a minute left in the period.

Hyde's interception return, the fourth for the Hawkeyes in 13 games, was the only scoring in the final quarter. Stanzi complemented Coker's rushing effort by completing 11-21 passes for 200 yards.

The Iowa defense was led by Greenwood, who collected 11 tackles to go with a second quarter interception. DB Shaun Prater added nine tackles and LB James Morris had seven.

GAME RECAP

No. 14 LSU scored 14-first-half points and ultimately held on to defeat Iowa, 21-14, at the 2014 Outback Bowl in Tampa.

The Tigers drove 77 yards on the first possession of the game to grab a 7-0 advantage.

In the second quarter, LSU capitalized on a Kevonte Martin-Manley fumbled punt at the 39-yard line, scoring seven plays later on a 14-yard rush to take a 14-0 halftime lead.

John Lowdermilk provided a spark in the third quarter, intercepting QB Anthony Jennings and returning his first career theft 71 yards to the 1-yard line. The 71-yard interception return is the 12th-longest in school history. Three plays later RB Mark Weisman scored on a 2-yard rush to cut the deficit to 14-7.

Midway through the fourth quarter, Iowa marched inside the LSU red zone, but a fourth down interception at the LSU 8-yard line thwarted a game-tying scoring drive.

LSU scored its third touchdown on a Jeremy Hill 37-yard rush, his second score of the game, with 1:50 left to play.

Iowa's Jordan Cotton returned the ensuing kickoff a career-long 96 yards to the LSU 4-yard line. The 96-yard kickoff return is the eighth-longest return in school history and longest non-touchdown kickoff return in Iowa annals. Two plays later, QB C.J. Beathard connected with Martin-Manley in the end zone for a 4-yard touchdown for the final score.

QB Jake Rudock completed 9-of-22 passes for 102 yards before leaving in the third period due to injury. Beathard completed 4-of-7 passes for 55 yards and a score.

Weisman rushed 18 times for 37 yards, while TE C.J. Fiedorowicz caught a game-high four passes for 46 yards.

Cotton's 42.7 kickoff return average on three attempts broke the Outback Bowl record for kickoff return average.

Iowa 27, Boston College 20

Dec. 27, 2017, Yankee Stadium, Bronx, New York

Iowa	3	7	7	10	27
Boston College	7	10	0	3	20

GAME RECAP

Iowa forced three turnovers and RB Akrum Wadley amassed a career-high 283 all-purpose yards in a 27-20 Iowa victory in the New Era Pinstripe Bowl at Yankee Stadium. The win snapped Iowa's five-game bowl losing streak.

Wadley, who was named Pinstripe Bowl MVP, totaled an Iowa bowl record 171 yards on five kickoff returns. He also totaled 88 rushing yards and 24 yards receiving.

The game was played in frigid temperatures, 23 degrees at kickoff with wind chills in the lower teens, and is the coldest Pinstripe Bowl on record. The Hawkeyes totaled 200 yards of offense, its lowest total in a bowl game win in program history.

Jake Gervase intercepted his third pass of the season on the third play from scrimmage, which resulted in a Miguel Recinos 24-yard field goal for the game's first score.

Boston College RB A.J. Dillon, who rushed a game-high 32 times for 157 yards, scored his only touchdown on a 4-yard run with five seconds left in the first period.

Iowa answered on its next possession with a TE Noah Fant 8-yard scoring reception from QB Nate Stanley. The TD pass was the 26th for Stanley, tying Brad Banks (2002) for second most in a single season in program annals. The score was set up by Wadley's 72-yard kickoff return, a career best.

The Eagles closed the half scoring 10 straight points -- a 39-yard pass play and a 30-yard field goal -- to take a 17-10 advantage into halftime.

Wadley scored his 35th career touchdown, which tied Sedrick Shaw for second most in program history, on a 5-yard rush midway through the third quarter to even the score.

Both teams traded field goals in the fourth quarter before the Iowa defense collected two turnovers in the final five minutes. With the game tied (20-20), DE Anthony Nelson sacked QB Darius Wade and forced a fumble that DE Parker Hesse recovered in Boston College territory. Three plays later, FB Drake Kulick scored his first career rushing touchdown on a 1-yard plunge into the end zone for the eventual game-winning score.

All-American CB Josh Jackson helped seal the win by collecting his eighth interception of the season, tying a school single-season record, on Boston College's next possession. DB Amani Hooker led Iowa's defense with 12 tackles, including two touchdown-saving stops. He was named to the Associated Press All-Bowl teams for his efforts.

WR Matt Vandenberg played in his 54th career game, more than any other player in school history. Vandenberg ended his career having at least one reception in 32 consecutive games played.

2019 OUTBACK BOWL

Iowa 27, #18 Mississippi State 22

Jan. 1, 2019, Raymond James Stadium, Tampa, Florida

Mississippi State	6	0	13	3	22

GAME RECAP

Iowa posted an impressive 27-22 win over No. 18 Mississippi State at the 2019 Outback Bowl, its second straight bowl victory. The win was Iowa's first over a nationally-ranked opponent this season and first over a ranked bowl opponent since 2010.

Iowa was able to rally from a 6-0 deficit in the first quarter to upend the Bulldogs, due in large part to scoring 17 points off three turnovers and not committing a penalty.

WR Nick Easley was voted the game's MVP, catching eight passes for a career-high 104 yards and two touchdowns -- the first multi-touchdown game of his career.

The Bulldogs got on the board first, kicking a pair of first-quarter field goals. Iowa answered with 17 unanswered points in the second quarter. Miguel Recinos kicked the first (44) of his two field goals, followed by touchdown passes from QB Nate Stanley to Easley (75 yards) and WR Ihmir Smith-Marsette (15 yards). The 75-yard play is an Iowa bowl record for longest completion and longest touchdown reception.

The Bulldogs recaptured the lead early in the third quarter, capitalizing on two Hawkeye turnovers. Mississippi State scored two touchdowns in 18 seconds.

Easley's second TD catch (8 yards) later in the third quarter gave the Hawkeyes a 24-19 advantage, a lead they did not relinquish. Mississippi State and Iowa traded field goals in the fourth quarter.

Title: Leshon Williams has been a pleasant surprise on beleaguered offense

Author: Tyler Tachman

Date: 12/1/23

IOWA CITY — There's irony in the fact that you can learn something about one of Iowa's most durable football players this season when he wasn't healthy.

This was back when Leshon Williams was at Richards High School in Oak Lawn, Illinois. During Williams' senior season, he suffered an Achilles injury that kept him out for a chunk of games. But that didn't keep him from staying engaged with the team during that stretch.

"When he got hurt, he didn't disappear, I guess would be the way to say it," said Jeff Kortz, who was Williams' running backs coach at Richards. "Because sometimes guys get hurt and it's like, well, OK, I'm not playing this week, and guys want to disappear on you. He was never that guy."

Said Williams: "Just me knowing I was a leader on the team. I liked football. These dudes that I went to practice with every day, so it was just like my friends. It was nothing just to go out there and watch. And I was getting some type of fulfillment just from watching my teammates go out there and play."

Williams' handling of that injury is emblematic of how he's responded to challenges while at Iowa, this season included. The Hawkeyes' offense has been wrecked by major injuries to Cade McNamara, Erick All and Luke Lachey. Not to mention that Iowa running backs Kaleb Johnson and Jaziun Patterson have missed time, as well.

But Williams?

He has played in all 12 games. Entering Saturday's Big Ten Championship Game against Michigan (7:15 p.m., FOX), he leads Iowa in rushing attempts (155) and rushing yards (779) and is tied for sixth in receptions (11).

Simply put, Williams has been one of the season's pleasant surprises.

But that doesn't happen if Williams doesn't show resilience.

"When you're competing at this level, not every day is going to go the way you want, not every play is going to go the way you want," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "So if you can't deal with that, it's gonna be tough to have a good career. Certainly, Leshon has done that."

A 3-star recruit in the 2020 recruiting class, Williams was enticed by Iowa with the things you'd expect: tradition, playing in the Big Ten and still being relatively close to home. But also contributing to the decision was the fact that Sebastian Castro, who had been a grade ahead of Williams at Richards, went on to play for the Hawkeyes. Even when Williams was still in high school, Ferentz got a glimpse of what Williams brought to the table.

"I remember visiting his school — he was already committed to us," Ferentz said of Williams. "Just sitting down and talking to him for a little bit. He made some comments that made me feel really good about just things that he was cognizant of and aware of, just in terms of his performance, nutrition, the way he trained, all those kind of things. It's really good when you recruit guys that like football, first and foremost. And then also, are working at it on the field and off the field, and Leshon struck us as that kind of guy."

Early on in his Iowa career, Williams was buried below Tyler Goodson on the depth chart. Then in 2022, Williams began the season as Iowa's starting running back. But he dealt with personal matters, missing Iowa's game against Nevada after the death of his father. Freshman Kaleb Johnson also burst onto the scene and gained traction as Iowa's featured running back.

That led to an offseason in which Williams was overshadowed by Johnson. But Ferentz hinted at Williams' value in August, saying, "Leshon is practicing about as good as I've seen him ever right now."

But that wasn't evident early in the season. He had just seven rushing attempts in Iowa's first two games combined, the latter of which he recorded just one carry. In between that one-carry game against Iowa State and a matchup with Western Michigan, Iowa running backs coach Ladell Betts spoke with Williams.

"He said, sometimes it can be like that," Williams recalls of Betts' message. "Don't let it get to you. Just stay in the game and you never know, stay ready. When your opportunity comes, just be ready."

He was ready that very next game against Western Michigan, rushing for 145 yards in the absence of Johnson.

Then against Michigan State two games later, Williams made an egregious mistake. During the second half, he fumbled the ball, Michigan State recovered and took it for a go-ahead touchdown. If it had not been for Cooper DeJean's heroic punt return touchdown later, Williams' blunder could've cost Iowa the game.

Following a practice that next week, Ferentz pulled Williams to the side.

"He was telling me that I was better than what I was putting out there," Williams said of Ferentz's message. "So after that game, and after talking to him, that kinda motivated me to do better."

Since then, Williams has rushed for more than 70 yards in four of the last seven games, two of which exceeded the century mark. His explosion for an 82-yard touchdown against Wisconsin was crucial. In Iowa's final game of the regular season, his 22-yard run with less than one minute remaining helped set up Marshall Meeder's game-winning field goal.

"I always felt like I was capable of doing what I can do every time I step on the field," Williams said. "I just needed the opportunity and (to) stay healthy. But I could say, as the games keep going, as the season keeps going longer and more I keep playing, it feels like it keeps getting easier and better."

There is another layer to Williams. His sense of humor is revealed during meetings with the media.

After Iowa's game against Western Michigan, Williams probably overestimated reporters' physical capabilities in an effort to praise the offensive line: "Any of y'all could've ran through those holes."

After the win over Nebraska, he was asked a question about Iowa's game against Northwestern earlier this season and said: "I barely remember that game. I ain't gonna lie to you."

Speaking about Meeder, who hadn't attempted a kick this season before his game-winner, Williams said: "I got faith in him, too. I got faith in every one of my teammates. It could've been the ball boy. At the end of the day, they're a Hawkeye."

Kortz, Williams' high school running backs coach, said: "I get a kick of watching his interviews now. Because his interviews are funny to me because those are the same things — if he was sitting at the table right now eating dinner with us or having lunch with us here at the house — (it's) the same things he would say."

Asked about that side of his personality, Williams said: "I can be funny to some people. It depends. You gotta be one of the people that I be with on a normal basis. So it just depends. I ain't no comedian or nothing. But I mean, the people that I hang out with, they probably think I'm funny. But it's just me. I don't know. I don't force it."

Iowa (10-2) is a heavy underdog against a Michigan team that is 12-0 this season and has national championship aspirations. For the Hawkeyes to pull off a major upset, Williams breaking free for one or more explosive runs would certainly help. The intangibles, such as perseverance, will also likely be key.

Much like Iowa's season as a whole, Williams is a testament to that.

"Ever since that bad play (against Michigan State), he's done nothing but play really, really well," Ferentz said. "He's playing his best football of his career. And that's what we hope all of our guys do."

Title: 'Story of our Season:' How Iowa persevered through injuries, adversity to win the West

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 11/20/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — The moment of realization first hit the sidelines, then echoed throughout Kinnick Stadium with 35 seconds left.

Iowa's players huddled around Brian Ferentz as a delay of game penalty was issued by the officiating crew. Players scuffed up the departing offensive coordinator's hair, then coach Kirk Ferentz stepped in. The father and son shared a handshake, then a prolonged hug.

After quarterback Deacon Hill knelt following the final snap to close out a 15-13 win against Illinois, left tackle Mason Richman doused Brian Ferentz with a jug of Powerade and guard Rusty Feth launched it 15 yards away. In the tunnel to the locker room, the much-maligned assistant embraced several players, including quarterback Cade McNamara and tight end Erick All, who are out for the season with injuries. In the locker room, the Big Ten West Division trophy sat for all to see.

It was the final game at Kinnick for Brian Ferentz, a former team captain in 2005, assistant since 2012 and offensive coordinator for the last seven years. He was ousted by President Barbara Wilson and interim athletics director Beth Goetz on Oct. 30, effective at season's end. It was an emotional day for the offensive coordinator from the moment he arrived at the "Hawk Walk" two hours before kickoff to the locker room celebration that lasted well past the Victory Polka.

"I was proud of him," Kirk Ferentz said. "He's been admirable in the way he's handled a very tough situation. And I'm not quite sure I know how he's done it, but I'm really proud of him as a dad. And can't say enough about that. But I do try to keep things separate. I'm really proud of him as a head coach."

In a season that culminated with the final Big Ten West championship, the No. 16 Hawkeyes (9-2, 6-2 Big Ten) have persevered despite a level of adversity that would crush most programs. Ranging from multiple suspensions following a gambling probe to a relentless number of injuries to Brian Ferentz's firing — and an offense that ranks last nationally — the Hawkeyes never wavered on their commitment to one another.

"When you're hit with so many obstacles like that, it's hard not to feel bad for yourself," linebacker Jay Higgins said. "But I feel like our No. 1 focus at the end of the day is figuring out a way to win games. You can really rally a team that wants to win. I feel like we have a lot of guys who only care about winning the game. They don't care who's out there."

The best way to describe Iowa's season metaphorically is through Biblical and historical figures. First comes Job, God's faithful but scorned servant. The Hawkeyes were tortured by the football gods throughout this calendar year from suspensions to season-ending injuries.

Every day provided a test, yet the players kept their faith and trusted in one another.

"Plenty of struggles," said Logan Lee, starting defensive tackle and devout Christian. "Plenty of ups and downs. The biggest thing is just keep fighting, keep trusting in the plan that God has for us."

Then there's Rasputin, the heretical faith healer and advisor to final Russian Empress Alexandra. Rasputin survived a stabbing, multiple poisonings and gunshots — all in the same night — before he was thrown off a bridge and finally drowned. No matter how many times the Hawkeyes are beaten and left for dead, they come back for more.

"We have battled so much adversity and I am just so proud of every single person in that locker room — players, coaches, every single person — that's why it just means more," said sixth-year defensive end Joe Evans. "I have played on some really great teams. This group battled adversity. We just keep fighting. We just keep coming and coming. I can't say it enough. I am so proud of these guys."

The proof of their collective resilience is in the numbers. This year, Iowa is 9-2 overall and 4-1 in games decided by a touchdown or less. The only loss came after a last-minute touchdown was reversed in controversial fashion on replay against Minnesota. The Hawkeyes have won 14 of their last 17 games and are 17-1 in November since 2019.

The Hawkeyes' offense also ranks last nationally in yards per game (245.4) and averages just 18.5 points. The scoring metric is why Brian Ferentz was dismissed. In February, former athletics director Gary Barta, who officially supervised him because of university nepotism rules, altered the assistant's contract by halting his two-year rollover and installing performance objectives that included an average of 25 points per game and seven victories.

"This being his last game in Kinnick, I couldn't be happier for the guy," Hill said. "I haven't been this grateful to play for a coach in my whole life. I am extremely grateful to play for him. I love that guy to death."

Then there are the injuries. McNamara, a transfer from Michigan, injured his right quad on Aug. 12 which prevented him from scrambling, bootlegs, rollouts or even traditional dropbacks. Then on Sept. 30, McNamara tore his left ACL to end his season.

On Sept. 16, tight end Luke Lachey broke his leg in gruesome fashion. On Oct. 14, tight end Erick All suffered a torn ACL on a low hit from a Wisconsin linebacker. Perhaps most painful of all, Nagurski finalist Cooper DeJean — a likely consensus All-American cornerback — broke his right leg in practice on Wednesday while working with the offense.

There are others on offense who have missed significant time, including running backs Kaleb Johnson (ankle) and Jaziun Patterson (soft tissue), receiver Diante Vines (leg), center Logan Jones (ankle) and guard Nick DeJong (elbow).

"Not just individually, but as a team, we have gone through a lot this year with injuries and whatever else," Hill said. "I think it just shows the resiliency of this team and how determined everybody is. We just keep pushing forward each and every day.

"It has got to be the story of our season."

Perhaps Hill's growth is the most pivotal. Through his first four games as Iowa's primary quarterback, he completed just 36.7 percent of his passes for 94.5 yards per game. In the last three, Hill has completed 65.3 percent for 151.7 yards per game.

"It has just been amazing seeing him progress," Johnson said. "He was at Wisconsin last year and he didn't really get a lot of playing time. He didn't get a lot of playing time when he first got here. For Cade to get hurt was kind of a devastating moment, but it was an opportunity for him."

Hill's improvement also coincides with the rise of receiver Kaleb Brown. After playing sparingly for most of the season, the Ohio State transfer stepped in for Vines against Northwestern and caught a 23-yard pass to set up the game-winning field goal. In the last two weeks alone, Brown has 14 targets.

'Look at us now'

The love and admiration Iowa's players have for departing offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz belies the statistics. That's not the case for Kirk Ferentz.

In the locker room Saturday, nobody could find a football, so defensive coordinator Phil Parker held up an Iowa helmet and looked at the head coach. Parker broke down when he talked of his long-time colleague, who passed Michigan legend Bo Schembechler for third place in wins by a Big Ten coach with 195. Kirk Ferentz tried to downplay it — eventually, a football was found — but the moment touched the 68-year-old coach.

"It's a Michigan State guy giving a ball to the guy who moved past a guy from Michigan," Ferentz quipped about the three-time All-Big Ten safety. "A little self-serving on his part, quite frankly.

"Think about Phil Parker. He's been here 25 years now. In this environment of coaching, good luck finding — he's had two jobs now in his career. So there aren't many guys smart enough to know they've got a good thing. Phil has and what a job he's done."

The Hawkeyes have given up two touchdowns in the last five games. They lost two-year starting defensive tackle Noah Shannon, who wagered on the Iowa women's basketball team in the Final Four last spring and it cost him the entire season. Four defenders from last year's squad are on NFL rosters, including first-round picks Jack Campbell and Lukas Van Ness, plus three other starters left the program.

Yet, Iowa ranks second in yards per play allowed (4.0), third in scoring defense (12.4) and seventh in total defense (281.4 yards per game). That's even playing 774 defensive snaps because of the offensive struggles this year.

But never did the players engage in self-pity or finger-pointing. After a 31-0 loss at Penn State in Week 4, Evans laid down the mental framework for this season.

"How many guys we have on the team; 120 guys against anybody," Evans said that night. "We're going to stay together and we're going to get through this together as a whole team."

Two months later, mission accomplished — at least for the Big Ten West.

"I said that all of our goals are still out there in front of us," Evans said Saturday. "I'm sure they laughed at that. But look at us now."

Title: Time to honor Phil Parker with Broyles Award

Author: Pat Harty

Date: 11/15/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa – As surprising as this might seem, Phil Parker has never won the Frank Broyles Award, which is given annually to the top assistant coach in college football.

Barring a late and unlikely decline on defense, that should change this season.

Parker is one of 57 assistant coaches on this year's nominee list for the Broyles Award, which was created in 1996. But you'd be hard-pressed to find another assistant coach on offense or defense that is more deserving of the award than Parker.

Iowa's veteran defensive coordinator is widely regarded as one of the best defensive coordinators in college football, if not the best.

His defenses are known for being tough, physical, fundamentally sound, and always prepared for just about anything.

Iowa has allowed just one touchdown over the past 16 quarters, three touchdowns over the past six games and just 11 touchdowns in 10 games this season, which is the fewest in the nation.

Iowa's defense is giving up just 4.0 yards per play – the lowest figure in the nation – heading into Saturday's home finale against Illinois.

Iowa's defense only allowed 127 yards in last Saturday's 22-0 victory over Rutgers at Kinnick Stadium. It was Iowa's third shutout since the start of the 2022 season.

Iowa senior linebackers Jay Higgins and Nick Jackson have combined for 200 tackles this season, the most by a Power 5 tandem nationally.

Iowa's defense led the nation with seven defensive touchdowns last season, and it was ranked in the top 12 in the nation in scoring defense (second), total defense (second), pass efficiency defense (fourth), passing yards per game (sixth) first down defense (10), third-down defense (11) and rushing defense (12).

So, a strong case could have been made for Parker to win the Broyles Award last season.

But an even stronger case could be made for him to win it this season, considering the unusual circumstances.

Iowa is 8-2 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten, and a victory over Illinois on Saturday, or against Nebraska on Nov. 24th in Lincoln, Nebraska, would give Iowa its second Big Ten West Division title outright in the last three years.

Iowa is in this position despite having one of the worst offenses in the country.

The combination of Parker's defense and LeVar Woods' special teams has been enough to overcome the offensive deficiencies in most of the games.

The Iowa defense has very little margin for error with the offense scoring so few points, and that's a lot of weight to carry.

Iowa's defense set a program record and led the nation with 25 interceptions in 2021.

Parker was an outstanding defensive back for Michigan State in the 1980s, earning first-team All-Big Ten honors three times.

He wasn't flashy as a player, and his defenses are the same way, more substance than style.

It's easy to get swept away by the big numbers on offense, and there are some highly successful offensive coordinators that have been nominated for this year's award.

However, holding a team like Rutgers to just 127 yards and zero points is as impressive as an offense gaining a bunch of yards and scoring a bunch of points.

Parker was a member of Kirk Ferentz's first coaching staff at Iowa in 1999, and then was promoted to defensive coordinator in 2012.

He also coaches the Iowa defensive backs, and excels in that role, too.

The Broyles Award isn't supposed to be a life-time achievement award, but at some point, the 60-year-old Parker deserves to be honored as the top assistant coach in college football.

This season would be the perfect time to finally recognize Parker because of how well his defense has performed under tough circumstances.

Just think of the players that Iowa had to replace on defense from last season; a list that includes linebackers Jack Campbell and Seth Benson, defensive linemen Lukas Van Ness and John Waggoner, and defensive backs Riley Moss and Kaevon Merriweather.

Senior defensive tackle Noah Shannon also has missed the entire 2023 season while serving a suspension for gambling on sports.

And then news broke on Wednesday that star junior cornerback Cooper DeJean will miss the rest of the season because of a lower leg injury, which he reportedly suffered in practice on Wednesday.

The loss of DeJean is a massive blow for Parker's defense, but part of being a great coach is overcoming adversity.

Phil Parker will regroup and have his defense ready for Illinois on Saturday.

He doesn't coach to win awards, but it's long overdue for Parker to be recognized as the best assistant coach in college football.

Title: Tory Taylor punted his way into Hawkeye history – and now for his grand finale

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 11/16/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Midway through the second quarter of the 2023 season opener, the Hawkeyes led 14-0 and were forced to punt for the first time this season.

Iowa punter Tory Taylor strolled between the hashmarks at Kinnick Stadium to a standing ovation. This Saturday, the 26-year-old Australian who has his own T-shirt — Punting is Winning — will wear his Iowa No. 9 for the final time at home, and the cheers likely will dwarf those that welcomed him earlier this year on Labor Day Weekend.

“I don’t know another place than the University of Iowa where specialists, particularly the punter, are heralded as much as him,” Iowa special teams coordinator LeVar Woods said.

It’s an unusual phenomenon for fans to celebrate a punter. Of all the positions on a football team, the punter represents offensive failure. Yet for No. 16 Iowa, the punter is a strategic weapon to be deployed — forcing opponents to work for every inch against one of the nation’s top defenses. And Taylor is perhaps the best to ever do it in Iowa City.

At the end of this season, Taylor will own the school mark for most career punts. At the Big Ten level, his 2021 and 2022 seasons each set records for the most punting yards in a season. This year, Taylor is on track to break his own record again.

“It’s ridiculous,” defensive end Joe Evans said, recalling a conversation with Taylor after a game. “He had some just phenomenal punts. I mean, he does every week, but I was sitting there and talking to him and like, ‘How does that feel just to be able to go out there and punt a ball like frickin’ 70 yards?’”

Taylor can punt for distance with the best of them. But what separates him on the field is his precision. Then there’s his off-field contributions that elevated his career to one people will discuss for generations.

“His story is so unusual, it puts a smile on my face,” Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. “Talking about the ills of college football right now, he was the anti-story of that.”

As a young man in Melbourne, Australia, Taylor entered the working world eight years ago and was trying to figure out his next step life. He had a big leg when it came to kicking objects and swung by ProKick Australia to see where his natural ability ranked.

“When I first got there, I saw guys hitting a few nice spirals and I was about to turn around and go back home,” Taylor said. “I thought, this isn’t for me. But I hit a few good balls. And my coach said, ‘Hey, you’ve got what it takes; it’s just whether you want to do it.’ And I gave it a bit of thought. And when I say a little bit of thought, it took me about 18 months to decide that just because at the time I was young. I was 19, 20, and I wasn’t really sure what I wanted to do.”

Taylor’s family pledged to support his decision and his internal debate turned into a conversation with his father.

“He said don’t be one of those guys and sitting in the bars or the pub in 20, 30 years going I should have or would have or could have,” Taylor said. “It’s like you either do it or you don’t.”

After dedicating himself to punting at ProKick, Taylor had suitors to punt for American universities, but Iowa was the one that showed the most interest. In early 2020, Woods traveled to Australia to meet Taylor and watch him punt in person. Woods, a former NFL linebacker, stunned Taylor by his mere presence.

“I was a little nervous, because I never really kicked in front of a coach, especially a coach that I might have to go over and perform in games,” Taylor said. “That was quite the experience.”

Taylor signed with the Hawkeyes, and a month later the world shut down because of the COVID-19 pandemic. Everything was in flux worldwide, but especially for a 22-year-old Australian traveling to Iowa. Taylor first had to quarantine in Sydney, then, once he arrived in Iowa, he was penned up in an Iowa City hotel room. By mid-August, the Big Ten canceled the football season. But six weeks later, the league restarted the season with no fans in attendance.

By the time Taylor pulled on his Tigerhawk helmet against Purdue, it marked the first time he had ever seen an American football game, let alone played in one. Outside of a rules violation in the season finale — Taylor kicked a ball sitting on the ground — he punted like a veteran. Taylor was named the Big Ten's top punter and was a second-team All-American. Of his 40 punts, 18 landed inside the 20-yard line and 20 were fair catches.

In 2021, Taylor became well known. In a top-10 showdown against Iowa State, Taylor averaged 51.1 yards on eight punts, parking five of them inside the 20 (6, 9, 10, 13, 20). Four weeks later in a top-five battle with Penn State, six of his nine punts landed inside the 20, including the 1, the 2, the 3, the 8 (twice) and the 12.

On his talk show, longtime former NFL punter Pat McAfee routinely touted Taylor, calling him “a f—ing weapon.”

“Field position wins you games,” McAfee said after the Penn State game. “Tory Taylor wins you games.”

Taylor was just as impactful in 2022. In the season opener against South Dakota State, Taylor parked seven of his 10 punts inside the 20-yard line, and two led to safeties in a 7-3 win. By season's end, Taylor was named a first-team All-American by The Athletic and Football Writers Association of America.

This year, Taylor has become even more consistent. He leads the nation in total punts (63) and punts inside the 20-yard line (24), and his three touchbacks are the fewest among regular punters. He ranks second with 24 punts of 50-plus yards, and his 47.6-yard average ranks fifth.

Perhaps no Iowa punter ever had a better day than Taylor at Wisconsin. With a stiff north wind that averaged 17 miles per hour and gusted up to 40 mph, Taylor knocked six of his 10 punts inside the Wisconsin 20-yard line and three inside the 6-yard line.

“He rides on our bus with us,” Iowa linebacker Jay Higgins said afterward about Taylor's impact. “As a defense that just opens up our playbook.”

Taylor understands his pursuit of excellence begins with constant improvement. He regularly talks with former Iowa punter Jason Baker and former Iowa All-American kicker Nate Kaeding to refine his mental approach. Kaeding, a two-time Pro Bowl kicker who ranks 13th all time in NFL field-goal accuracy, regularly grabs coffee with Taylor and considers himself a sounding board.

“The biggest challenge, and I can kind of relate to it as I got into the second half of my Iowa career, is everybody's telling you how great you are,” said Kaeding, who won the 2002 Groza Award. “But how do you sort of internalize your own metrics and scorecard and how do you challenge yourself and find unique ways to find those marginal gains and improvements throughout the course of the season and season to season?”

“I just kind of help and keep him grounded and create his own sort of system of goals internally and kind of block off that noise. Because, oftentimes, that noise of everybody telling you how great you are can be just as compromising, if not more so than the opposite side of that, where everybody's telling you how awful you are.”

It takes more than punting a ball to build a relationship with fans. That wasn't a problem for Taylor, who has natural charisma and instantly won over just about every person he met.

“He's got the advantage of being Australian,” Ferentz quipped. “He's got the accent, all that stuff. He's got a great personality. I think he's just a likable person. I especially like him when he punts the ball well.”

In 2021, when athletes became eligible to earn income on their name, image and likeness, Taylor was left out as an international student because of visa restrictions. Midwestern T-shirt company Raygun had partnered with Iowa and Iowa State athletes and wanted to work with Taylor, but there was no way for him to profit. Ultimately, the punter found the perfect outlet to produce one of Raygun's most popular T-shirts and send his earnings to a worthy cause.

Count the Kicks was formed in 2008 by five women in central Iowa who lost their daughters to stillbirth or infant death. Among their goals is to encourage expectant mothers to have daily kick-counting sessions during the third trimester of pregnancy. Raygun owner Mike Draper told Taylor about the organization, and the punter liked both the message and the name. By that December, Taylor's T-shirts had sent more than $11,000 to Count the Kicks. Taylor continues to partner with the group.

"I've always really appreciated the support that the fans have given me in terms of the T-shirts," Taylor said. "It's all going to a great cause."

"Over the course of his career, he's been exceptional, and that's just on-the-field stuff," Woods said. "The off-the-field stuff speaks for itself. That guy's a phenomenal human being. I've seen unbelievable growth in him as a person, maturity-wise, and then leadership-wise. He's in a really good place right now."

It's no surprise Taylor will embark on an NFL career after this season. He's at least four years older than most of his teammates and he nearly turned pro last year. His NFL-caliber ability is obvious; Kaeding said Taylor has "exceptional talent."

"I'm just amazed watching him," Woods said. "I've never seen a person own the field the way he owns the field. When he is on and he wants to do what he wants to do, there's no stopping him. It's pretty awesome to watch, but just really excited for him and seeing where that goes."

Taylor concedes he will be emotional and said that leaving his comfort zone in Australia and taking a risk changed his life. For others, the pleasure of watching or coaching Taylor as he makes his final trip to the Tigerhawk at the 50-yard line is just as emotional.

However, Taylor leaves a void that perhaps no one can fully occupy. Saturday, he joins 19 other seniors for their final entry at Kinnick Stadium. Cheers and tears will fill the sold-out environment. However, don't be surprised if the loudest ovation comes for the loquacious punter with a thick Australian accent.

"He deserves it," Evans said. "You see what he does every single Saturday."

Title: It's been uphill climb for Deacon Hill, but his view was great on Saturday

Author: Mike Hlas

Date: 11/11/23

IOWA CITY — Deacon Hill had a 3-1 record as a starting college quarterback before Saturday, yet you couldn't find a person outside the Iowa football program who wasn't a relative to say a kind thing about him.

You've surely heard it, and you may have said it. "Worst college quarterback I've ever seen." "Don't they have anybody else?" And so forth.

Hill's passing accuracy in October had been an oxymoron. The Hawkeyes were staying afloat in the Big Ten West title race despite him and Iowa's offense, not because of it. His statistics were gruesome, and the eyeball test wasn't any better.

Yet, Hill kept coming back for more. He kept showing up at postgame interview sessions, looking straight at us, answering questions without a drop of vinegar, saying he appreciated the opportunity he had here, and promising to keep pushing ahead.

All of which meant little if anything to the outside world, of course, no matter how admirable it was.

The guy had the weight of the world on him football-wise, hadn't taken a snap in a game that counted since his junior year of high school, and was expected to at least be competent in leading an offense against Big Ten competition after Cade McNamara's knee injury against Michigan State.

Hill signed up for all the criticism that comes with being in his position if you aren't great at it from the get-go, but until you've been the recipient of it, you can't know what that feels like. He kept working.

Saturday was the Day of the Defense for Iowa football in its 22-0 stifling of Rutgers at Kinnick Stadium. But, but, but ... Hill quarterbacked five scoring drives. He completed 20 of 31 passes for 223 yards after being a subterranean 37.8 percent for the season two weeks ago.

For at least one day this season, Iowa had an offense. Four hundred and two yards. Thirty-eight minutes and change of possession. A 19-point second half to let everyone in black-and-gold not only exhale in a fourth quarter for a change, but absorb the reality the Hawkeyes are one victory from winning the Big Ten West outright with Hill running the offense.

Top of Form

Bottom of Form

"You talk about resiliency," Iowa Coach Kirk Ferentz said. "I think that's the first word I would use with him because I'm guessing he's probably been hearing a lot of negative stuff out there.

"Instead of worrying about that, he's been focused on trying to get better, working hard with the coaches and practicing better. You hope that's how it works for everybody, and he's certainly right at the front of the list on that."

Hill said he has cut himself off from the outside world other than friends and family. Social media? "Taking it away completely," he said. "There's no need to look at it.

"It's really just talking to people you love and trust."

Hill comes from a fairly amazing family of athletes. His father played basketball at BYU-Hawaii. His mother was a terrific basketball player at the BYU in Utah, one of the school's all-time greats.

His three sisters all played for or currently play for UCLA's women's water polo team and one was a U.S. Olympian. That's a sport that requires serious toughness.

Here Hill is, playing the toughest football position at the toughest level, going through a batch of performances that would try anyone's soul, and completing 20 of 31 passes Saturday for 223 yards. Iowa scored once, twice, thrice, a fourth time, a fifth. The finale was on a touchdown pass from Hill to Kaleb Brown.

"I think today was big," Hill said. "I really felt trust in myself and what I was seeing, trust in what the coaches were telling me."

Then he praised the offensive linemen and offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz.

"A ton of personality from that guy," Iowa offensive tackle Mason Richman said. "I mean, he screamed before we would go out there on the field. And as we got off the field, he's screaming, too. He's a really fun guy to block for."

"All of us support him. We're never going to waver on the guy."

"I don't hear criticism. Maybe he does. But I know one thing. He keeps showing up for work, and that's all I care about."

These are the stories we're supposed to want the most, right? Somebody struggles, catches way too much flak, doesn't buckle, doesn't snarl, keeps believing, and has himself a day.

"We've all been doing the work," Hill said.

That was evident Saturday. Of Iowa's eight triumphs, this was the team win of the season. Now that team is on the verge of earning a spot in the Big Ten's title game.

In perhaps the strangest season this program has seen this century, why wouldn't it gain 402 yards Saturday against the nation's No. 11 defense? Why wouldn't it be on a path to play in Indianapolis in three weeks?

Title: Iowa's Logan Lee keeps faith and family in forefront

Author: Kenna Roering

Date: 10/19/23

Logan Lee hasn't had a sip of soda since Feb. 3, 2012.

After reading Tim Tebow's book, "Through My Eyes," Lee, 11 years old at the time, couldn't help but make a $100 bet with his father, Mitch, that he could stop drinking soda for a year.

A year-long bet turned into over a decade of dedication and a deal that the Orion, Illinois, native plans on sticking to for the rest of his life.

"I just remember as a kid being the most competitive in every area of life, almost a little excessive," Lee said. "Whether that be in a board game, whether that be in a card game, whether that be playing soccer or playing football, I was just always trying to compete in every aspect."

Lee's competitive nature is just one reason why the fifth-year defensive end has started the last 34 games for the Hawkeyes.

Treating this season like his last, the team captain says he is focused on having fun and making a positive impact on every single one of his teammates, whether that's by helping a rookie improve their game, being a good friend, or sharing his Christian faith. Kirk Ferentz said having Lee's leadership on the team makes the longest-tenured head coach in FBS feel like he's "coaching a 40-year-old man."

As the only married player on the Hawkeyes, Lee's priorities stretch much further than winning on the field.

"There's so much more to this than just football ... So being available, being able to help the younger guys, help the older guys just navigate life, it's a great opportunity as an elder," Lee joked.

Path to Iowa

Lee said he didn't watch much college football when he was a boy, or follow a team, but always had a dream of playing in the NFL.

When he started playing flag football in elementary school, he showed natural talent and a desire to win.

Mitch recalled his son challenging an opposing team member to a race after one of Lee's games in third or fourth grade. The father jokingly told his son that a kid on the other team looked faster than him — and Lee wasn't going home without testing it out.

"I'm talking to the dads and look over, and Logan's walking over towards that huddle. Next thing you know, he and the blonde kid were lined up because they were gonna race," Mitch said. "It was funny to see him walk over there. He wasn't mean, it was just like, 'Hey, my dad says you're faster than me. What do you wanna do?'"

Lee won the race, but Mitch was quick to admit that someone walked in front of his son's opponent and "blocked him for a second."

Lee said he started taking football more seriously in eighth grade when he realized he needed to play in college to reach the NFL.

Lee played tight end and defensive end on Orion High School's varsity team for four years. He holds the career sack record at the school with 35 and earned unanimous all-conference honors on offense and defense for three straight seasons.

As a sophomore, Lee totaled 11 receptions for 120 yards and three touchdowns, along with 28 tackles, 10 tackles for loss, and eight sacks. The two-way player also excelled in wrestling. He won a state title at 220 pounds as a sophomore in February 2017. The next month, Lee went on an unofficial visit to Iowa, and newly-appointed offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz offered him his first scholarship.

Kirk Ferentz said he and the coaching staff knew about Lee and his family early on and liked “everything about him” in the recruiting process.

“So that was just shocking because usually, you build up with non-Power Five teams,” Lee said of getting offered by Iowa. “You build those up, and then the Power Five teams start coming in, but that was my first actual college recognition.”

Michigan offered Lee three days later, and over the course of the next year, he received interest from Notre Dame, Ole Miss, Michigan State, Northwestern, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

Lee’s last visit before choosing Iowa was Wisconsin, which offered him a scholarship on May 24, 2017. Mitch said the visit to Madison went great, but he and his wife were “pretty confident” that their son would end up choosing the Hawkeyes.

Lee planned to go on another visit to Iowa on Saturday, June 24, 2017 — his third visit to Iowa City that month. The Friday before, Lee’s mind was made up.

He told his family he was going to verbally commit to the Hawkeyes during the visit.

Lee’s sister, Ashton, was home at the time from Mankato St. University, where she played volleyball. So, the whole family sat down at the dining table and talked about Lee’s decision to commit to the Hawkeyes, and everyone was in full support.

Lee and his parents drove the hour and 15 minutes to Iowa City and walked into Kirk Ferentz’s office. The athlete was rubbing his sweaty hands nervously on his legs, causing the Iowa coach to ask if everything was OK.

“I’m gonna be a Hawkeye,” Lee responded.

Mitch said Ferentz was surprised and asked him and his wife, Susan, if they were OK with their son committing — the answer was an immediate yes.

Not only did Mitch respect the physicality that Ferentz instilled in his players, but he was also impressed by the coach as a person.

“He is a class act. He always starts with Ash, and to this day, he knows my daughter’s name,” Mitch said. “He will say, ‘How’s Ashton doing?’ It’s like, oh my gosh, how do you remember that?”

A three-star recruit coming out of high school, according to ESPN, Lee felt Iowa was the best place for him to develop as a player and person.

“I really respected the developmental staff and the way they took no-star recruits and small-town kids and developed them into starter-quality individuals,” Lee said.

Lee had great success in his final two years at prep school, combining for 54 receptions, 937 yards, and 18 touchdowns, as well as 120 total tackles, 42.5 tackles for loss, and 27 sacks over that span.

He won another state wrestling title at 285 pounds as a senior, becoming just the third two-time state champion in school history.

Beside Lee through his high school career was his girlfriend and now-wife, Tori.

Tori lived in Geneseo, Illinois, about 30 minutes from Lee’s hometown, when the pair met in seventh grade at a state track meet through mutual friends. Lee instantly thought Tori was cute, but it took some time before he mustered up the courage to talk to her.

“I’m like, ‘Come on, say something, Logan,’” Lee said. “But we’re in seventh grade, so nobody’s saying a word. We’re just walking in silence.”

When Lee finally said something, he proved that first impressions don’t always mean everything.

“I finally muster up the courage to say, ‘Did you see the girl eat it yesterday in the hurdles?’” Lee recalled. “[Tori] stands up, looks at me, and says, ‘That was me’ and then walks away. And I didn’t see her again for another two years.”

The pair reconnected during their freshman year and started dating as sophomores. Tori said she didn’t even know Lee was the same guy from seventh grade until he brought it up three years into the relationship.

Since Lee lived in a different town, Tori's mother asked around to see if anyone had heard of the guy her daughter wanted to hang out with. The only response she got was when she was checking out at Walmart, and a random person butted in and said, "Oh my gosh, the Lees are such a good family. Logan is such a good guy."

Tori's mother questioned her initial good impression of Lee when he came to pick up Tori for the first time in a topless Jeep without doors.

"She was like, 'You did not tell me it was a Jeep,'" Tori said of her mother's reaction. "And then my mom actually sent the picture to my dad because he wasn't home at the time of us driving away, and I will forever keep the screenshot of what he sent back."

Mitch said he warned his son about picking Tori up in the Jeep for the first date, but Lee's only other option was a van, so it was an easy choice for the 16-year-old.

"They're going on the interstate at like 60 miles an hour, and they're passing semis, and they can't talk because there's so much wind," Mitch said. "So the first stage didn't go so well. They've done pretty well since."

Tori attended the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater to run track, while Lee started his college football journey in Iowa City. The couple said being three hours away from each other was difficult, but it helped them develop a deeper appreciation for spending time together.

Lee was hurt for much of his redshirt season in 2019, and a shoulder injury kept him out of spring practices in 2021.

Tori knew how to comfort Lee through his injuries because she tore both her ACLs in high school and had several major surgeries. Along with track, she played volleyball, soccer, and basketball but spent 22 months of her high school career in physical therapy.

"Once you lose your brace, or you're a couple of months into your long therapy, all that support kind of goes away from people because you don't have that physical thing to show," Tori said. "So just knowing that I was going to be there with him through it all, I think was my biggest thing. And just like checking in on him mentally because I feel like a lot of guys don't talk about their feelings in that aspect."

Lee asked Tori to marry him on Dec. 30, 2021, during Iowa's Citrus Bowl trip to Orlando. Lee bought the ring just a day before leaving and proposed at Universal Studios with his teammates watching from afar.

On July 3, 2022, the couple got married at a small chapel in Tori's hometown with just family in attendance. The reception was held at Lee's parents' house.

For their one-year anniversary, Tori and Lee did vow renewals in Punta Cana in the Dominican Republic. Tori said about 120 people attended, including some of Lee's Iowa teammates — linebackers Jack Campbell and Kyler Fisher, tight ends Sam LaPorta and Jackson Frericks, and defensive back Sebastian Castro. Campbell was Lee's best man at the wedding.

"It was a party all week," Tori said of the trip. "It was so much fun but very exhausting."

Tori moved in with Lee and his four roommates — Fisher, Campbell, LaPorta, and Frericks — ahead of the 2022 season. At the time, Tori was a student-teacher in North Liberty, so she had an opposite schedule from the players, who had the middle of the day off.

Tori said she loved seeing how Lee and his teammates interacted and joked with one another. She also appreciated how they all treated her like family.

"I learned my biggest pet peeve is when people put their dirty dishes in the sink when the dishwasher is empty," Tori said of living with the five athletes. "But overall, it was super fun."

Lee said some of his favorite memories with his roommates came during the COVID-19 pandemic when Iowa's strength and conditioning staff dropped off equipment so the group could work out from home.

“We loved our garage workouts together,” Lee said. “It was just so much fun because you had to improvise with a lot of the exercises they were having us do. So we loved bonding through that.”

Tori said she fell in love with the North Liberty community while student teaching, so she and Lee moved there over the summer and now live about 20 minutes from the football facility. Lee may be farther from Kinnick Stadium, but he still cannot escape the elder title.

“He goes to bed at 9:15 or tries to,” Tori said. “I call him ‘old man’ at home too because if we’re not in bed by 9:15, he turns into a crab and stresses out about sleep.”

Fisher lived with the couple in their North Liberty apartment over the summer.

Tori considers Fisher one of her close friends and said she tried to “pull him out of his shell.” Fisher still comes over to Lee’s place for dinner every once in a while. Otherwise, Fisher and other Hawkeye student-athletes typically use Black Card, which gives them access to weekly and daily allowances for food and groceries at local locations in Iowa City.

“It’s kind of sad. I forget that these guys never make home-cooked meals, and they just use Black Card and eat out all the time,” Tori said. “So I always tell Kyler he’s got to come over for a home-cooked meal.”

Faith-driven

Something that’s special to Lee and his wife is their Christian faith. Mitch said his son has been a firm believer in his faith since he was young and teaches him new things all the time, like how to read and interpret scripture.

The defensive end went on missionary trips to Detroit in eighth grade and Houston in his junior year of high school.

“Football is secondary to what his faith is right now, in my opinion, and that’s not a gimmick,” Mitch said.

Since Lee arrived in Iowa City, he has been involved with Athletes in Action (AIA), a college athlete ministry that seeks Christian followers in every sport at the university. He was on the introductory leadership staff as a first-year and has led the group since. Lee says he is thankful for the people in his life that he wouldn’t have met without AIA.

Some of his favorite memories with the group have come from the ministry’s annual Ultimate Training Camp and his two mission trips to Ecuador.

Lee said that any college athlete can attend the Ultimate Training Camp.

“It’s really just trying to break you down physically, mentally, and spiritually so that you have nothing else to rely on other than the strength that you have in Christ,” Lee said of the camp’s purpose.

During AIA’s trips to Ecuador over spring break in 2022 and 2023, Lee and other Hawkeye athletes passed out water filters and shared the gospel with those in need. AIA partnered with Filter of Hope, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization dedicated to providing clean drinking water to families in poverty.

Tori and several Iowa football players — Fisher, Aaron Graves, Steven Stillianos, and Cooper DeJean, to name a few — joined Lee on AIA’s mission trip to Ecuador in March.

Over four days, 88 filters were delivered, 159 people heard the gospel, and 72 people prayed to receive Christ, according to the AIA website.

“So I kind of spearheaded the recruiting aspect. We ended up getting 10 football guys down,” Lee said of this year’s trip. “[The locals we visited] drink water that’s just like black, and it was so eye-opening the first time I went. We don’t have much to complain about in comparison.”

Lee said he tries to encourage anyone who will listen to grow in their faith. Tori said she’s loved watching Lee’s spirituality grow in their relationship and added that his “love for Jesus” is one of her favorite things about him.

“I don’t think he knows yet just how big of an impact he’s had on the football team and a lot of people around him,” Tori said.

Lee credits his faith for the success he's experienced in his college career. So far this season, the defensive end has amassed 30 total tackles, 3.5 tackles for loss, two pass deflections, and two sacks, including a career-best 10-tackle game in Iowa's 20-14 win over Purdue.

Lee said early on in his career he struggled because he tried too hard to be perfect. Now, he's not focused as much on filling the stat sheet but instead cares about having fun and learning from his mistakes.

"You'd see him getting better with each game out there because he's more comfortable and more instinctive," Ferentz said. "Now, he's playing really well for us and is a great leader on top of it."

Title: How Drew Stevens went from soccer standout to crucial part of Iowa's special teams

Author: Tyler Tachman

Date: 11/3/23

IOWA CITY — At halftime of a game during his sophomore season at North Augusta High School, Drew Stevens got word of the decision.

The starting kicker for North Augusta (South Carolina) missed two field goals in the first half, and the team trailed Grovetown (Georgia) 10-0 at halftime. During the break, North Augusta's coach came up to Stevens.

Stevens was told: You're gonna be going in.

A gauge of Stevens' immediate emotions: "I'm like, holy crap, let's go."

By his own approximation, Stevens was 5-foot-6 and 140 pounds at the time. He had only seriously taken on football as a freshman in high school.

It was a far cry from where Stevens is now. The sophomore kicker is a crucial part of Iowa's special teams, which along with Iowa's elite defense has propped up the Hawkeyes as the offense continues to flounder. With four regular-season games remaining this season, the first of which is against Northwestern on Saturday (2:30 p.m., Peacock), Stevens' right leg continues to be pivotal for the Hawkeyes.

But it has taken time for Stevens to get to this point. That includes the game against Grovetown during his sophomore season at North Augusta.

In the second half, Stevens made a field goal and two extra points. North Augusta won the game, 17-16.

"When that happened," Stevens recalls years later, "I was hooked, immediately after that game."

Drew Stevens has Iowa roots

Stevens' mother, Michelle, was outfitted like a true Hawkeye. She wore a yellow wig, along with yellow-and-black striped socks. She sat on the back porch, accompanied by her children, including young Drew, watching Iowa football play Michigan.

At halftime, she made a bold declaration, especially given it was during the fall: If Iowa won, she would jump into the pool. Iowa did, in fact, win.

"I was like screaming crazy," Michelle said.

Michelle's family held her accountable to the vow. She went into the pool, bringing out laughter around her.

Michelle was born in Iowa. She grew up attending games at Kinnick Stadium. At Spirit Lake High School, she was a four-sport athlete. Even though she went on to attend college behind enemy lines at Iowa State, she'd still wear Iowa gear around campus.

It was at Iowa State where Michelle met her future husband, Tim. He was an athlete in his own right. Tim played football, basketball and baseball in high school. He then went on to play all three sports for one year at Joliet Junior College. He transferred to Iowa State, where he redshirted one season on the Cyclones basketball team before moving on from the program.

Because of the family's athletic history, it's not much of a surprise that Stevens excelled in sports. At one point, he was encouraged to leave the local soccer recreation league because he was so dominant. During a soccer game later on in his career, Stevens curled in a corner kick for a goal.

Stevens, at times, exudes a reserved personality. But there's a goofy side to Stevens that is less seen publicly. Early on in his life, Tim called Drew his "little bobblehead" because his head was disproportionately large to the rest of his body. That amusing vibe carried on. In high school, Stevens went into the teacher's lounge after being dared to do so. He popped himself a bag of popcorn and watched television before someone finally noticed.

Also as a kid, Stevens had a gas-powered, four-wheel ATV. One time, he yelled to Tim, "Hey, Dad, watch this." Tim then saw what he believed was Drew driving an ATV into a retaining wall. The figure fell off. Tim went rushing over to help, only to find Drew emerge from a bushy area, laughing. He had dressed an artificial figure in pants, a shirt and a helmet, so it appeared as if he was in the driver's seat. In fact, though, he was watching the chaos transpire as the ATV went barreling into a wall.

"He was very proud of his moment," Tim said, "but we were not happy."

Kicking it with a "lead foot"

Early on in his time training with coach Dan Orner, Stevens was chunking divots out of the ground as if he were a golfer.

But it's important to understand: Only shortly before they started working together had Stevens actually embarked on his place-kicking career. The freshman football team needed a kicker. Stevens' parents encouraged him to try. At first, he wasn't bought in.

"Nah, I (didn't) really want to," Stevens said. "I mean, I like soccer. That (was) my favorite sport."

But he was persuaded to give it a go. His leg strength from soccer helped the transition, but early in his career it wasn't necessarily pretty.

"He was still making kicks," Tim said. "But his form was absolutely awful."

That began to change after starting to train with Orner. He was a standout at the University of North Carolina and went on to briefly spend time with the Minnesota Vikings. Now he passes knowledge of kicking and punting through coaching. And so early on in his time working with Stevens, it was clear that the young kicker needed it.

Orner draws a parallel between kicking and weight training. Just as a weight lifter would isolate specific muscles to get stronger, kickers focus on particular aspects of kicking to improve, such as ball striking, steps and extension.

"He would constantly text me and ask me about ways that he could get better," Orner said. "And he pulled me aside at training sessions. For me as a coach, it's refreshing working with someone like him."

Stevens' work ethic allowed him to avoid plateauing. Toward the latter half of his high school career, Stevens had one of his best days while with Orner and NFL kicker Joey Slye.

It was so impressive that Slye came over to Orner.

"Holy (expletive)," Slye told Orner, "that kid's got a lead foot."

Like a boxer with heavy hands, having a lead foot is a compliment for a kicker, meaning the ball exploded off Stevens' foot. Slye started calling Stevens "lead foot."

Opportunities to play at the next level surfaced. Among those were Iowa, North Carolina State and South Carolina. Stevens was already familiar with the Hawkeyes because of his mother. A major factor in his decision was where he'd be able to get playing time quickly. With Caleb Shudak set to head out the door, there was potential for that at Iowa.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, though, was skeptical.

"I remember distinctly meeting with he (Stevens) and his dad out here thinking, 'Boy, am I wasting my time today, shaking hands and visiting a little bit,'" Ferentz said. "Let me get this straight. He's from South Carolina. He's going to come to Iowa as a walk-on. Why would that make sense? He looked like he was 12 at that time."

Stevens enrolled early at Iowa. And there were more bumps.

"Nobody had a worse spring," Ferentz said. "He came early, left high school early, and he was God-awful out there."

But Stevens made big strides before his freshman season officially rolled around. He went 16-of-18 on field goals and a perfect 24-of-24 on extra points. Following last season, Stevens was put on scholarship.

It carried over to this season. Iowa punter Tory Taylor has garnered a considerable amount of attention for his efforts on special teams, and justifiably so. But overlooking Stevens' value to Iowa would be a disservice. He is 13-of-16 on field goals this season, plus 15-of-15 on extra points. That has brought his career numbers at Iowa to an impressive 29-of-34 on field goals and 39-of-39 on extra points.

For a program whose dreadful offense in 2022 has spilled into 2023, brilliant special teams play and stellar defense have been the foundation on which the Hawkeyes (6-2, 3-2 Big Ten) still manage to find success.

Ferentz, referencing that earlier interaction with Stevens and his father, said: "Little did I know that, however many years, three, four years later, this is what it would look like. He's done a great job."

There is another layer to the story. For Michelle, this journey has come somewhat full circle. She now watches her own son play in a stadium where she used to attend games growing up.

"I should be getting used to it maybe, but it's just very surreal, just because there's such a small number of kids that play college football," Michelle said. "And then it's even smaller for kickers. You use four or five wide receivers a game. You only use one kicker, typically. Just the small amount of people that get to do it. And (that) my kid is one of them is kinda crazy, some days when I think about it."

Title: Ethan Hurkett epitomizes Iowa football developmental spirit and attitude

Author: Pat Harty

Date: 10/25/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa – Ethan Hurkett fits the description of an Iowa football player under Kirk Ferentz in so many ways.

He is a shining example of how a development program develops a developmental player.

A former all-state linebacker for Cedar Rapids Xavier, Hurkett has since been transformed into a 6-foot-3, 260-pound defensive end for the Hawkeyes.

It didn't happen overnight, nor has it come easy.

But all the sweat and suffering, and the blood and tears are well worth it.

Hurkett is a homegrown kid that wanted to be a Hawkeye, and now as a fourth-year junior, he's living his dream, and is doing so as a major contributor on a deep and talented defensive line.

Hurkett has 32 tackles, 3.5 tackles for loss, two quarterback hurries and one fumble recovery for an Iowa defense that has continued to live up to the high standard that has been set under defensive coordinator Phil Parker.

"I knew they could do it with this weight room and with these lifting coaches and stuff," Hurkett said Wednesday. "I wasn't too worried about the size and stuff. I've seen them put a lot of size and muscle on guys in the past.

"I trust in the program they have here, just being developmental program and stuff. But I just figured wherever they were going to give me the opportunity, I'd be more than happy to come in and do that."

Hurkett is one of two Xavier graduates that are playing a prominent role for the Iowa defense, along with senior free safety Quinn Schulte.

Hurkett appeared briefly in eight games in the Covid-shortened 2020 season, and in three games in 2021, but then missed the final 11 games due to an injury.

He saw action in all 13 games last season, and finished with 15 tackles, two tackles for loss and one sack.

Hurkett's climb up the depth chart has taken some time, but that's not unusual in a developmental program.

Iowa defensive line coach Kelvin Bell often preaches patience to his players, telling them to embrace the daily grind rather than look for huge jumps.

"It was a process," Hurkett said. "Kind of just came in here and tried to improve every day. Coach Bell, we have a recipe for improvement, which we focus on not necessarily taking big leaps, but maybe getting one percent better each day.

"So, that's helped a lot."

Iowa is coming off an emotional 12-10 loss to Minnesota last Saturday at Kinnick Stadium and is now in a bye week.

"It's been good just to slow down a little bit. I can definitely tell my body is feeling better already," Hurkett said. Get some extra sleep and stuff, so it helps a lot."

Iowa's next game will be against Northwestern on Nov. 4 at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

And while the loss to Minnesota was devastating, Iowa has a 6-2 record and still is in contention for the Big Ten West Division title.

"Coach Bell always says everything you want is in front of you," Hurkett said. "You've just got to go take it basically. So, I think it's up to us to do with whatever we want to do with this opportunity."

Hurkett is part of a defensive end rotation that also includes sixth-year senior Joe Evans and junior Deontae Craig as the starters.

"It's amazing to see Joe in his sixth year still going and working his butt off," Hurkett said

Evans also embodies the developmental spirit of Hawkeye football as a former high school quarterback who came to Iowa as a walk-on.

Kirk Ferentz and his staff have shown a knack for seeing talent and potential where other coaches don't see it.

They were convinced that Hurkett had what it takes to play defensive end at the Big Ten level, and they were right.

Hurkett credits extensive film study and constructive criticism for helping him reach this point.

"We take the reps and then watch it on film and basically breakdown everything from footwork to hand placement," Hurkett said. "It's schematic things. One of the big things we work on is honest self-evaluation. What you see on the film, we say the eye on the sky don't lie, so wherever you've got to work on, you know that you've got to work on it basically."

Title: Rusty Feth talks Bigfoot, bye week, love for tattoos and the Wave

Author: Pat Harty

Date: 10/25/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa – One year of interviewing Rusty Feth is better than nothing.

That was my thought after having interviewed Iowa's highly entertaining graduate transfer offensive lineman on Wednesday.

Feth was among a handful of Iowa players that met with the media, and it was fun interacting with him.

We talked about the struggles on offense, and with the offensive line specifically, because you can't bury an obvious storyline, even if it is depressing.

But we also talked about Bigfoot, his love for tattoos, and the stories behind his body paint, and about the Wave.

I'm happy to report that Feth and I are both Bigfoot fans, but also non-believers.

"I just thought Bigfoot was cool," Feth said when asked about his Bigfoot tattoo. "I never ever believed he was real. I wanted to as a kid, but now, I don't know, to think that people believe there's like an eight-foot giant Bigfoot walking around is just kind of cool to me."

There were several other media members interviewing Feth at the time, but as the only media member born before 1970, or maybe even 1980 or 1990 in the group, I used that experience to ask Feth if he were aware of a 1987 movie titled "Harry and the Hendersons" starring John Lithgow, Melinda Dillon and Don Ameche.

To no surprise, he wasn't aware of the movie, nor do I believe were the other media members standing nearby.

I was, obviously, showing my age, but for a good cause as I wanted Feth to know about a movie in which a family hits a Bigfoot on the way home from a camping trip, brings it home thinking it's dead, and that a fortune could be earned from the discovery, only to find out later that it's alive and in the kitchen.

"Okay, I'll check it out for sure," Feth said.

He might have said that just to make me feel good, but I think he was being genuine because that seems to be Rusty Feth.

He has nothing to hide, including, of course, his tattoos.

He wears them like a badge of honor, the owl, the wolf and the skull, an interest handed down from his father.

"My dad's all tatt-ed up, so, I kind of fell in love with it as a kid, it kind of made it easy," Feth said of his love for tattoos. "I know you're supposed to have meaning and it's going to be on my body forever."

Feth then shared a story in which he and his father both got the same tattoo of a dagger while together in Florida.

The tattoo came with a saying that Feth uses as inspiration.

"I've got a quote here that 'tough times never last' and that means something to me," Feth said. "That's probably the most meaningful one."

"Just do some hard stuff and you're always going to get through it, no matter what."

Iowa is using this bye week to help get through the tough times.

The bye week comes on the heels of a devastating 12-10 loss to Minnesota this past Saturday at Kinnick Stadium in which Iowa had a late touchdown on a punt return by Cooper DeJean erased due to an invalid fair catch signal.

Iowa's next game is against Northwestern on Nov. 4 at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

"Having this bye week is really nice, I will say," Feth said. "We have a four-week season ahead of us and that's all we have to focus on, these next four games."

"And it's going to fly bye."

Feth's time as a Hawkeye will fly bye since he only has one season of eligibility.

And though the offense has struggled in all phases this season, Iowa still is 6-2 overall and in contention for a Big Ten West Division title.

Feth spoke optimistically about his situation on and off the field, and that's what you would expect from him.

While the fans and the media can point out the problems on offense and be critical, Feth and his cohorts have to stay positive and focused on the task at hand.

"Be better than the previous week, and I think we've done a good job with that," Feth said. "We just have a mindset if we mess something up, move on, we'll watch it later, learn from it and get better from it. We buy into that and get better every day and every week."

"At the end of the season, we'll still have the same mindset if we have one more game left, during practice that week, we have to get better for this game."

Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz couldn't have said it any better.

A native of Colerain, Ohio, Feth has been a Hawkeye for less than a year, but he seems to fully understand the culture and the mindset that Kirk Ferentz has built over a quarter century as head coach.

The hope was that Iowa's veteran offensive line in which the the five starters, which includes Feth, have combined for 129 career starts, would take a significant step forward this season.

But it just hasn't happened.

There have been stretches in which the offensive line has excelled, including the back-to-back games against Purdue and Wisconsin in games six and seven when Iowa combined to rush for 381 yards in the two victories.

The problem has been the inability to sustain a productive ground attack.

Feth didn't make any excuses or point fingers when talking about the problems on offense.

He preferred to stay positive, because that's just seems to be his nature, and because it's the right thing to do.

Feth's decision to be a Hawkeye has reunited him with Iowa offensive line coach George Barnett. Feth spent his first two years at Miami with Barnett as his position coach. Barnett is now in his third season as Iowa's offensive line coach.

"Everyone here, there is no one I couldn't ever to talk to here," said Feth, who started 34 games for Miami (Ohio), including the last 25 at center. "Coaches, players, just the guys, because they go through the same stuff. It's easy to relate to someone when they've done it with you."

In addition to his tattoos, the 6-foot-3, 310-pound Feth also has a bright orange beard that stretches to the top of his chest.

He looks like an offensive lineman, or a giant lumberjack.

But even someone his size needs a break from the physical demands of playing football.

"It is good to have a break and to get away from it for a couple days," Feth said. "Like these past couple practices, it is a bye week and it's just been really good to get out there and run around for an hour and then be done. It's pretty nice."

Feth is what's good about the transfer portal.

He came to Iowa after having played for Miami (Ohio) for four seasons.

Feth gave his heart, soul and body to the Redhawks, but he wanted to end his career on the biggest stage of college football.

He wanted to play against the best and being a Hawkeye has given Feth that opportunity.

It also has given Feth a chance to be a part of the Wave, which is now widely regarded as the greatest tradition in college sports.

It happens at the end of the first quarter of home games at Kinnick Stadium when the players, coaches and support staff from both teams, along with the officials and the fans, turn and wave to the patients on the top floor of the Stead Family Children's Hospital, which is across the street from the stadium.

The tradition started in 2017 after a fan suggested it on Facebook and it has since grown into a celebrated tradition that is unique to Hawkeye football.

Feth experienced the Wave for the first time as a freshman for Miami (Ohio).

"And that was cool, but here for Iowa, and doing the Wave, I don't even know if words can explain it," Feth said. "It's just really cool, and I think everyone feels the same way."

Title: After quiet arrival at Iowa, Cooper DeJean now showing everyone he is rare player

Author: John Steppe

Date: 10/13/23

IOWA CITY — When Cooper DeJean first arrived on campus, fellow defensive back Jermari Harris initially “thought something was wrong with him.”

“When he first came in, he didn’t say a word,” Harris said. “But looking back on it, that’s just who he is.”

DeJean, now in his third year at Iowa, considers himself “more of an action-type guy” and has tried to “let my actions speak.”

His actions on Iowa’s defense and special teams units have not only spoken. They figuratively have been screaming.

DeJean has seven interceptions since the beginning of last season. No Power Five player has caught more interceptions during that time span.

His three interception returns for touchdowns in 2022 broke Iowa’s single-season record and tied the career record.

His 14.3 yards per punt return this season leads the Big Ten, with only three others averaging more than 4 yards per punt return.

Iowa Coach Kirk Ferentz described DeJean as a “rare player.”

“It’s hard to think of many guys in 25 years that can do things like he does, and he does them pretty consistently,” Ferentz said.

Most recently, that was on display as DeJean returned an interception 41 yards to the Purdue 5-yard line. His teammates gave the playmaking star a hard time about not scoring a touchdown.

“I kept telling them, like, ‘I could use a couple blocks there,’” DeJean said in jest.

The week before, DeJean returned a punt 70 yards for a touchdown while making it look easy. (That was in addition to an interception in the back of the end zone earlier in the game.)

Harris described the punt return as “definitely the craziest play I’ve ever seen on the football field from another individual.”

“You rarely get to see that combination of athleticism, the mental toughness, the savvy that he has and the electricity he brings to our team,” Harris said.

Along with blockers “making it easy on me,” DeJean attributed much of his punt return prowess to “just instincts.”

“Finding the gaps and when to hit them, when to not,” DeJean said.

The Odebolt native was not always in the spotlight.

DeJean’s recruitment was practically the definition of low-profile. His only other offers, according to 247Sports’ database, were North Dakota State, South Dakota State and Illinois State.

“For teams not to take a chance on him was kind of mystifying,” his OABCIG High School coach Larry Allen told The Gazette last year. “You would think somebody would have had the idea to offer him.”

When Iowa traveled to in-state rival Iowa State early in the 2021 season, the future star was not even on the Hawkeyes’ travel roster.

“He’s a really good player, but he didn’t walk in here like there’s Cooper DeJean,” Ferentz said. “We thought he was pretty good; don’t get me wrong. But I don’t think anybody’s writing about him when he came here.”

But DeJean is no longer under the radar.

Luke Fickell, who is in his first year as head coach at Wisconsin after six years in the American Athletic Conference with Cincinnati, raved about DeJean early in his weekly news conference.

"A very dynamic player that even the last couple years, not being in the league, I had seen and watched and heard a lot about," Fickell said Monday.

Fickell especially took notice of DeJean's performance in last year's Music City Bowl performance, when he had a pick-6 and a 34-yard punt return.

"If you take shots on him and things like that, he can change a game," Fickell said. "Obviously he did it in the bowl game. I think he's the sole benefactor for that game being the way it was. He at least created a lot of those things."

Draft prognosticators also have taken notice of DeJean's talent, with his name surfacing as a potential first-round pick in next year's draft.

ESPN's Mel Kiper Jr. slotted DeJean as the 11th-best prospect in the 2024 draft class earlier this month, saying the Hawkeye "has the physical tools to be the top corner in this class." Pro Football Focus ranked him as the 12th-best prospect in the 2024 draft class.

Life in the spotlight is not much different for DeJean.

"It's still the same football game," DeJean said. "I still go out and just try and do my job week in and week out to help this team and put them in the best situation to win."

It did require the young DeJean to clarify some things with his grandmother, though. When the Kinnick Stadium crowd started doing the "Cooooooooop!" chant, she thought those were boos.

"She didn't take that too well," DeJean said. "But I had to explain to her that that's not what was happening there. It's actually a good thing that they're doing that."

DeJean's athleticism, combined with Iowa's uninspiring offensive results, sparked speculation from fans and even opposing coaches about whether the star could be a contributor on both sides of the ball.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we see him on offense," Fickell said this week.

A cornerback-wide receiver combination has worked elsewhere, as Colorado star Travis Hunter showed before his injury. In the Buffs' season opener at No. 17 TCU, Hunter had an interception on defense and 11 catches for 119 yards on offense.

Ferentz said playing DeJean on offense has been "a discussion and a thought," but the 25th-year head coach has been reluctant to take it any further than the idea stage.

"In baseball, a couple weeks ago, I think I mentioned a guy getting pulled after seven innings throwing a no-hitter," Ferentz said earlier this month. "If you did a pitch count on Cooper, he is getting a lot of snaps. I suppose you could do it, but you don't want to compromise what we've got defensively right now."

DeJean has taken 549 snaps so far this season, according to Pro Football Focus. If Iowa goes to the conference championship game and a bowl game, Ferentz's star defensive player would be at pace to take 1,281 snaps. (For perspective, Jack Campbell played 1,121 snaps in Iowa's 14-game 2021 season.)

DeJean played 102 snaps as a true freshman in 2021 and 1,001 snaps as a sophomore in 2022.

"I've grown a lot as a football player, even more as a person," DeJean said. "Learning from Coach Ferentz and all the coaches each and every day and everything that they preach — the discipline that we have to have playing the game of football and in the game of life."

As a result of that growth, the instinctively quiet DeJean is not-so-quiet on the football field — both with his voice and with his actions.

"I've gotten more and more comfortable being a vocal leader out on the field," DeJean said. "It's been a fun challenge to help these younger guys learn and come along and understand how to prepare throughout the season."

Title: Hawkeyes Embracing Who They Are

Author: Rob Howe

Date: 10/14/23

MADISON, Wis. - It's not figure skating or gymnastics. Style points don't matter in college football. You win or you lose.

Iowa Football makes no apologies for how the victories come. Others can call it ugly. The Hawkeyes think it's beautiful.

They continued defying the odds Saturday here at Camp Randall Stadium, winning for the 24th time in 34 games despite fielding one of the country's worst offenses. They secured victory for 11th time in 13 games and improved to 6-1 this season.

Their latest Houdini act occurred in a 15-6 triumph against Wisconsin. Iowa was a double-digit underdog due in large part to its inability to score points.

Iowa won this game with 37 passing yards. Last week, it defeated Purdue, 20-14, without completing a throw to a wide receiver. They completed six passes in each game and are 12 of 35 through the air in those contests.

We know this isn't normal. One need only to look around the country to see what Iowa is doing, winning with exceptional defense and special teams, defies logic.

"We're trying to win the game by any means," linebacker Jay Higgins said Saturday. "We don't care what it looks like. As long as we have the win at the end of the day, that's all that matters to us."

The latest win moved the Hawkeyes into the driver's seat among teams pursuing the final Big Ten West championship. Each with just one conference loss now, Iowa gained the head-to-head tiebreaker with the Badgers, which still has a home game left with No. 3 Ohio State.

Iowa should be favored against its remaining opponents. If it wins out, Hawkeye Nation is off to Indianapolis in December for a meeting with the champion from the East, which will be a heavy favorite.

That the Hawkeyes sit in good position to win the division for the second time in four years with this offense is nothing short of amazing. Yes, it comes with context, but it's also a worthy accomplishment. Their three West titles would only rank behind the Badgers' four championships during the short history of the division.

An ascending defense held a Wisconsin program ranked 16th nationally in rushing offense coming into the action to 96 yards and 3.4 per carry. Specialists Tory Taylor and Drew Stevens, returners and coverage teams outperformed their counterparts.

Taylor averaged 50.6 yards on 10 punts with six of them pinning Wisconsin inside its own 20-yard line. In the third quarter, the Badgers' starting field position was their own 11. That improved to the 15 in the fourth quarter.

Good luck to teams trying to drive the field on this defense.

"As a defense, that just opens up our playbook," Higgins said of Taylor pinning teams deep in their own end. "(Iowa defensive coordinator Phil Parker) is going to be aggressive when we're down there."

It led to the Hawkeyes recording an important safety early in the fourth quarter. Wisconsin managed just a pair of field goals. Its previous low-scoring output of the season was 22 points at Washington State.

Iowa cash Sebastian Castro stood out with a pair of tackles for loss, an interception and a pass breakup. It seemed like all seven of his solo tackles were important.

The offense wasn't a complete lost cause, either. The Hawkeyes may have found a reliable running game.

After rolling up 181 yards on 35 carries last week against Purdue, Iowa gashed the Badgers for 200 yards on 48 carries. Leshon Williams carried 25 times for a career-high 174 yards, including an 82-yard touchdown sprint to open the scoring.

That's impressive work by the offensive line. It's opening holes when the opposition isn't threatened by a passing game.

During the postgame locker room celebration, the Hawkeyes played Jump Around, the Cypress Hill song blared through the speakers here at the end of each third quarter.

"You gotta play Jump Around when you win at Wisconsin," Castro said with a smile.

The Hawkeyes earned that right despite the method being tough to watch at times.

"Iowa Football is special teams and defense," Taylor said. "That's a no-brainer."

Title: Deacon Hill grew up playing water polo in California. Now he's Iowa's starting QB

Author: Tyler Tachman

Date: 10/6/23

IOWA CITY — To his family's surprise, Deacon Hill was going to perform.

It was during the holidays when Hill was about 6 years old. Hill was with immediate and extended family, having a talent show of sorts. Musicians in the family sang and played instruments. After those performances, Hill stood up, strode to the piano and declared that he wanted to play a song.

The interesting part? Hill had never played piano before.

He proceeded to fearlessly pound on the piano keys for about 20 seconds. He stood up and bowed for his work, which was met with applause and laughter.

This is a snapshot of Hill's personality and ambition. But a spontaneous piano performance turns out to be far from the only fascinating part of Hill's life.

More than a decade later, Hill, listed at 6-foot-3 and 258 pounds, is a freight train of a quarterback for the Iowa football team. Center Logan Jones said Hill "looks like a 50-year-old dude." Hill grew up playing water polo. He also surfs. He is half Samoan. He has worked out with Major League Baseball star Giancarlo Stanton.

And now, with Cade McNamara out for the rest of the 2023 season, Hill is set to make his first career start in college when Iowa plays Purdue on Saturday at Kinnick Stadium (2:30 p.m., Peacock).

Oh, also: For a period of time this past winter, he wasn't even expected to be playing FBS football.

Pe'a Hill was sitting in the stands watching his son at a youth football camp. Pe'a, who had signed Hill up as a quarterback, noticed that his son was standing in the back of the line for that position group, not participating in the drills. Pe'a walked down to the field and told Hill to take part in the drills. Hill said a coach told him that he was not a quarterback, he was a lineman, and therefore he should be doing lineman drills.

Hill stayed with the quarterbacks. But the coach didn't budge. So Pe'a pulled Hill out of the camp.

It's hard to ignore Hill's size at quarterback, but this is the reality that he has faced. It's a perception that — to a certain extent — he still battles. But Hill is a quarterback. His bazooka of an arm is a testament to that. He said the farthest he's thrown a football is 74 yards.

Hill credits his arm strength to his water polo career. He played in his first game when he was 4 years old, kicking off a childhood spent on pool decks all over the state of California. Hill, who described water polo as his "first love," enjoyed it so much that he would play multiple games for his team and then go around to see if other teams needed extra players.

Each of Hill's three older sisters went on to play water polo at UCLA. One of Hill's sisters, Sami, now an assistant coach for the Michigan women's water polo team, won a gold medal with Team USA at the 2016 Rio Olympics. Not to mention their mother, Cindy, who scored more than 1,600 career points playing basketball at BYU.

Hill, asked if he is the best athlete in his family, said, "Probably not. I'm probably lacking a little behind."

Hill waited his turn at Santa Barbara High School. As a sophomore, he was in a battle for the starting quarterback job but lost to the incumbent. But later that season, when the starter got injured, Hill remained prepared and stepped in. Even though he was not yet the full-time starter, Hill committed to Wisconsin before his junior season. But getting to that point meant cleaning up his release, a unique hurdle earlier in his career due to a mechanical difference between throwing a polo ball and a football.

"Constant ball-positioning drills and working on him turning over his wrist because he had a longer release at the time," said J.T. Stone, Hill's coach at Santa Barbara High School, who also worked with him prior to that. "So it just took us work, work, work and him putting in the work. We did a lot of band drills, just stationary drills."

Becoming a star in high school took more work. He focused on his strength and conditioning with coach Peter Park. On his 17th birthday, Hill and others did an intense session, which included each completing 17 repetitions of a sled pull with weight increasing. (By the way, Hill wanted to work out on his birthday.) Some in the group were slacking, so Hill got on them and ensured they finished.

Park also trains a handful of professional baseball players, whom Hill worked alongside.

"The pro baseball players were always surprised because he's 240-50 pounds and we do conditioning stuff on the treadmill," Park said. "And they expect to just smoke him ... But they were always surprised how hard he could push. And push himself and get past that pain barrier. You can't teach that stuff that he has."

When Hill was a junior in high school, he threw an interception late in a game during a playoff run, which essentially sealed Santa Barbara's loss. Not long after the game, Park, who had been at the game, answered his phone.

"He called me," Park said, "and said he wanted to be in the gym the next day."

Park decided against it. He wanted Hill to take time off.

Coming to Iowa was a 'no-brainer'

At Iowa football media day in August, there was a crowd of reporters around Cade McNamara ... and so was Hill. He was using a sports drink bottle as a mock microphone to ask McNamara a question.

"Would you say you're the favorite child of the family?" Hill playfully asked, extending the bottle toward McNamara.

Hill's charisma, which allowed him to connect with so many people, led his sister Abbi to jokingly call him the "Mayor of Santa Barbara." In fact, one time he went out to breakfast with his sisters and there was a 45-minute wait to be seated. But Hill, who disappeared to go to the bathroom, emerged back outside with news that he had gotten a table.

"I know the owner," Hill said before walking back inside.

Apparently, Hill knew the owner's son. He did indeed get them a table.

And Hill? He was about 9 years old.

So that interaction with McNamara in August was true to form. At the time, it would have been difficult to forecast what would happen over the next handful of weeks.

McNamara took an awkward fall during Kids' Day at Kinnick in August, forcing him to miss practice time, which meant Hill got reps with the starters. McNamara played through it during game action, starting the first five contests of Iowa's season. But in the first quarter against Michigan State, McNamara went down again; this time it was a season-ending ACL injury.

Hill was thrown into the game. He went 11-of-27 for 115 yards with one touchdown and one interception. Iowa won, 26-16. It wasn't a stellar performance by any means, but given the circumstances, Hill did show resolve.

Take into consideration that Hill hadn't even attempted a pass in a college game prior to this season. He redshirted his first season at Wisconsin. The following season, then-Wisconsin coach Paul Chryst was fired in October 2022. Shortly after, Hill entered the transfer portal.

"I think the biggest thing was that I matured as a person," Hill said of his time at Wisconsin. "Learning to deal with ups and downs within my career and not trying to let that affect my life outside of football. I think there's a genuine balance between life and football. If football isn't going that well, you can find peace in life, do other things, be with friends. And then, on the alternative side, if things aren't going great in life, that you can find your peace in football."

For a while it appeared Hill would be playing at a non-FBS level. In December 2022, Hill committed to Fordham. A few days later, though, he got a call from Iowa offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz.

The connection between Hill and Iowa was due to senior special assistant Jon Budmayr. Budmayr recruited Hill at Wisconsin but left the Badgers before Hill began his career there. After a stint at Colorado State, Budmayr joined the Iowa staff in 2022. That later opened a door at Iowa for Hill, even if he was already committed to Fordham.

"I knew it was a done deal," Hill said about getting the call from Ferentz. "I knew I wanted to play for coach Bud(mayr) and I didn't have the opportunity to play at Wisconsin with him. So it was a no-brainer coming here."

And now, Hill takes over a struggling offense. The Hawkeyes' abysmal 2022 showing has not looked much more promising so far this season. That has been due to a variety of reasons, including mounting injuries. Expectations for Hill are difficult to pin down because he is so unproven at the college level.

But his cannon of an arm could open a path to a more potent deep passing game. Beyond that, Hill is mobile for his size. He is not a speedster, but he can do damage with his legs. In fact, in high school, he leapt over a defender who tried to undercut him.

"I wouldn't so much as call it a hurdle," Hill said of the play. "The dude was kinda like diving at my ankles and I kinda just hopped and happened to land over him. But, yeah, it was fun."

Iowa is 4-1 this season with hopes of getting to the Big Ten Championship Game. But because of a depleted offensive unit, the outlook of the season has taken a sharp turn toward the unknown.

Hill is now a key part of the equation.

This might go really well. It might not.

"He has his chance," Park said. "I think everyone is going to see what he can do."

Ready or not, it's time for Hill to put on another performance.

Title: Stilianos and Ostrenga Ready to Step Up without Luke Lachey

Author: Eliot Clough

Date: 9/19/23

IOWA CITY -- The tight end room at Iowa is in some flux at the moment. Starting tight end Luke Lachey went down with a "significant" leg injury in Iowa's 41-10 victory over Western Michigan on Saturday. He's currently out indefinitely and is likely to miss the rest of the season.

"It's an unfortunate development," Kirk Ferentz said. "He'll be fine here in time, but it's a significant injury so he's going to be out for quite a while."

Ferentz added that Lachey is "most likely" out for the season, and that he had surgery on Tuesday that went well.

Fourth-string tight end and Lafayette transfer

Steven Stilianos spoke about the significance of the injury for Lachey and the offense earlier in the day.

"Luke is my brother -- he's probably my best friend here, he's my roommate and he's going to be a groomsman in my wedding," he said on Tuesday. "It's obviously tough to see him go down like that -- just trying to figure out what happened to him and how serious it was. It was tough to see, and I'm trying to have his back through all of that."

Though Lachey's injury is front of mind for his teammates and the staff, they know other tight ends will have to step up in his absence -- specifically Stilianos and third-string tight end.

Addison Ostrenga in addition to starter Erick All.

"Obviously that opens the door for me," Stilianos said. "It's next man up, you always have to be ready to go. You always have to prepare like you're going to be that guy playing. I feel like I approach every week like that. I'm ready to go -- I'm 23-years-old and I've played quite a bit of football. I'm ready."

The sixth-year senior has spent the last year-and-a-half in Iowa City and registered his first catch as a Hawkeye against WMU on Saturday, finishing the game with two receptions for 29 yards.

"Steve is a guy that I mentioned in the spring as someone who was starting to emerge," Ferentz said. "He has a lot more confidence now and a lot more competency. So, I think he did a good job on Saturday, and we'll use him more now."

Don't miss out on any of our exclusive football, basketball, and recruiting coverage. Sign up with Go Iowa Awesome here.

Unlike Stilianos, Ostrenga started his college football career in Iowa City and has gotten some early reps for the Hawks. Through two seasons, he has caught three passes for 25 yards, and also caught his first pass of the season against the Broncos.

"Addy is a guy we threw in there last year pretty much out of need," Ferentz said. "He really responded well. He's been pretty consistent that way and I thought he did a good job on Saturday. He'll keep getting better the more he plays."

"Addy has some of the best hands I've ever seen," Diante Vines added on Tuesday. "He makes great catches all the time."

For the duo and the position unit, expectations remain the same from the top.

"It's no different than a week ago or a couple years ago," Ferentz said. "We just want everybody to do their best, keep working and play as well as they can play."

"Johnny Pascuzzi is a guy that jumped in there and did a good job, too. So, we like to have four guys at least that we can put in the game, and Erick has done a good job and he's a veteran guy, too. The group will be fine -- we're just better with Luke."

At the end of the day, there's no replacing a player like Lachey.

"No one's Luke Lachey, the kid is a hell of a player," Stilianos said. "But we're going to do our damn best to play for him and try to make this offense go like he can."

Title: Logan Jones Stays Humble Amidst Hard Work

Author: Matt McGowan

Date: 9/21/23

IOWA CITY -- Before he was one of the biggest players on the field, Iowa center Logan Jones was the smallest.

Jones signed up in second grade for a tackle-football team in Council Bluffs, Iowa. While admitting he was always a bigger kid growing up, Jones said he was the tiniest guy in cleats that day.

It only took one play for Jones to regret his decision to put on a helmet.

"I was probably playing safety or linebacker or something, and these two dudes just absolutely lit me up," Jones said. "I just got absolutely destroyed, and I was like, 'Oh my gosh, I hate this. This is ridiculous.'"

Four years later, Jones was the one delivering the hits. The sixth grader was a striper, meaning that he exceeded the league weight limit and wasn't allowed to touch the ball.

There was one exception to the rule — kicking.

Jones' mother, Larae, told The Daily Iowan one instance where Jones booted a kickoff, then sprinted downfield and tackled the returner as soon as he caught the ball.

Once a boy who was knocked around by others, Jones grew to be a unique physical talent who could adapt seamlessly between and within sports. Yet such talent arrived with strict dedication and a will to succeed, a devotion that the Hawkeye offensive lineman carries with him off the field.

Curious adventuring

One of Larae's objectives in parenting was to not let her son play too many video games. As a result, she limited Jones' screen time by encouraging the boy to play outside. The young Jones eventually became fond of the outdoors and spent most of his time on the swings at the park or on the concrete shooting baskets.

Larae described her son as having an inquisitive side to him, adding that sometimes such curiosity led to a little mischief. When Jones was four years old, he pulled the fire alarm at the family's apartment complex, causing an evacuation of the entire building.

The firefighters who arrived on the scene gave Jones a talking-to about his actions, but their words didn't have much effect. Just a few years later, Jones committed the same act at a hotel his family was staying at. Once again, the building had to be emptied.

"I think he learned his lesson because he got in a little bit of trouble for that one," Larae said. "Ever since he was little he just was always needing or wanting to do something. Always on the go, [he had] busy hands."

Jones' distaste for sitting still fueled what his mom called an "unreal" work ethic. Constantly asking for extra practice reps, Jones divided his spare time between football, basketball, and track and field. Such determination and well-roundedness didn't go unnoticed.

Strength, speed, and effort

Justin Kammrad has been on the coaching staff of Lewis Central High School since 2014 and has been the head varsity coach since 2019, the year of Jones' graduation. Kammrad said how he remembers scouting a middle-school-aged Jones, but not on the football field. For the coach, what stood out about Jones was his speed, noting how the lineman was a 100-meter and 200-meter champion in junior high.

"There weren't many guys who were going to outrun him," the coach said.

Such speed served Jones well while on the Titans, especially in the pass rush. Kammrad explained how the staff could line Jones up on the edge as a defensive lineman, knowing that he could easily chase down any mobile quarterback.

Always up for competition, Jones tested his speed countless times in races against Lewis Central's quarterback, Max Duggan, who led TCU to the College Football Playoff last season. Weighing in at 250-260 pounds, Jones couldn't beat the former Horned Frog but always held a close gap.

After playing mostly at the center position during his freshman and sophomore years of high school, Jones made the switch to offensive tackle as an upperclassman to make room for other talented players. During those two years, the Titans went a combined 21-3 while advancing to the state semifinals twice.

Even playing on the offensive line, Jones made a hefty contribution to the defensive side of the ball over his final two years, with 82 tackles, 36.5 tackles for loss, and 19 sacks, and being crowned the state's Lineman of the Year each season.

The college offers came rolling in during the summer of 2017. First in the wave was Minnesota in July, followed by Iowa State less than two months later. Iowa came calling the following March. And by the time Nebraska got around to extending a scholarship, it was already too late.

Jones was committed to the Hawkeyes.

Humble record-setter

Throughout the recruiting process, Kammrad said Jones never posted his accomplishments on social media and wasn't focused on trying to get as many offers as possible.

"He's a team-first person. He's not an 'I' person at all" Kammrad said. "He's not going to talk a whole lot about what he does unless you ask him about it."

Indeed, Jones lets his play and his work ethic speak for themselves.

When asked to describe Jones, one of the first things many will say about him would be "he's quiet." Kammrad said Jones wasn't much of a vocal person, but when the pads came on, the lineman made plenty of noise.

Whether against in-game foes or his own teammates in practice, Jones never hesitated to provide all-out effort. When blocking, Kammrad said Jones would "put guys on roller skates," driving defenders 10-15 yards downfield and into the ground.

"The older and stronger he got, the louder the thud was on the ground when he was taking people [down]," Kammrad said.

Aside from getting reps in against live competition, Jones would spend just as much time on individual work. Kammrad recalled how often, after a two-and-a-half-hour practice, every player and coach would depart the field except for Jones. For an extra half-hour, Jones would hit the seven-man blocking sled, working on hand placement, drive, and his first step.

The same sense of determination applied to the weight room, as Jones broke nearly every Lewis Central lifting record, and spent his upperclassmen years competing against himself.

Iowa linebacker Jay Higgins said he kept tabs on all-state lineman during Jones' recruiting process, noting that Jones was one of the quietest guys on the team. Referring to Jones as an "absolute beast," Higgins "quickly realized he was the most hard-working dude."

Even though Jones narrowly lost to Hawkeye right tackle Gennings Dunker in the hay bale toss over the summer, he still holds Iowa's all-time max squat record at 700 pounds. In addition, Jones said he can bench press 425 pounds and hang-clean 470.

Yet according to Larae, her son never told her about his squat record until one day she and Jones were walking together inside the Hansen Performance Center when she noticed his name on the record board.

"Mom, it's not that big of a deal," Larae remembers her son saying. "I broke the record."

"Well, no kidding," Larae replied. "Why didn't you tell me?"

"Well, I'm just doing what I'm supposed to."

Jones' ability doesn't stop at mere strength. The three-year letterman in basketball still remembers his first dunk, and in spite of being many pounds heavier than he was, the 6-foot-3, 290-pounder insists he can still get above the rim.

"I'm the best hooper in the offensive line room," Jones said, smiling. "Nobody believes it, but I definitely am."

Off the field, Jones may not win at every activity he does, but never shies away from competition. Whether it is playing Flappy Golf 2 with Hawkeye defensive lineman Ethan Hurkett and Joe Evans in Iowa City, or board games with his family back home, Jones' passion and energy are plain to see.

According to Larae, Jones will get loud and "jump out of his seat" playing the card game Kemps. No matter if it's on the field or at the table, Jones wants his team to win. This attitude allowed the lineman to adapt, and midway through his career with the Hawkeyes, such flexibility was necessary.

After redshirting his freshman season and missing most of his sophomore campaign with a knee injury, Jones, then a defensive lineman, was the subject of many rumors. It was the spring of 2022, and former standout Iowa center Tyler Linderbaum had been selected 25th overall by the Baltimore Ravens in the NFL Draft.

The common belief around the facility was that Jones would be the heir apparent to the 2021 unanimous All-American selection despite not having played the position since high school. The lineman didn't know what to believe, until one day he was eating lunch at the All-American room in the facility, only to have an unexpected guest in Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz.

"Coach Ferentz said, 'Logan, can I talk to you?' And I was like, 'Oh it's real,'" Jones remembers. Ferentz introduced the idea of changing positions but gave the lineman some time to think about it.

Linderbaum also transitioned to the center spot during his collegiate career, and his success gave Jones plenty of evidence to make the switch. The current pro talked with Jones and told him he should "obviously switch positions."

Larae remembers Jones calling her about the possible shift. Asking her son how he felt, Jones told her he would miss playing for Iowa defensive line coach Kelvin Bell, but at the end of the day, would do "whatever was in the best interest of our team."

After only playing in two collegiate games, Jones' goal wasn't to attack the quarterback, but to rather keep him protected. Now at center, the lineman had not only Linderbaum's position to fill, but also a complex, critical position to remaster.

From not being allowed to touch the ball back in his youth, Jones would be the one touching the ball on every offensive down. The success of any play all started with how well he delivered the ball to the quarterback and how accurately he could read defensive fronts. A high snap or not making the correct call could kill the play before it even began.

That first season at center was one of strict memorization for Jones. The lineman said at this year's spring practice that he didn't really know the purpose behind the nuances of the position, and at times was lacking in confidence.

Snapping a ball too early, or making an incorrect call was frustrating for the then-21-year-old, but this dissatisfaction didn't quell his desire to improve. Working with Iowa offensive line coach George Barnett, Hawkeye backup center Tyler Elsbury, and even former NFL offensive lineman James Ferentz over the offseason, Jones said has become more in tune with his fundamentals and "slowed things down" at the line of scrimmage.

"He's first-class in every way," Kirk Ferentz said of Jones. "You'd never know right now, the shortness of his duration [at the center position] because he makes it look pretty easy ... Every rep is going to help him because he takes it the right way."

When the center isn't dedicated to keeping quarterback Cade McNamara's uniform clean, he's keeping an eye out for his mom and older sister, Madysen.

Larae said when she's in town, Jones will offer up his house for his mom to stay at, and when she makes the three-hour drive back to Council Bluffs, her son will always call to make sure she gets home safely.

For Larae, her son and daughter are each other's "biggest supporters." Jones will still call her if he needs advice, or simply when he wants to make sure that his clothes match.

When Jones had surgery on his knee in 2021, COVID-19 restrictions only allowed one family member to be at the hospital. Madysen assumed this one person would be her. When Larae told her otherwise, her daughter was less than pleased.

"She didn't even end up going with me, she was so mad at me," Larae remembered.

A few weeks following the operation, Jones was back in Iowa City, but had difficulty getting to and from his classes. In response, Madysen, who was attending the University of South Dakota at the time, drove the five hours to Iowa City, staying with her brother for the last week of school and driving him around.

Jones remembers his mom and sister being at every one of his games, home or away. Even when he wasn't going to see the field, they would still be supporting him from the stands.

"It's always been us three," Jones said. "I wouldn't be where I am today without the help of my mom and sister."

On the wall of his bedroom at home, Jones has a taped-up sign that says "What's your why?" For Jones, his goal of self-improvement wasn't to show off to others, but to support the betterment of his two teams: the Hawkeyes and his family.

As Larae always told him, "'Don't be flashy about things, just go to work.'"

Title: Nick DeJong, after ‘sticking with it’ experiences success as starting left guard

Author: John Steppe

Date: 9/15/23

IOWA CITY — Kirk Ferentz saw it in Nick DeJong.

The realization happened maybe “three years ago now” as the offensive lineman was coming off the indoor practice field at the Hansen Football Performance Center.

“I saw something,” Ferentz said. “I’m not sure he saw it.”

Eventually, DeJong “figured out maybe he can do this and do it successfully,” too.

Now, what Ferentz first saw and DeJong discovered as well is on display for everyone to see.

Once a walk-on, DeJong has found success as Iowa’s starting left guard through the first two games while sharing snaps with Miami (Ohio) transfer Rusty Feth.

While the line as a whole still has some work to do in the run game, the Pella native’s pass blocking efficiency is 98.7, according to Pro Football Focus — the highest in his career since he became a starter.

DeJong’s efficiency rating was 95.3 and 96.8 in his previous two seasons with substantial playing time. For perspective, now-NFL center Tyler Linderbaum’s pass blocking efficiency was 99.1 in his last year at Iowa.

Ferentz especially noticed DeJong’s improvement last spring.

“Really you could see the confidence growing,” Ferentz said. “He was more consistent with his techniques.”

It was perhaps partly because DeJong’s health was a plus rather than an impediment during the key developmental period.

“He’s dealt with a lot of injuries ... like a lot of guys,” Ferentz said. “Last spring was the first time he ran the whole race — 15 days, every practice.”

DeJong takes pride in “sticking with it” since arriving on campus in 2019.

“Obviously five years in the Iowa football program is not necessarily easy,” DeJong said.

DeJong is the one offensive lineman from Iowa’s original 2019 recruiting class to still have a major role on the team despite arriving as the one without a scholarship.

Ezra Miller spent one year at Iowa before transferring to Nebraska, where he did not have a scholarship and rarely saw the field. Tyler Endres did not see any game action in his Hawkeye career. Noah Fenske transferred to Colorado (and then eventually Southern Illinois) after appearing in one game in his two seasons in Iowa City.

Justin Britt was the only other offensive lineman from DeJong’s class to start a game. He started in three games and appeared in eight others in 2021, but injuries derailed his college career. He was put on medical scholarship after last season.

Along with the “Iowa mentality” and family support, DeJong also credited offensive line coach George Barnett for his growth and success.

“Obviously, he’s improved me as a football player,” DeJong said. “But in terms of my mentality, outlook, whatever you want to call that, I think he has definitely had a huge impact on that.”

DeJong saw small chunks of playing time earlier in his career — he appeared in one game as a true freshman and seven as a redshirt freshman — and then saw a dramatic increase in his role as a sophomore.

The early playing time was a “good thing” for his career development.

“In the moment, maybe it didn’t always feel like a good thing,” DeJong said with a laugh. “But it taught me things in a way that maybe you wouldn’t be able to learn necessarily if you weren’t in there. ... Right now, I can look back and say there’s a lot of things that I know and are able to do now because of those experiences.”

He appeared in all 14 games as a sophomore and made nine starts. He appeared in 12 of Iowa's 13 games as a junior last year while making eight starts.

His eight starts last year came at three different positions — five at left guard, two at right guard and one at right tackle. In 2021, he started seven games at right tackle and two games at left tackle.

"The most difficult part is just the stance," DeJong said regarding switching sides. "It feels a little weird when you're going from one side to the other, but everything else is the same."

Switching between guard and tackle was not as much of an imposition for DeJong as it might be for other offensive linemen.

"There's definitely things that transfer," DeJong said. "The way that offensive line is taught here, it's not necessarily position-specific in terms of fundamentals and stuff like that."

DeJong is part of a 2023 offensive line with more experience than in past years.

Five players — DeJong, Feth, Mason Richman, Connor Colby and Logan Jones — have started at least 15 games at the FBS level going into Week 3.

Last year, Iowa did not have any offensive linemen with 15 career starts until the Week 3 game, when Richman started his 15th game. At this time two years ago, Linderbaum was the only offensive lineman with 15-plus starts.

More experience on the field also means more group bonding time off the field.

Board and card games are popular among the offensive linemen when they're away from the football facility. "Secret Hitler" is a favorite.

"The name — yeah, I know, it sounds really bad," center Jones said. "But it's a very fun board game."

The rules are complicated, but Jones said "you got to be a good liar" to be good at it.

"We have a few dictators in those games — their voices are the loudest — so they always end up winning," DeJong said.

Now, it's up to DeJong and the rest of Iowa's offensive line to make a loud impact on the football field, especially on the ground after averaging a Big Ten-worst 3.1 yards per carry through the first two games.

"There hasn't been a day where we come out and we're just feet back, feet up on the table, leaning back, enjoying things," DeJong said. "We're coming out every day excited and eager to not only practice, but get better and get to where we want to be."

Title: Sebastian Castro credits grandparents who helped raise him

Author: Jose de Jesus Ortiz

Date: 9/15/23

Jose and Teresa Gonzalez's home was always full of people and love. Some might say it was even crowded with three generations under one roof, usually totaling at least 10 people. University of Iowa senior Sebastian Castro and his older brother Roque shared a bed with their mother Ruby Gonzalez until the future college football players grew too big for all three to sleep in the same bed.

Sebastian Castro was only a month old when his father was sent off to prison, leaving Ruby Gonzalez with a four-year-old and a baby to raise by herself. Sebastian and Roque Castro eventually settled into their maternal grandparents' home.

In that household in the Chicago suburb of Oak Lawn, Ill., you'll find the foundation that gave Sebastian Castro the patience that kept him in Iowa City and, ultimately, led to his breakout performance last Saturday for the Hawkeyes.

That is where the Big Ten Conference's Defensive Player of the Week learned to play football and much more.

"I'm appreciative of my family," Sebastian Castro says. "They're always in the back of my mind. Even though I don't live there, I just know who I do it for. At the end of the day, it's all about family.

"It was a lot of fun growing up. I was the baby of the family, the youngest one. I'm very family oriented because of that."

Castro's grandfather has attended only one of his games at Iowa. His grandmother has attended a few games, but his mom and brother don't miss any games at Kinnick Stadium. His brother, mother, aunt Victoria Gonzalez and a family friend drove from the Chicago suburbs to Ames, Iowa, to watch the Hawkeyes face rival Iowa State last Saturday.

A shot of joy

A few plays before Sebastian got the first interception of his career, Ruby vowed to take a shot if her boy made the interception.

"I just have a feeling he's going to do something big," Ruby told the group. "I have a feeling it's going to be a Pick-6."

Then she watched in awe as Sebastian intercepted the pass and ran it back 30 yards for a touchdown, pushing the Hawkeyes' lead to 17-0 after the PAT. As Sebastian Castro got closer to the end zone, the tears began to flow for the lady who had her first baby at 17.

"We were all getting emotional," Roque said. "It was a sense of relief."

Sebastian had no idea where his family was sitting, so he couldn't acknowledge them. But they all knew why they were all so emotional.

It has been a long, difficult road for all of them, after all. The journey to Iowa City began in Guadalajara and Zacatecas, Mexico. Jose Gonzalez was born in Texas, but his family moved back to Mexico when he was very young. Teresa Gonzalez is from the small town of Monte Escobedo, Zacatecas. Jose was a fireman before moving back from Mexico when he was 18.

Teresa immigrated to the U.S. at 17 years old in 1975. The couple met in Chicago. They married in 1977 when Jose was 36 and Teresa was 19.

Jose worked construction in Illinois while he and his wife raised their five daughters.

"He's just very quiet and works, and he loves his family," Sebastian says of his grandfather. "He's the provider and protector of his family. I always looked up to him."

Sebastian was four years old when his grandparents moved the family from Chicago to Oak Lawn, Ill. They settled in a modest home on a cul de sac. Roque Castro learned to play tackle football on the field outside their home. He eventually taught his brother.

Sebastian is certain the hard tackles he delivered and endured early in life in front of his house helped prepare him for Division I football.

“We didn’t play with pads,” he said. “I got used to the physicality. We played tackle. We didn’t care.”

Inspired by the Chicago Bears

Sebastian and Roque spent most of their free time playing sports outside until nightfall with the neighborhood kids. When they weren’t playing outside, they were usually visiting their friends’ homes.

They were hesitant to bring friends over to play at their house, though, because they shared a bedroom with their mom.

“For a while it was kind of like embarrassing,” Roque said. “It was embarrassing to invite your friends over.”

As the boys grew older and more confident, though, they realized there was no shame in their humble, loving home. Nonetheless, the brothers aspire to buy their mother a home one day. By eighth grade, Sebastian began to take football seriously.

He followed the Chicago Bears religiously. Sebastian, who is called Mario by his immediate family, arrived at Iowa with hopes of playing in the NFL.

The 5-foot-11, 205-pounder was a star quarterback and defensive back at Richards High, the same school that produced Basketball Hall of Famer Dwayne Wade.

Although Iowa and Illinois border each other, Castro didn’t know anything about the Hawkeye state before he stepped foot on the beautiful Iowa City campus as a high school junior.

A new world

His high school coach wanted him to take a visit to Iowa. Castro was hesitant.

“‘Why go visit over there?’ That’s what I was thinking,” he says.

Syracuse, Iowa State and Minnesota had already offered Castro a scholarship before he took a visit to Iowa. Castro’s coach told him he would need to visit Iowa before the Hawkeyes would offer him a scholarship.

With his brother as a chaperone, Castro attended a junior day at Iowa for football recruits. Castro remembers that nobody was saying much to him during the first few hours of the campus tour. Toward the end of the tour, assistant coach Brian Ferentz introduced himself and soon mentioned that the Hawkeyes were going to offer Castro a scholarship.

“Of course I was excited because I saw what Iowa was about,” Sebastian Castro said. “I wanted to commit right away. I fell in love with the program. Listening to them talk about the work and dedication and how they’re going to help me get to the League, that’s how I chose.”

Castro signed with Iowa. Then he waited for playing time. He redshirted as a freshman and then saw action in only one game in 2020. Castro saw limited action as a redshirt sophomore, making only six tackles in 2021.

He now starts in the CASH position, which is essentially a nickel back. It’s a defensive back-linebacker position for a guy strong enough to take on linemen and fast enough to cover receivers.

Castro started seven of the 13 games in which he played for the Hawkeyes last year, collecting his first sack, two forced fumbles and 33 tackles.

“I got way more, I guess, experience and knowledge about life and not just football,” he said. “It took me forever. I got really humbled being at Iowa. Iowa is a developmental program. It took me more time to be on the field.

“I was a star player in high school, and I’m thinking I’m going to walk into Iowa and just start. I had the talent, but I wasn’t a good player. It was hard for me to accept that as an 18-year-old, 19-year-old, 20-year-old.”

Like his abuelo (grandfather), though, Castro just kept working. He had a family to represent, after all.

“The credit goes for a guy sticking it out and keep banging away,” Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz says. “That’s a fun part about Saturday. You think about all the time he was on the scout team or the times he was playing special teams, not really out there defensively for us.

“Now for him, I don’t want to call it a bonus or reward, but it’s a nice play. I never scored a touchdown, I know that. Pretty cool for a defensive guy to score a touchdown.”

Now that players can transfer once without having to sit out a season at their new school, many players in Castro’s situation would have been tempted to transfer. Castro, however, preferred to work and fight for playing time.

He still hopes to play the NFL, so he knew he had to improve. Castro didn’t make excuses.

“I just wasn’t the player they needed me to be,” he says. “I was honest that I just wasn’t good enough to be on the field just to perform. So I made a deal with myself that until you start playing at a high level consistently all the time you don’t have the right to transfer. I felt if I did (transfer) I would regret it.”

Castro is on pace to graduate from Iowa in December. He is finishing what he started. He’s close to accomplishing something that he and his brother admittedly didn’t even dare dream about for much of their childhood.

Castro’s grandparents didn’t attend college, and neither did his mom. Football, though, was the reason the Castro boys began to consider college. Nobody in their family talked to them about college growing up.

A path to an education for Sebastian Castro

Roque was a junior in high school when coaches began to tell him that he could play football in college. He played collegiately at St. Xavier, an NAIA school.

Ruby Gonzalez cried when her oldest boy graduated from college, becoming the first in her immediate family to get a degree. She had more tears of joy when her youngest had his first interception at Iowa.

From a humble beginning in a shared bedroom in Illinois to Kinnick Stadium, Ruby and her boys continue to make endearing memories while keeping family first.

Title: Nick Jackson providing Iowa defense with versatility, leadership

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 9/14/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — At Virginia, Nick Jackson had the reputation as the ultimate leader. A team captain, Jackson was the player who answered questions from his teammates and guided the Cavaliers with his presence and his brilliance.

“He’s a great player, on and off the field,” said former Virginia teammate Dontayvion Wicks, now a receiver with the Green Bay Packers. “He’s a great team leader. He’s always there to help, not just himself, but teammates and younger teammates. He’s always consistent every day.”

After a pair of 100-tackle seasons that twice earned him second-team All-ACC honors, Jackson is the one leaning on his teammates. He graduated from Virginia in May, transferred to Iowa in June and is learning a new defense for the third straight season. To say it’s an adjustment is an understatement for the fifth-year linebacker.

“Being at Virginia for four years, I mean, you pretty much know where everyone’s gonna be,” Jackson said. “You know how your D-line is gonna react. You know how your D-line is gonna be in the gaps and you know how your back end is gonna play everything.

“Being here, you can get a good feel for it in practice. But then in the game, it’s a little different.”

Jackson (6-foot-1, 237 pounds) has started both games for No. 25 Iowa at weakside linebacker. In the Hawkeyes’ opener against an uptempo Utah State offense, Jackson was locked in coverage almost the entire game. After preparing for multiple tight ends all week, the defense was surprised to deal with four-receiver sets the entire game. He finished with five tackles and struggled at times to work within the scheme.

Fellow inside linebacker Jay Higgins went out of his way to defend Jackson after the opener. As the middle linebacker, Higgins made 16 tackles. Jackson was out of position on an early pass but then caught on to the route by the game’s conclusion.

“If you look at the stat sheet, it’s gonna say he had a quiet game,” Higgins said. “But I mean the guy was in coverage the whole game and as a linebacker, I would rather make tackles than guard people.”

Last week at Iowa State, Jackson was back in his element as an inside linebacker. He finished with nine tackles and established a physical presence. It’s not easy for any player to work in such different roles — especially a transfer trying to learn a new defense.

“He was playing all coverage Week 1, and in Week 2, we’re like, all right, now you need to get in the run game for us,” Higgins said. “It’s a true testament to him. A guy who’s so decorated, like he has tackles under his belt, so the kid knows what he’s doing.”

At Virginia, Jackson compiled 368 tackles over four seasons, including 20 tackles for loss and 10.5 sacks. He was voted a team captain in 2022 and led the ACC in tackles per game. That came one season removed from pacing the conference with 117 total tackles.

With one season of eligibility left, Jackson had eyes on building his resume toward an NFL career. He was on track to graduate with a commerce degree but wanted to play for a top-level defense. He checked out Oklahoma and Iowa. The Hawkeyes led the nation in average yards allowed per play last year and featured the Butkus Award winner in Jack Campbell. Once he visited, Jackson knew Iowa was a place to grow.

“There’s tradition. There’s legacy,” Jackson said. “There’s everything that you want in a football program right here. When I met the coaches and I met the staff and I got around the players, that was really evident. I thought that it was a great opportunity on both parties.”

There's a challenge in playing for a third defensive coordinator in three seasons. From verbiage to priorities, everything is different. It's easy for Jackson to revert back to old terminology, which can cause confusion for everyone. But like what Jackson did at Virginia for four seasons, it's now his new teammates' turn to help him work through turbulence.

"It's all about trust," Higgins said. "I trust that he's gonna be in the right spot. I trust that he can handle the communication. At the base of it, it's all the same stuff. He was doing what we were doing at Virginia, but now we've just got a different name for it. In the heat of the moment, he might give out a term that's from Virginia, but I know what he's talking about."

"I think the curve has just been like, we might call one thing at Virginia apples, and we call it one thing here oranges," Jackson said. "The whole thing is still new. You're just still learning how to play within the system. But there's a lot of similarities and parallels. Cover 4 is going to be Cover 4 wherever you go."

In the Big Ten, Jackson thought he'd see plenty of downhill power running games, which will come in due time. He will be an asset in that style of football, according to former Virginia and Michigan center Olu Oluwatimi, now with the Seattle Seahawks. Oluwatimi, who transferred to Michigan in 2022, said Jackson is "gonna play physical and he's gonna know what the opposing offense is doing." With each practice and every game, Jackson is a step closer to becoming that player — and more — in all situations.

"You're just going to continue to see gradual improvement from week in and week out," Iowa assistant defensive coordinator Seth Wallace said. "I don't want to say he's drinking out of a fire hose because he certainly isn't because there's a lot of football that he's played in the past. But trying to marry some of the stuff from the past to the present is not a challenge. It's just a work in progress."

Title: Jay Higgins being rewarded for his patience, loyalty and unselfishness

Author: Pat Harty

Date: 9/13/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa – College football needs more student-athletes like Jay Higgins.

In addition to being a tough and talented linebacker for the Iowa Hawkeyes, Higgins is also an outlier in that he has been willing to wait for his opportunity rather than leave in search for instant gratification.

While many student-athletes enter the transfer portal at the first sign of hardship or frustration, Higgins was determined to stay the course at Iowa, even if it meant not being a starter until his senior season.

His parents raised him to finish what he started and to trust the process.

And now Higgins is being rewarded for his unselfishness, patience, and his loyalty as he leads Iowa with 23 tackles heading into Saturday's game against Western Michigan at Kinnick Stadium.

Higgins had a career-high 16 tackles in the 24-14 victory over Utah State in the season opener, and followed that with seven stops in last Saturday's 20-14 win at Iowa State.

"I remember the last time we were at Iowa State, and I had no shot at getting out there," Higgins said. "So, it's just fun to be out there and fun to lead the defense. It's just fun to play.

"That was probably the biggest thing I missed, just playing football and it's been a while. So, any opportunity I get, I'm going to make sure that I definitely don't take it for granted."

Higgins has appeared in 34 games as a Hawkeye, so he wasn't just watching from the bench during games prior to this season.

He contributed on special teams and helped to fill the void when former Iowa linebacker Jestin Jacobs transferred to Oregon after the 2021 season.

The problem for Higgins is that he came to Iowa one year after Jack Campbell had become a Hawkeye and two years after Seth Benson joined the team.

Campbell and Benson both would become three-year starters at linebacker for Iowa, and Campbell now ranks among the best linebackers in program history.

He was named the 2022 Butkus Award winner, which goes to the nation's top collegiate linebacker, and was also selected in the first round of the 2023 NFL draft by the Detroit Lions.

So, Higgins knew what he was up against, and that made being patient a little easier.

"When there's good guys in front of you, I wish nothing but success for those guys," Higgins said. "I was happy for those guys every time they had a good game.

"And I just knew that my time would come eventually. And I didn't want to be the guy that didn't learn from those guys while they were here."

Higgins, who is from Indianapolis, also appreciates how he was recruited because the Iowa coaches, primarily Kelvin Bell and Seth Wallace, were up front and honest with him. They told him what he needed to hear rather than what he wanted to hear.

They told him what to expect from playing for Kirk Ferentz, and from having Phil Parker as your defensive coordinator.

They told Higgins that if he were looking for instant gratification, or for an easy path to playing time, then Iowa probably wasn't the best fit for him.

They promised him that if he worked hard and was willing to stay the course that an opportunity to start would eventually come, but only if he deserved it.

That honest approach made a strong impression on the 6-foot-2, 233-pound Higgins, and is a big reason he never has considered transferring.

"I had too much respect for coach Wallace, and I understood the process with coach Ferentz and with coach Parker," Higgins said. "I understood what type of program I committed to. If we were a program that was all about the instant gratification, then maybe I would have left. But that's not what they sold me on when they were recruiting me.

"So, I just remember what they told me, and I remember what coach Bell told me when he recruited me. It's easy to say one thing but my opportunity and my circumstance, I actually had to live it and stay patient."

Higgins was one of three players that represented Iowa at Big Ten Media Day in late July.

It was a homecoming for him as the event was held in Indianapolis.

Higgins wasn't originally picked to attend the event, but defensive tackle Noah Shannon declined his invitation due to being linked to an investigation into sports wagering, which has since led to Shannon being suspended for the entire 2023 season.

Shannon suggested that Higgins should go in his place, and that says a lot about how his teammates feel about Higgins since he had only started one game before this season.

Higgins relished the opportunity represent Iowa in his hometown, partly because he knew how proud it made his father.

"He's always been one of my biggest supporters," Higgins said of his father. "Any opportunity I can to make him proud, I just love doing it for him."

Higgins plays alongside graduate transfer linebacker Nick Jackson, whose path to becoming a starter for the Hawkeyes is much different than how Higgins became a starter.

Jackson played four seasons for Virginia where he had 368 career tackles and made second-team All-Atlantic Coast Conference last season. Jackson also started 35 of the 48 games in which he played for Virginia.

Jackson stayed the course at Virginia, but he wanted a chance to play his final season somewhere else.

He wanted to play for a rock-solid defense, and where there was an opportunity to play a significant role.

Iowa certainly met those requirements.

"I'm still learning through all the ins and outs and just making adjustments every single day," said Jackson, who ranks fourth on the team with 14 tackles. "Coach Wallace and Jay have been really great in my development and doing the scheme. I think that every single day I'm just trying to be better for this team."

Higgins used to mostly be known, at least on social media, for being the son of Roy Higgins, whose presence on X, formally known as Twitter, has made him a favorite with Hawkeye fans.

Roy Higgins' phrase "Hawk, Hawk, Hawk" has become a rallying cry for Hawkeye fans.

Roy's influence goes far beyond social media, however, and his son is proof of that.

Roy and his wife, Shelley, taught Jay to appreciate hard work and they both set examples for him to follow.

Like any proud father, Roy wanted his son to play sooner, and it wasn't always easy waiting for that opportunity.

But Roy trusted the process, and the Iowa coaches, just like his son.

"My dad, he's a big fan," Jay Higgins said. "He was getting a little antsy my junior year, but he stayed calm.

"They just taught me to trust the process. They taught me what hard and sacrifice look like. So, I just felt comfortable staying here and working hard."

Title: Kirk Ferentz's milestone shows he's still winning the race against time

Author: Tyler Tachman

Date: 9/11/23

IOWA CITY — More than half a decade ago, Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz and his wife, Mary, got into a limousine.

The couple was in Monaco for the Laureus World Sports Awards in 2018. Iowa's "Touchdowns for Kids" campaign, which included the iconic Kinnick Wave, was nominated for an honor.

Mary remembers being accompanied in a limo by Steve Redgrave and Emerson Fittipaldi. Redgrave, a British rower, won gold in five consecutive Olympics. Fittipaldi, a Brazilian race car driver, twice won the Indianapolis 500, both coming after he turned 40.

That day, Mary listened to them.

"They were talking about age vs. youth and just how you lose a little of your physical edge as you age but you more than compensate for it in the mental edge and the wisdom that you have," Mary recalls about that conversation. "How they were able to compete and remain champions even though physically older and losing their edge. Their mental edge compensated for it."

That conversation was especially relevant on Saturday. In vintage Iowa fashion, the Hawkeyes used great defense and superior special teams to grind their way to a 20-13 victory over in-state rival Iowa State. The win also marked a milestone: Kirk Ferentz's 200th career win.

The day after Iowa's win over Iowa State, that memory from Monaco years ago came up in the Ferentz household. It can serve as a reminder of what Ferentz has accomplished and, perhaps equally so, the unique intersection where Iowa's head coach exists.

Ferentz turned 68 last month. In a profession where moving from one job to another is the norm, Ferentz is now in his 25th season as Iowa's head coach. The Hawkeyes' current starting quarterback, Cade McNamara, was not yet born when Ferentz was named Iowa's head coach in the fall of 1998.

This fact is not meant to demean Ferentz but rather to paint a picture of his longevity. For better or for worse, the dynamics of college sports are vastly different than even a few years ago. The transfer portal and Name, Image and Likeness have changed the landscape. Conferences are shifting.

And yet, Ferentz has not only survived but thrived. Only once since 2008 has Iowa not been bowl-eligible. Iowa has recorded 10 wins in two of the last four seasons. Since the beginning of the 2018 season, Iowa is 45-18.

Ferentz is winning the race against the clock.

"Why do I coach? It's easy," Ferentz said in July. "It's because that's what I really like doing and nobody has told me to sit down yet. So at some point, they will. And if they do, that'll be the time. That's the good thing about this job — other people will let you know when it's time to take a seat. It's invigorating. It's what I like. It's what I do."

Ferentz was influenced to be a coach by those around him. Ferentz admired his first high school coach, but after his junior year, that coach was fired.

"The guy that came in and replaced him, who I was convinced I was going to hate and not want to be part of it, probably ended up being the most influential person in my life, my professional life," Ferentz said. "Outside of my family, the most influential person in my life. So that's one of the lessons you learn in life in general, you just never know who's going to walk in and impact you."

Ferentz decided to pursue coaching. After spending time as an offensive line coach at Iowa under Hayden Fry, Ferentz took a head coaching job at Maine. His teams were 12-21 over three seasons.

"The good news is in Maine, nobody noticed the mistakes I made," Ferentz said in 2018. "They were more interested in hunting season at that point. Or the hockey season, probably."

After a stint as an assistant coach in the NFL, Ferentz returned to Iowa, this time as head coach, leading the Hawkeyes in his first season at the helm in 1999.

Standing in front of reporters following Iowa's win over Iowa State on Saturday, Ferentz correctly recalled that his first win as Iowa's head coach came against Northern Illinois. Ferentz, though, also added more context.

"I remember it was a long time till the next one," Ferentz said.

Northern Illinois was Iowa's only win that season. The Hawkeyes went 1-10. The next wasn't much better, either. Iowa went 3-9.

"The name of the game is winning," Mary Ferentz said. "And those are two just really hard, hard seasons. I was just amazed at how strong his shoulders were during those first two seasons here. They were not for the faint of heart. But he just held firm, he stayed the course and inspired the rest of us to do the same, never imagining we'd be here this long. We didn't think we'd make it to the third year."

But those first two seasons proved to be the building blocks of a program that has become a consistent contender in the Big Ten. The next two decades have delivered memorable moments — a game-winning Hail Mary to beat LSU in 2005, an Orange Bowl win in 2010, a last-second field goal to beat Michigan in 2016, and so many more.

When interacting with the media, Ferentz often shows personality in witty soundbites.

Last week, while on the doorstep of 200 career wins, Ferentz was asked how much that number would mean: "Not a hell of a lot really, quite frankly," he said.

Asked Saturday about how many of his 200 wins he can remember, Ferentz said, "I remember the losses better. Just a sick mind. Coaches have sick minds."

Listen to how his players talk about him, too, and the admiration is apparent.

"He's a really great coach," Iowa defensive back Cooper DeJean said. "I think he's one of the best in the country. I'd do anything for him — for that man. I'm grateful for the opportunity that he gave me to be able to come here and I just want to go out there every Saturday and give it my all for him."

Mary Ferentz watched Saturday's game from home. Her nerves, like usual, were wrecked. At Jack Trice Stadium in Ames, Iowa waited in a locker room for Ferentz after the win. They drenched him in water. He held a football in the air with a smile, surrounded by his players.

Later that night, Mary had dozed off watching football while waiting for her husband to come home. After games, they talk about football but also other topics. On Saturday, they just sat down and talked, only mentioning the game briefly. The head coach also polished off pizza and salad from Maggie's Farm Wood-fired Pizza.

"Relieved in a happy way," Mary said.

Saturday was an important chapter in Ferentz's story, but not the final one. Iowa's 2023 season is still just two games young. Who knows what he still can accomplish?

"I really like what I do," Ferentz said. "I like the people I'm around. I feel fortunate. If you told me in 1981 that I was going to live 30-plus years in the state of Iowa, I'd say you were absolutely nuts. Out of your mind. So you just never know where life's going to take you. And I've been really lucky."

Title: Insatiable work ethic, family support helped Iowa's Joe Evans when odds were against him

Author: John Steppe

Date: 9/8/2023

IOWA CITY — The Monday before Iowa football's 2020 game against Wisconsin had a couple pleasant surprises for Joe Evans.

"I had a moped, and it was winter, and my mom didn't have school," Evans said, describing the first surprise. "So she's like, 'Hey, do you want the car for today?' And I was like, 'That'd be great. I don't have to drive my moped around.'"

The second was a little more consequential for the Iowa defensive end. It happened during a special teams portion of practice. The first-teamers were working on kickoffs as Evans watched from the sidelines.

"All of a sudden, I catch Coach (Kirk) Ferentz out of the corner of my eye," Evans said. "He is looking at me and walking straight toward me. So I'm like, 'Did I do something wrong? ... What is going on here?'"

But Evans was not doing anything wrong. In fact, it was quite the contrary. After first casually asking Evans about how he was doing and his parents were doing, Ferentz broke the big news.

"I just wanted to let you know we put you on a full-ride scholarship today," Evans said, remembering the conversation.

That moment and many others since then have been a product of the sixth-year senior's insatiable work ethic.

"I don't know if I would have predicted his career would have been this successful, but it's a real tribute to him," Ferentz said Tuesday. "He's worked extremely hard. ... He's totally invested."

Evans arrived at Iowa in 2018 as a walk-on linebacker in the same recruiting class as three-star linebacker prospects such as Dillon Doyle, Jayden McDonald and Logan Klemp.

"When you go walk on, you're rolling the dice," said Bruce Vertanen, Evans' high school coach. "I've probably had 50-plus players walk on in Division I programs, and I think about three or four of them have worked their way in the lineup. So the odds were against him, but this is a guy that I would never bet against."

Vertanen, the since-retired head coach at Ames, could be so confident because of the "absolute unparalleled work ethic" he saw from Evans over the previous four years.

"Let's say that you had a day off in the weight room, he would go find some other place to lift," Vertanen said. "No one is going to stop him from working. ... He'll always find some other way to make himself better."

The hard work in high school did not translate to a litany of college scholarship offers like what some of Evans' Iowa teammates experienced. He played quarterback and linebacker in high school, but it was clear "he wasn't going to play quarterback in college."

"It's tough, even for college coaches in recruiting, when you're recruiting a kid who hasn't played the position they think he might play," Vertanen said. "They're looking at him at quarterback, and they're saying, 'Could he be an outside linebacker? Could he be a defensive end? Could he be a fullback? Could he be a tight end?' It's hard to project that."

Evans did not appear in any games as a true freshman linebacker in 2018. He moved to the defensive line during 2019 spring practices and appeared in eight games in the following fall.

It was never more than 20 defensive snaps in a game, per Pro Football Focus, but it was playing time for a redshirt freshman walk-on, nonetheless.

His snap count more than doubled in the 2020 season — the year when Iowa gave him a scholarship — as he played in all eight games of the COVID-19-condensed campaign.

Then Evans' game reached another level in 2021. He tied eventual NFL first-round draft pick Lukas Van Ness for the team lead with seven sacks in his first full season as a scholarship player.

Evans moved into a starting role in 2022 and again shared the team lead in sacks with 6.5.

"I try not to reflect as much just because I really don't want to get down that path of kind of getting in my feelings," Evans said. "It has been quite the journey for me. But for me, I still got one more year left, and I'm just trying to put all my focus into that right now."

Evans is in a leadership role as he enjoys his final year as a Hawkeye.

He was voted as one of the team's four captains in each of the first two weeks of the season (along with quarterback Cade McNamara, tight end Luke Lachey and linebacker Jay Higgins).

"Probably would have been a captain last year except you have guys like (Jack) Campbell," Ferentz said. "We had such a good group of guys last year at the senior end."

The nod as captain "meant the world to me," Evans said.

"That was one of my goals when I came back for my sixth year," Evans said. "Being selected by your teammates to go out and lead the team on the field is something that I cherish and something that I don't take lightly."

Evans has been the one in the middle of pregame huddles firing up his teammates since last year.

"I don't, obviously, think about it all week," Evans said. "It's kind of one of those things that comes to me — like what I think the team needs to hear on that given week."

A "classic" was before Iowa's game at Illinois last year. Iowa ended up suffering a 9-6 loss, but "a lot of guys liked that speech."

"Before the Illinois game, we went and watched the movie 'Smile,'" Evans said, referencing the 2022 horror movie. "So I kind of threw something in with the movie there — like something about doing it with a smile on your face."

As Evans prepares for his last game at Iowa State on Saturday — a couple-mile drive from where he went to high school — he anticipated figuring out what he will say on Friday.

"We have some down time in the hotel, so I'll give it about 30 minutes of thought," Evans said.

Coach Evans?

When Evans' football playing career ends, it might not necessarily be the end of his time around the sport.

"I didn't really know if I'd ever want to be a coach, but coming back for the sixth year and being able to help (the younger guys) through things — it's kind of making me think, 'Oh, maybe I could get into this coaching thing a little bit,'" Evans said. "Maybe high school, or maybe when I have kids, coach youth football or something like that."

Ames High's Vertanen "absolutely" can picture Evans coaching.

"There's a driven, unparalleled work ethic side of him, and then with that, he's a very kind, caring person," Vertanen said. "Which is also an attribute that a coach has to have — to make connections with people."

Evans is quick to credit his family — whether it be its sacrifices for him or its belief in him — for his success at Iowa.

"They've done so much for me," Evans said. "When I first got recruited here, being a walk-on, I remember my dad and my mom pulling me into his office and just saying, 'Don't worry about money. We're going to help you out as much as possible.' They believed in me, and they believed that I could eventually make it out on the field."

Their belief, Evans said, was "everything that I needed."

If Evans is having a "tough day or anything like that," his first calls are "instantly" to his dad and then his mom.

"If I still need to talk, I'll call my brother," Evans said. "They've always been there for me in difficult situations, and they've really been able to help me get through these years."

His parents moved from Ames to the Iowa City area in 2019 to be closer to Evans and his siblings. Evans goes "over there all the time" and has dinner with them every Thursday.

"It's the greatest thing ever," Evans said. "I'm so happy they made the move."

As for that December day in 2020 when Evans found out he was on scholarship, he was "trying so hard not to have a smile on my face" when his mother picked him up about an hour after his conversation with Ferentz.

It did not take long on the short drive to the Evans family's house — where he could tell his parents the happy news at the same time — for her to realize something was up. But Evans played it off as just having a "good practice."

Then Evans told "the best parents in the world" the news at their home, and he never saw his mother "so excited."

"My mom starts crying, I start crying and then my dad starts crying," said Evans, who rarely is one to shed tears. "It was definitely a moment I'll never forget."

Title: Kirk Ferentz is on the brink of 200 career wins. Is he a Hall of Famer?

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 9/7/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa – Hayden Fry didn't just rebuild the Iowa football program, he rebuilt the tight end position as well.

From the moment Fry had his tight ends stand up on the line of scrimmage, the position has stood out.

At first, it was more of a curiosity because of how strange and unusual it was to see a tight end stand at the line of scrimmage rather than in the traditional three-point stance.

But there was a method to Fry's madness.

He had big plans for the tight end position, and the position has been producing ever since, many times in spectacular fashion.

Kirk Ferentz spent nine seasons as Fry's offensive line coach for Iowa from 1981 to 1989, so Ferentz saw up-close just how valuable the tight end position could be.

Ferentz is now in his 25th season as the Iowa head coach, and the tight end position is as strong as it's ever been at Iowa.

Fry would be proud of how Kirk Ferentz has taken a good thing and made it better, the latest example being the versatile duo of Luke Lachey and Michigan transfer Erick All.

The Ohio natives combined for 10 of Iowa's 17 receptions in last Saturday's 24-14 victory over Utah State in the season opener at Kinnick Stadium, with Lachey catching seven passes for 73 yards, including two critical third-down grabs in the second half, while All caught a three-year touchdown pass in the first quarter.

"Lachey to me is that big physical guy that you don't want to get into a tussle with, but yet, he can go run these routes against corners and safeties and that tells you everything you need to know about him, and then he becomes an absolute matchup nightmare," said former Iowa All-America tight end Marv Cook. "And then you throw in All on the other side, he's a matchup issue as well.

"They've got a dynamic one-two punch."

Cook has the distinction of being the first tight end in program history to be named a consensus All-American, earning that honor as a senior in 1988.

He is one of just two Iowa tight ends to be named a consensus All-American, along with Dallas Clark, who was honored in 2002.

But the list of star tight ends for Iowa is long and distinguished, from Jonathan Hayes to Tony Moeaki to C.J. Fiedorowicz to George Kittle to Noah Fant to T.J. Hockenson to Sam LaPorta, Iowa has certainly earned its title of Tight End U.

And now Lachey looks poised to join the elite group as a fourth-year junior, who just keeps getting better.

"It's super cool and it's humbling definitely," Lachey said of being recognized as an emerging Iowa tight end. "This is the kind of thing you dream of, being a part of something like that.

"I'm not going to say I'm in there. But I'm just going to try and do my best to get in that at some point."

Lachey was recently asked by CBS Sports to name his top Iowa tight ends, and while he mentioned multiple names, the 48-second video that was posted on X, previously known as Twitter, only included six: Marv Cook, George Kittle, C.J. Fiedorowicz, Noah Fant, T.J. Hockenson and Sam LaPorta.

"I'll tell you what, I got kind of slammed for that video because I missed all these guys," Lachey said. "But I mentioned way more than they actually put on there."

Lachey said he heard from some of his teammates, but most of the backlash came from social media.

"So, I've got to ignore that stuff at the end of the day," Lachey said. "But I did ignore it."

For Lachey to have named all the star tight ends for Iowa would have taken much longer than 48 seconds.

"It would have been like a five-minute video," said Lachey, who is the son of former Ohio State and NFL offensive lineman Jim Lachey

Cook appreciates that Lachey mentioned him because it would have been easy to overlook a tight end that played for Iowa nearly 40 years ago.

"He understands the game, obviously, his dad was one of the all-time greats collegiately and professionally," Cook said. "So, I think he's got a great history of the game and what it's all about."

Lachey showed star potential last season despite playing in Sam LaPorta's shadow.

Iowa only had seven touchdown receptions last season, but Lachey had four of them. He also finished second team on the team behind LaPorta with 398 receiving yards and third on the team with 28 catches.

Lachey will definitely be a point of emphasis for the Iowa State defense when team teams meet on Saturday in Ames.

"To me, he is the full package," Cook said of the 6-foot-6, 253-pound Lachey.

The same thing also used to be said about Cook, who played seven seasons in the NFL and earned All-Pro recognition, although, Cook considers Lachey to be more complete than he was as a tight end.

"I was an adequate blocker at best," Cook said. "But he is to me, he's physical, but he can run."

George Kittle was hobbled by injuries for much of his career as a Hawkeye tight end, and has been for parts of his current NFL career.

But when healthy, Kittle is a versatile force as a tight end, one of the best at his position in the NFL.

T.J. Hockenson also now ranks among the best NFL tight ends, and he recently signed a four-year contract extension that was initially reported by ESPN's Adam Schefter as being worth $68.5 million over those four years.

"The amazing thing, like George Kittle, he can fly, but he is an incredibly physical, dominant run blocker with his athleticism," Cook said. "And Hockenson is similar. Hockenson is really, really good at all of it."

"Lachey to me is a bigger version of Hockenson. I think he runs pretty well. I think he runs better than you think."

Lachey also has shown that he can make difficult catches in traffic as he did in the second half against Utah State when the Iowa offense was sputtering.

He caught a 31-yard pass from Iowa quarterback Cade McNamara on third down despite having a defender draped all over him.

"The other thing he does incredibly well is just his body awareness when the ball is in the air," Cook said of Lachey.

Cook said there was a stretch during the prime of his career when he played with extreme confidence.

"There was a couple-year stretch where I felt I would always be open for at least a quarter or half second," Cook said. "If the quarterback was willing to throw the ball in the location, I could be open and make the catch because of the way I would position my body coming out of the break against a defender."

Asked if he sees that starting to happen with Lachey, Cook said.

"One-hundred percent."

Lachey credits part of his success as a pass catcher to having played basketball since a young age. He was a four-year letter-winner in basketball in high school.

"I feel like basketball has helped me with that," Lachey said. "Like rebounding and stuff and trying to go and get the rebound at the highest point."

Lachey also played games on his own as kid in which he worked on his ability to catch.

"Growing up, I would just lay on the ground and throw the ball up and down to myself for hours," Lachey said. "I kind of learned to catch just doing that."

As for his ability to catch in traffic, Lachey has a simple explanation for why he excels at that.

"This is a thing that us tight ends talk about is you're going to get hit, so you might as well try to come down with the ball anyway because if you don't catch it, you're still going to get hit," Lachey said. "That's what I try to think about."

Lachey is known for being a good guy away from the football field and his teammates and coaches admire him for that, and for his leadership skills.

He served as one of four team captains for the season opener against Utah State and will also be a captain for the Iowa State game.

But there is also a side of Lachey that is emerging on the football field, much to the delight of Iowa tight end coach Abdul Hodge.

"He's maturing as an overall individual on and off the field, understanding the difference between off the field being a good guy and it's okay when you're on the field to be an —hole," said Hodge, who is a former All-Big Ten linebacker and three-year starter for Iowa. "Luke's been doing a great job playing the game fast and physical. I thought he played a physical game last week."

"Luke's a great guy, but on the field, he gets after it. Obviously, he's a team captain now. He's been a lot more vocal, and he's been doing a great job for us."

Now in his fourth year in the program, Lachey has studied Iowa's history at tight end there are constant reminders of that rich history.

"Hodge also recently made a video that pays tribute to Iowa's tradition of developing star tight ends."

"You feel like you just kind of learn," Lachey said. "Coach Hodge made kind of Tight End U video. It shows a bunch of the guys, the best guys that have ever come through here."

"So, it is really cool, and just nice to learn about the past."

Cook is certainly a big part of Iowa's past at tight end, and he was also on the receiving end of one of the most famous touchdown passes in program history.

It happened in 1987 when Cook, on 4th-and-23, caught a 29-yard touchdown pass from Chuck Hartlieb in the final seconds of the game to defeat Ohio State 29-27 in Columbus, Ohio.

"I've seen that highlight a couple times," Lachey said.

Kirk Ferentz, meanwhile, has seen Lachey improve steadily, first as LaPorta's understudy and now in a leading role.

"Good players just keep getting better," Kirk Ferentz said. "Even when they get older and their skills start to deteriorate, that's why you've got a brain. If you're thinking right and thinking about how you can get better and improve, there's so much to be said for experience if you're doing it the right way."

"Luke's a great young guy. He's starting to feel it. Last year he started taking off, and he's done a great job in the out of season. We expect him to play well. If we're going to have a chance, I say it all the time, our best guys, our most experienced guys have to play better than they did a year ago or we're going to be in a bad place."

The addition of Erick All has made a position of strength even stronger.

All had over 400 receiving yards during Michigan's Big Ten championship season in 2021, and with Cade McNamara throwing to him.

All held a zoom conference with the media on Wednesday and talked about the circumstances surrounding his first touchdown as a Hawkeye.

"It was crazy that being my first catch and it being a touchdown and it being from Cade," All said. "That was pretty surreal."

Title: A New Chapter for Iowa's WRs, led by Diante Vines life changes

Author: Chad Leistikow

Date: 8/31/23

IOWA CITY – Shortly after Iowa's 21-0 win in the Music City Bowl, Diante Vines enjoyed one more night out with his buddies and then committed himself to a healthier lifestyle.

More vegetables. Asparagus has become the wide receiver's new favorite.

"I wasn't too big of a veggie guy," Vines said.

And he cut out vices like spicy nacho Doritos and alcohol.

"Completely quit drinking. Don't put it near my lips," he said. "I'm off that. I found it was no good for you. I just stay away from it. I feel better on the weekends."

Vines clarified that he wasn't a heavy drinker, but he didn't like how he felt after a night out. Instead of going to the bars, he now stays home and plays video games. And with typical Vines outward confidence, he made sure to mention he's easily the best gamer on the team – in Madden, Mortal Kombat or anything else.

"Whatever you want to play, I'll beat 'em all," he said.

Entering Year 4 with Iowa and at 22 years old with a chance to become a crucial player in the Hawkeyes' embattled offense, Vines basically told himself enough is enough. Nobody harped on him to change. The self-overhaul became necessary, in his mind. He spends more time meditating and praying.

"I just buckled down and realized this is my dream, this is what I want to do," Vines said. "So, I've got to make these sacrifices to be able to accomplish my dream."

Vines' first three years at Iowa were riddled with bad luck. He tore an Achilles tendon as a true freshman in 2020. He was a non-factor in 2021. Then he was starring in fall camp ahead of the 2022 season and broke his hand after trying to break his fall while making a touchdown catch. Vines missed the first six games of the season, then was sprinkled back into the fold and made his first 10 career catches (for a total of 94 yards). But an average of 13.4 receiving yards per game, with no catch longer than 15 yards, wasn't the type of impact he envisioned.

That led to the lifestyle changes – which he's happy to show off.

During his interview, Vines flexed his right biceps muscle to emphasize how he's different.

"You see that? I've got the muscles now. In the weight room a little bit more and the veggies," said Vines, listed at 6 feet and 198 pounds. "It's a good thing to get the veggies in you, eat a lot more protein, stuff like that. My body just feels better. I feel more refreshed, more energized."

"Cutting out the drinking, that's been the biggest part for me. Drinking's no good. Everyone out there, don't drink too much."

Vines' reset is emblematic of Iowa's wide-receivers room, which is completely reshaped from last year's season opener vs. South Dakota State when only one scholarship receiver (Arland Bruce IV) was available.

Now, Iowa feels good about its top four in Vines (who has been predominantly playing the prime "X" spot), sixth-year senior Nico Ragaini (mostly playing the slot) and transfers Seth Anderson (Charleston Southern) and Kaleb Brown (Ohio State). Walk-on Alec Wick, who started last year's season opener, is healthy after an injury but behind those top four.

Head coach Kirk Ferentz called receiver the most improved group on the team, along with the offensive line.

"I think we're in a little better situation right now," Ferentz said. "You have a healthy Nico Ragaini. You have a healthy Diante Vines. Start with those two guys. Two pleasant surprises from the month of August are Seth Anderson (and) Kaleb (Brown)."

“Both those guys have the potential to really improve and climb if they keep practicing like they have. ... We're a lot further down the road than we were a year ago.”

Ragaini, 24, is in a similar situation as his Connecticut cohort Vines. Ragaini's injury history has been rough since he had a 46-catch season in 2019, including a back injury in 2021 and a foot injury that slowed him for much of the 2022 season. That foot issue has cropped up again this offseason, but he's back at practice and feeling good ahead of Saturday's 11 a.m. opener vs. Utah State.

Ragaini said some care packages and notes from his mother, Josanna, lifted his spirits as he was sidelined during fall camp. About 25 Ragaini friends and family will be in attendance Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

“Even mentally, for yourself, when you're not healthy and having to play games, it kind of sucks,” Ragaini said. “But I'm feeling pretty good at this point. And I'm ready to show what we've got this Saturday.”

The ideal scenario for Iowa is to have Vines and Ragaini enjoy healthy, full seasons for the Hawkeyes and to have Anderson and Brown, two exciting youngsters, continue to ascend.

“We're ready for the opportunity,” Ragaini said. “We're ready to attack it.”

Think of it as the old guys feeling new again; and the new guys trying to get old fast.

“We have an idea what we want this offense to look like,” quarterback Cade McNamara added. “We know it's Week 1, and we're going to continue to get better as the season goes on. We're a confident group, and I think we know we're able to make a lot of things happen.”

Title: The Dog Days of Summer

Author: Jack Bacon

Date: 8/30/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — In life, as in sport, many great stories begin with one person and a vision. One of the best stories of the University of Iowa football team's offseason started with an idea, not for a new trick play or defensive scheme, but for a promotion.

Courtney Ralph, a volunteer coordinator at Safe Haven of Iowa County Animal Shelter, wanted to up her Hawkeye football player-to-dog ratio.

"We probably had 25 to 30 guys out there sometimes," said junior offensive lineman Logan Jones. "I would say the Hawkeye-to-dog ratio was at least one guy for every dog, at times. It was awesome."

In total, more than 90 members of the Hawkeye football team combined for 975 hours of community service this summer at Safe Haven, which is located 30 miles west of Iowa City in South Amana, Iowa.

"I did have a sales pitch," said Ralph.

Casting a wide net on social media, Ralph messaged players a request to promote the shelter on their personal accounts. In an era of paid "Name, Image and Likeness" promotion, she had nothing to offer except a chance to visit the animals.

"Come visit our shelter," Ralph told the players. "Meet some of our animals, take photos and share experiences with the community. This would spread the word about these animals to a larger audience."

That was all the Hawkeyes needed to hear. Sixth-year defensive end Joe Evans said puppy fever spread quickly through the Iowa locker room.

"Some guys decided to get out there one day, and word of mouth traveled throughout the facility," said Evans. "It ended up being everyone going to Safe Haven and having a great time."

Leaders of Iowa's Hawkeye Championships teams decided to seize the momentum. An annual tradition within the program, Hawkeye Championships teams are small groups which foster team comradery through community service activities during the offseason. All players participate and earn points for their team through service hours.

The connection with Safe Haven presented a unique chance for teams to collaborate. That meant a steady stream of Hawkeye helpers throughout the summer.

"Safe Haven was an opportunity for us to go out and log a lot of hours helping those dogs," said Jones. "You can say it was for Hawkeye Championship points, but you develop relationships with these dogs, and everybody just loves it. It was a great summer for everybody."

Players primarily spent time socializing with the animals, which the shelter says makes animals more adoptable.

"It's hard to put into words how valuable the players' involvement has been," says Ralph. "For starters, the amount of time over the months that the players spent at the shelter would have been impossible for our current team of volunteers to cover.

"The hours the guys came allowed the dogs and cats extra enrichment and socialization time, which often helps them become more adoptable. Kennel stress is a real thing for shelter animals, and the best way to combat it is with attention and getting them into homes as quickly as possible."

Junior defensive end Deonte Craig said the players made an effort to reach as many animals as possible, regardless of breed or age.

"The Hawkeye players really showed out," said Craig. "No one animal was getting too much attention. We spread the love around."

Players across all position groups bought in, from walk-ons to veteran starters. One of the most frequent volunteers at Safe Haven was preseason Doak Walker candidate Kaleb Johnson.

"I was out at Safe Haven 12 times this summer," said Johnson. "I would go for an hour or two each time. We would take the dogs out, feed them, play with them and show love to them.

"I liked this husky named George. He was a very questionable dog, but I love the way he is and the way he carries himself. He was stand-up guardable. He felt like he was that man, so I like that about him. He was confident that he was the best dog there."

For Ralph, those relationships were a large reason the summer became so special. For instance, Ralph says that time spent with the running back room made all the difference for George, the husky.

"George was exhibiting some signs of kennel stress," said Ralph. "We asked the players not to handle George without an experienced volunteer who had worked with the trainer."

"Max White would patiently sit outside of George's kennel, spending time with him, until George was eventually cleared for all volunteers to handle. The time Max and the others were able to spend with George added to the enrichment time George needs."

"I could tell you a story about almost all of the players," says Ralph.

Junior defensive tackle Yahya Black spoke with shelter volunteers about his educational goals to become a mentor for high school students.

Junior tight end Luke Lachey was introduced to every cat by the young daughter of a shelter volunteer.

Junior cornerback Cooper DeJean led the effort to move a large pile of rock, a task he saw as better suited to the football team than the shelter's volunteer staff.

Jones and sophomore kicker Drew Stevens made extra time to play with kittens, whose need was the greatest due to their recent separation from their mother.

"Whenever we went there, I would try to make time to see the cats, because they don't get a lot of attention," says Jones. "They made our days, too."

Joe Evans, Eric Epenesa and Graham Friedrichsen befriended Sugar, a white and tan pit bull who had previously been abandoned.

"If she is still there after this year, and my living situation allows, I am probably going to go back and adopt her," says Evans.

Then there is Wally, the newly arrived hound dog whom players promptly named after linebackers coach Seth Wallace (any resemblance is purely coincidental).

"It is truly heartwarming and the reason I do what I do," says Ralph. "These animals tend to come to us from the worst situations. They have often been abandoned, or lost, or are being separated from the people they know and love because of terrible circumstances.

"We get to take that worst situation and turn it into a best-case scenario with our ability to love and care and be decent human beings. Everyone — each player who joined us included — who takes time to help these animals, makes the future better. The animals make us better, too."

Indeed, the impact went both ways. After months of struggling to find the right fit at other shelters, junior defensive back Jermari Harris came home from Safe Haven with a cat, which he named Anubis after the Egyptian mythological figure.

"He is a good friend of mine now," said Harris. "It was love at first sight. He just ran up on me. He started loving on me and what not. He is a real cuddly guy. That is my dog, but he's a cat."

Like George the husky, Anubis does not lack for swagger.

"Anubis is high energy," said Harris. "They told me when I got him that he was in his young teenage years. He is a crybaby, who loves attention. It was just me and him in there. I am all he has, he's all I have."

Fortunately, the duo now has a new roommate in junior defensive back Sebastian Castro.

"He is an animal guy, himself," said Harris. "They get along, even though they try to act like they don't. They do."

Harris says that between the scenic commute and being with great friends, Safe Haven became an aptly named getaway for the Hawkeyes.

"It was fun, and I also love the drive," said Harris. "It is just 30 minutes west of here, so I can get my head away from things and go visit the animals. I met new friends and Courtney Ralph is an amazing person. She reached out to me and got me interested. Once I got into the building, it was fun from there on."

The dog days of summer meant something different to all Hawkeye football players during the summer of 2023. That started with a big idea and a simple ask.

"Courtney cares about everyone," said Harris. "She is a genuine person. Everything she does I feel as though it comes from the heart. That is all I can ask for. I am willing to do whatever for her, so long as she reaches out and asks."

Statement from Kimberly Buresh, President, Safe Haven of Iowa County:

"Safe Haven of Iowa County, a small non-profit animal shelter, launched a new volunteer opportunity with the Iowa Hawkeye football team earlier this year. I have volunteered at the shelter for 17 years and can safely say this has been one of the more exciting partnerships in our organization's history.

Not only have our cats and dogs directly benefited from the nearly 1,000 volunteer hours the team logged, but our own current volunteers truly appreciated the extra help and enjoyed getting to work alongside these fine young men. I could tell the team enjoyed coming somewhere that they could relax and connect with pets as many of the players mentioned missing their pets back home. I honestly think they enjoyed the opportunity to get away from the busy lifestyle of Iowa City, and a chance to not think about the stress and pressure that Division I collegiate athletes often face. Safe Haven has definitely benefitted from this new volunteer opportunity, and we like to think the players gain something valuable as well and look forward to building this relationship in the future."

Title: How Cade McNamara, a Michigan legend, found renewed purpose at Iowa

Author: Michael Cohen

Date: 8/30/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Last December, on Christmas morning, Cade McNamara awoke atop the Costco mattress he'd placed on the floor of an empty office building. Beside him was Grizz, the 155-pound English Mastiff whom McNamara drove from Ann Arbor, Michigan, to his makeshift home in Southern California. Down the hall were his brothers, Kyle and Jake, both football players at UTEP, who brought their own dogs and crashed on air mattresses in enclosed-glass rooms.

In a few days, Michigan would face Texas Christian in the College Football Playoff semifinals, a second trip in as many seasons for head coach Jim Harbaugh. But McNamara — the quarterback who anchored Harbaugh's team the year prior — was seven weeks removed from surgery to address tears in his MCL and patellar tendon, separate injuries that occurred nearly 11 months apart. The procedure was performed in early November by renowned Los Angeles-based surgeon Dr. Neal ElAttrache, the lead physician for the Rams and Dodgers, and McNamara moved into the vacant building in San Clemente because of its proximity to a rehab facility. The addition of a Christmas tree helped brighten the place, which had been recently purchased by a friend and loaned to McNamara. He and his brothers had more than 30,000 square feet to themselves, including a kitchen with a mostly functional refrigerator.

The McNamara parents, Gary and Nicole, had traveled to California a few days earlier to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. They joined their sons later that morning to exchange gifts.

"It was one of those things where it's like, 'What Christmas do you remember the most?'" Gary McNamara said. "It's going to be hard not to remember that Christmas just because of the location we had it."

Cherished though that memory may be, it was a staggering juxtaposition from where Cade McNamara stood exactly one year prior. On Dec. 25, 2021, he stepped off a plane and onto the tarmac at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport for the Wolverines' inaugural trip to the College Football Playoff. Michigan would get mauled, 34-11, by Georgia, the eventual national champion, but McNamara's name was already etched in program lore as the quarterback who upset Ohio State and claimed the school's first Big Ten Championship in 17 years. His was a leading voice among the upperclassmen credited by head coach Jim Harbaugh for repairing Michigan's culture. "Love Cade," Harbaugh said at Big Ten Media Days in 2023.

So how did McNamara wind up sleeping on the floor of an office building while the Wolverines returned to the national semifinals last year? How did a player described by one coach as "a Michigan legend" all but vanish after absorbing the hit that damaged his knee in Week 3? How did McNamara hop into and out of the transfer portal before the Wolverines even arrived at Lucas Oil Stadium to win a second consecutive Big Ten title? And how did he claw his way back from a self-professed "lowest low" to find supreme joy as the starting quarterback at Iowa?

Answers to those questions are simultaneously murky and multi-dimensional, intricate and impassioned, variable from speaker to speaker. The central figure — McNamara — had harnessed the resiliency and competitive fire he's known for to emerge from an icy quarterback room and propel the Wolverines to new heights in 2021. An uneasy relationship with understudy J.J. McCarthy further complicated their high-profile, hotly contested competition the following year, and the incumbent was fraught with angst as the battle spilled into the regular season. Multiple sources said disagreements over the objectivity of Harbaugh's process gave way to disputes about the school's proposed treatment of McNamara's injured knee, with the decision to undergo surgery cutting against what the medical staff advised. Once McNamara trekked to California in early November, he never rejoined the team.

Yet from the darkness and dissolution rose the ideal winds of change for an erstwhile championship quarterback. Roughly a dozen Power 5 schools came calling when McNamara entered the transfer portal on Nov. 28, though some had begun sniffing around in early August. Having competed against Michigan in the Big Ten title game, Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz described the pursuit of McNamara, then 22, as "a no-brainer," and made it clear the Hawkeyes planned to build around him as a redshirt senior with two years of eligibility remaining.

For the first time in a long time, McNamara felt wanted. He committed to Iowa on Dec. 1 and hasn't looked back since.

"I've been nothing but so happy that I made this decision," McNamara said.

Rewind to January 2019.

A teenage McNamara early enrolled at Michigan for a recruiting class that would finish eighth in the national rankings. A four-star prospect from Reno, Nevada, McNamara had turned down scholarship offers from Notre Dame, Alabama, USC, Georgia and Tennessee, among others, to sign with the Wolverines. The coaching staff assigned him to live with fellow newcomer Gabe Newberg, an edge rusher from Ohio, who remains one of McNamara's closest friends. The new roommates spent time chatting after moving into their dorm.

"Most guys kind of start out trying to get to know each other, asking the usual questions," Newberg said. "But one of the first things he said was when he gets the reins and becomes the starter, he wants to make a difference at Michigan," by changing the culture and winning.

Such foresight and faith would still be impressive had Newberg been the only person to experience McNamara's prophetic self-belief, but similar stories have radiated through the quarterback's inner circle for years. The memory Gary McNamara shares is from a conversation shortly after his son arrived in Ann Arbor, at which point McNamara listed approximately 20 changes he believed would strengthen the program — all things he vowed to implement before leaving the school. The anecdote that defensive back Mike Sainristil describes took place even earlier, in 2018, during a recruiting call in which McNamara assured him they'd win a Big Ten Championship if Sainristil flipped his commitment from Virginia Tech to Michigan. He did, and they did.

Examples like these are critical to understanding McNamara's internal wiring. At 6-foot-1 and 205 pounds, McNamara has never been the biggest quarterback, nor the strongest, nor the fastest. His arm is considered good enough without being great, and certain coaches have reservations about his release on short and intermediate throws. Even with a good season or two at Iowa, he's unlikely to become an early-round draft pick.

What McNamara does have is an appealing blend of toughness, intelligence and leadership skills that are fortified by his maniacal work ethic — all traits that endeared him to Harbaugh, the former Michigan quarterback revered for his willpower and grit. He plays selflessly and passionately within an offense's framework, and teammates have no qualms about following him into the fire. "He would be one of those great Michigan men," Harbaugh said at Big Ten Media Days this July.

It was McNamara's dedication that earned his teammates' respect at Michigan despite never seeing the field as a freshman. He was known for waking up at 5 a.m. to pore over the playbook and study opponents even with several players ahead of him on the depth chart. He always tagged along with Newberg and running back Zach Charbonnet for extra lifting sessions at Schembechler Hall and caught their attention with how hard he strained in the weight room. When his friends spent time in the recovery areas, McNamara threw passes alone in a dimly lit Oosterbaan Field House. He even reamed out a teammate who loafed through a workout for non-traveling players in 2019.

"They kind of went back and forth for a little bit," Newberg said of the altercation. "But Cade stood his ground. And me and a few other guys that were in that lift had his back because when you see someone that takes everything that seriously, and if they have an issue, you're going to get behind somebody like that."

They got behind him again on Nov. 21, 2020, after Harbaugh pulled starting quarterback Joe Milton during the second quarter of a game at Rutgers. McNamara came off the bench to complete 27 of 36 passes for 260 yards, four touchdowns and no interceptions in a triple-overtime victory. It was a performance, Harbaugh said recently, that proved McNamara had enough "gravel in his gut" to lead the Wolverines.

The comeback against Rutgers marked the unofficial beginning of McNamara's run atop the depth chart. An offseason metamorphosis for Michigan saw Milton transfer to Tennessee and new quarterbacks coach Matt Weiss arrive from the Baltimore Ravens. A group of upperclassmen led by Aidan Hutchinson, Josh Ross, Brad Hawkins and McNamara, among others, seized control of the locker room to re-chart the Wolverines' course. Together, they sparked the unexpected surge that snapped an eight-game losing streak to Ohio State and secured the program's first Big Ten title since 2004, knocking off Iowa at Lucas Oil Stadium.

McNamara, who finished the season with 2,576 yards, 15 touchdowns and only six interceptions, was named third-team All-Big Ten by the coaches and media.

"It just seemed like he was the guy that kind of was the trigger man," Ferentz said this summer. "The guy that made it all go."

Lurking beneath the surface of Michigan's storybook run to the College Football Playoff was an undercurrent of tension between McNamara and McCarthy, the five-star prospect with a significantly higher ceiling. Swarmlike media coverage of McCarthy's recruitment anointed him the program's savior long before he enrolled, and all of that attention became an impediment to his nascent relationship with McNamara.

By the time McCarthy arrived on campus in January 2021, the Wolverines' quarterback room had already devolved into a snake pit, according to a team source with direct knowledge of the situation. Fallout from the prior year's competition involving Milton, McNamara and Dylan McCaffrey, who also wound up transferring, fostered an environment in which players turned against each other.

"And Cade, honestly, was a huge part of how cutthroat that room was," the source said. "It kind of fits with his personality of when J.J. first got there, he reached out to [McNamara], 'Hey, can't wait to learn from you,' typical stuff that would be smart stuff to say to somebody when you're coming into that situation. And Cade ghosted him, wouldn't respond to him."

A source close to McNamara pushed back on this but acknowledged he and McCarthy never watched film together. It was third-string quarterback Davis Warren, the source said, who routinely joined McNamara to study opponents.

Having allowed the contract for then-quarterbacks coach Ben McDaniels to expire, Harbaugh replaced him with Weiss in late February. The retooled coaching staff tried to sanitize the quarterback room by creating a series of new initiatives that encouraged players to be more supportive of each other. They designed activities and environments that prioritized fun in hopes of strengthening interpersonal relationships. The goal of naming McNamara the starter in mid-April was to offer him the kind of validation they believed would elevate his play. And at the same time, it could relieve the pressure on McCarthy, who had just turned 18.

Slowly but surely, McNamara embraced the messaging from his coaches and became a better mentor for McCarthy, who averaged 15 snaps per game in 2021. There were long stretches of that season, a source said, in which the two quarterbacks genuinely liked each other and appreciated what the other could bring to the offense — even if both would have preferred more playing time. Where McNamara offered the steadiness and poise of a player who prepared like "an NFL-level quarterback, starter-level," according to one collegiate coach who worked with him, McCarthy injected more dynamism as a dual-threat runner and passer.

"I think [McCarthy] learned a ton from Cade," the team source said. "And I think he would tell you that, too, and genuinely mean it."

The source said there was never much consideration for starting McCarthy that season, even when the passing game encountered its share of hiccups. Harbaugh and his staff recognized McCarthy had more upside than McNamara, but the coaches knew relying on a true freshman "was not going to be the best thing for Michigan football," especially at a time when they believed the College Football Playoff was within reach. What the Wolverines needed was a quarterback who could avoid mistakes and run the offense efficiently — not the "higher-variance strategy," as the source described it, of handing the keys to McCarthy. Yet everyone understood the caliber of player he was likely to become.

"It's tough, you know, being a very good quarterback with another very good quarterback right behind you," Sainristil said. "It's like at all points ... everything [McNamara] does is even more under a microscope with a guy like J.J. right behind him. So at any point, that job could be taken."

And soon enough, it would be.

Gary McNamara wanted his son to leave Michigan after the semifinal loss to Georgia in 2021. The family never discussed the idea of McNamara declaring for the NFL Draft, where he might have been a late-round pick, but conversations about entering the transfer portal were had.

"I thought it was better if he just left," Gary McNamara said. "I tried on my own, but he made the decision that he was sticking with it because he was basically the only leader left behind."

Though McNamara chose to remain in Ann Arbor, his father thought the writing was on the wall. It was clear that Harbaugh intended to hold an open competition between McNamara and McCarthy ahead of the 2022 season despite what Gary McNamara described as positive feedback from the head coach to his son in private. The staff thought it could handle having both players on the roster for another season — Harbaugh even told reporters he didn't think either quarterback was the type of player who would transfer — but a team source said the coaches knew it would be challenging to "keep everything copacetic."

In an effort to shock-paddle some chemistry into the quarterback room, the staff convinced the group to take a trip together to Toronto in April 2022. "Just to make them like each other," the source said, and everyone wound up having a great time. McNamara was in good spirits having asserted himself as the No. 1 quarterback in spring practice, which finished a few days prior. He entered fall camp with the lead after McCarthy missed most of spring with a labrum injury.

It's at this point where stories about what happened over the ensuing weeks and months diverge, with the McNamara camp outlining one version of events as sources from Michigan lay out another. The differences can be distilled into two central themes: the veracity of the team's quarterback competition; and the severity of McNamara's eventual injury.

Having benefited from extra reps throughout the spring, McNamara recalled progressing through fall camp "playing the best football I've ever played," he said when asked about it earlier this summer, flashing significant improvements to his footwork, accuracy and mobility. On this much, at least, the two sides agree. "He was at a level in 2022 where he would have started at Michigan probably any other year that Jim was the head coach," a team source said.

The medical staff slowly reintegrated McCarthy through the first half of camp to protect his shoulder, the source said, and the gradual ramp-up caused McNamara's lead to appear more commanding than it might have otherwise been. Had Harbaugh called the competition after a week, McNamara would have won. Had he called it at the midway point of camp, McNamara would have been on top then, too.

But practice by practice, week by week, McCarthy kept improving as he shook off rust and began to harness his potential. The team source credited Harbaugh for exuding enough patience to afford McCarthy the chance to settle in following such a lengthy absence. There was no denying he and McNamara were "very, very close," the source said, but the coaching staff believed the players were on different trajectories by the end of camp: McNamara was as steady as he'd ever been; McCarthy was ascending.

"And I'm sure, well, I know that's something that bothers Cade, you know what I mean?" the source said. "I'm sure he feels like Jim was the referee and let the clock run until the other team came back. ... But any idea that Jim wasn't totally fair or did anything, ever, that he didn't think was purely in the interest of us winning football games, it's just total fiction."

Said Gary McNamara: "That whole process of the reality of what was going on in practice and the reality of what was being said in the public, it was so bizarre. And it made me uncomfortable."

So uncomfortable, in fact, that he relocated to Michigan from the family's home in Tennessee because he feared a negative outcome in the quarterback battle — one that might nudge his son toward the transfer portal. Sure enough, after McCarthy turned in a strong showing against Hawaii, Harbaugh named him the starter for Week 3 and beyond. McNamara tore his MCL during mop-up duty the following week with the Wolverines leading UConn by 38 late in the second quarter.

Here, the stories diverge once more. A source privy to the discussions surrounding McNamara's knee said Michigan's medical staff believed the injury should have been rehabbed without surgery, and the coaching staff wanted him to return later that season as McCarthy's backup. Both sides knew there was a procedure that could address the MCL tear, the source said, but Michigan viewed that route as an elective — not a requirement.

In a move that the team source said surprised Michigan's coaches, McNamara and his father flew to Los Angeles for additional opinions, ultimately meeting with two more doctors. Their first question, according to Gary McNamara, was about the possibility of a quick fix that would get McNamara back on the field as soon as possible. When told there was more damage than could be addressed with a minor procedure, the decision was made to undergo season-ending surgery. ElAttrache fixed the torn MCL and also mended a pre-existing tear in McNamara's patellar tendon that the quarterback didn't know he had. The second tear had been discovered during the imaging process that revealed his torn MCL, and it was eventually traced to a game against Michigan State in 2021.

"In a way," McNamara said, "that was my only option. My knee had not healed properly, and [ElAttrache] was the one who thought that he could fix it."

McNamara watched the rest of Michigan's season from his two-month stay in the empty office building.

On Dec. 8, 2022, McNamara limped into Carver-Hawkeye Arena. He'd committed to Iowa a few days prior and traveled to Iowa City for an official visit, even though he wasn't cleared to fly. The itinerary included a men's basketball game between the Hawkeyes and archrival Iowa State.

McNamara and his father entered the arena shortly after tipoff. The crowd erupted as McNamara walked out of the tunnel and toward his seats, which were directly in front of an appreciative student section.

"And from that time," Gary McNamara said, "I just think it's been a really fun ride for him so far. So if you're gonna write something about how happy he is, it's just been kind of the golden spot since the first day he walked on that campus."

Finding Iowa has been the silver lining that made the most difficult year of McNamara's life worthwhile. Emotions flooded through him in the days and weeks spent sleeping on the floor of his empty office building, a Big Ten championship-winning quarterback stuck in limbo between one phase of his career and the next. He compared the surgery to hitting a reset button and vowed to use the recovery time as a chance to "figure out what my motivations are and what I want the next version of myself to be."

Thus far, the Hawkeyes have given McNamara everything he envisioned during those periods of introspection, with a clear path to the starting job atop the list. Neither he nor McCarthy spoke publicly in real time about how the pressure of last year's competition affected them, but the comments and body language they've displayed since are telling. McCarthy told reporters in August that he's having "the most fun in my entire life playing football right now when everything is just clear, everyone knows what's going on." And McNamara shared more smiles and laughs with reporters during a single media session in June than over his final 10 months at Michigan combined.

"Mentally," Newberg said, "he's definitely in a great place right now. But I know he wouldn't go back and change anything that happened. Obviously bringing a Big Ten Championship to Michigan, he wouldn't take anything back."

The hope for Iowa is that McNamara can deliver the program's first Big Ten Championship in 19 years and its first outright title since 1985, at which point Ferentz was the team's offensive line coach. Only four Hawkeyes signal-callers in the last 15 seasons eclipsed McNamara's passing output for Michigan in 2021, and last year Iowa ranked among the bottom 10 nationally in total offense, scoring offense, passing offense and third-down conversion rate. At his best, McNamara plays with the kind of level-headed efficiency that last year's starter, Spencer Petras, sorely lacked while throwing for an equal number of touchdowns and interceptions. The Hawkeyes needed McNamara as much as he needed them.

Just as McNamara did in Ann Arbor, he quickly established himself among Iowa's leadership group. He dueled with left tackle Mason Richman to see who could arrive at the facility first each morning, generally in the neighborhood of 5 a.m. He mentored Iowa's younger quarterbacks from the sideline as the medical staff held him out of 11-on-11 drills during spring practice. He routinely knocked on coaches' doors to schedule extra meetings.

In offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz, whose contract was altered following last year's dreadful outcome, McNamara said he found a kindred spirit because they both have something to prove in 2023. And in Kirk Ferentz, 68, he found a head coach who places significant value on the exact skillset McNamara possesses.

"Coach Ferentz has always left his door open for me," McNamara said.

He kickstarted the process of building chemistry with his new receivers and tight ends by inviting them on his annual trip to visit private quarterbacks coach Jordan Palmer, the California-based guru whose clientele includes Josh Allen, Joe Burrow and Trevor Lawrence. Eleven Hawkeyes — both scholarship and non-scholarship players alike — flew to the West Coast for cold plunges every morning, shared meals along the beach and a chance to go surfing in conjunction with the high-level training from Palmer and former Cincinnati Bengals wideout T.J. Houshmandzadeh.

The group included Iowa's two marquee transfers at the skill positions in former Michigan tight end Erick All, who roomed with McNamara in Ann Arbor, and former Ohio State wideout Kaleb Brown.

"I got a test of [McNamara's] character," receiver Seth Anderson said when asked about the trip to California, "and he's a really good dude. I feel like he really wants us to make it far. And we all feel the same way."

After watching their son push through months of mental and physical pain, Gary and Nicole McNamara identified two moments that convinced them he'd emerged from the darkness unscathed.

The first took place a few months after surgery when McNamara passed the strength tests that earned him an initial medical clearance. His parents heard him crying on the other end of the phone as he shared the news. All of McNamara's concerns about returning to football swiftly melted.

The second moment came a few months later, in late April, when his parents visited Iowa City for the Hawkeyes' spring game. At dinner one evening, McNamara told them he was the happiest he'd ever been in his college career. Transferring to Iowa had been the perfect choice.

"I told Cade, 'If you didn't go through all those hard times at Michigan, you would never have found Iowa,'" Gary McNamara said. "And Iowa is the blessing of a lifetime for Cade. It's the first time I've been involved with a program with my kids where I could care less if they win a game because the situation is so good for him."

For that reason, neither McNamara nor his parents harbor ill will toward Michigan, choosing instead to view his time in Ann Arbor as a single chapter of an ongoing football journey. McNamara takes great pride in what he achieved with the Wolverines — especially winning the Big Ten title — and keeps in touch with plenty of his former teammates. He simply prefers not to dwell on those memories while continuing his career at Iowa.

Nonetheless, a handful of Wolverines past and present crossed paths earlier this year as groomsmen in Newberg's wedding. McNamara, Trevor Keegan, Karsen Barnhart and Braidon McGregor enjoyed the chance to catch up and talk some trash after so many months apart.

With Michigan and Iowa not scheduled to play this season, the former teammates knew the next time they'd see each other might be at the Big Ten Championship game in December. And that, McNamara said, is an outcome he'd welcome:

"Let's just say, I hope it happens."

Title: Connor Colby's day-by-day approach to becoming one of college football's best interior offensive linemen

Author: Max Chadwick

Date: 8/30/23

Connor Colby was furious.

It was his first year at Cedar Rapids Kennedy High School in Iowa. And, like most ninth-grade football players, Colby started his career on the freshman team. Still, that wasn't acceptable to him.

"I was mad that I didn't get moved up to the sophomore team," Colby said in an exclusive interview with PFF.

It wouldn't take long for him to prove he belonged at a higher level.

"I just dedicated myself to the weight room and worked hard," Colby said. "That opportunity came my sophomore year to play varsity. Once I got on the field, it was just having fun at that point and realizing that I'm just as strong, if not stronger than the rest of the guys on the field."

Across his four years for the Cougs, he earned All-State honors in his junior and senior campaigns. He was ranked as a top-150 recruit in the 2021 class and secured offers from college football powerhouses, such as Ohio State and Michigan. But growing up 30 minutes away from his dream school, Colby always knew he wanted to stay home.

"For me, it was always Iowa," he said. "I know I took a bunch of visits elsewhere, but I always compared it back home to Iowa. That ultimately made my decision to come here and I've been happy with it ever since."

Unlike when he was in high school, Colby saw the field immediately as a freshman. He served as the starting right guard for most of the 2021 season, posting a 76.5 run-blocking grade that led all Power Five true freshmen. Colby credits much of his freshman success to the superstar who lined up to his left: Current Baltimore Ravens center Tyler Linderbaum.

"This is going to sound pretty bad," Colby said with a laugh. "I knew play calls and stuff like that. But sometimes when I was out there, I'd struggle with who to block. So I just looked at [Linderbaum] before every play and he'd just point at the guy I had to block. We just went from there."

After Linderbaum was selected in the first round of the 2022 NFL Draft, Colby became one of the leaders of the Hawkeyes' offensive line. He split his time between right tackle and left guard as a sophomore, earning just a 37.4 pass-blocking grade on the season. However, it's important to contextualize that grade by looking at performance by position.

Connor Colby's Pass-Blocking Numbers by Position

Position	Pass-Blocking Snaps	Pass-Blocking Grade	Pressure Rate Allowed
Right Tackle	184	18.5	10.1%

Unsurprisingly, Colby enjoys lining up along the interior the most. Luckily for him, he's listed as the Hawkeyes' starting right guard this season.

"I love playing guard," he said. "I just like being physical. It's like a fight in the phone booth every time I'm out there. It's fun."

What Colby didn't enjoy was how much Iowa's offense struggled last season. In 2022, the Hawkeyes ranked last in the Power Five and third to last nationally in expected points added per play. While there were many reasons for that low mark, Colby pointed the finger at himself.

"It was pretty frustrating," he said. "A lot of the blame should be on the O-line. We weren't as good as we needed to be throughout the season. That's all we can do now is focus on being the best we can be out there every day at practice. Building that cohesiveness as a unit. Hopefully, that shows through on Saturdays."

Aside from an improved offensive line, a change under center should have Iowa fans optimistic about an offensive bounce-back. Cade McNamara takes over after transferring in from Michigan. In 2021, he quarterbacked the Wolverines to the Big Ten championship and College Football Playoff, beating Colby's Hawkeyes in the conference title game. With him comes tight end Erick All, a preseason second-team All-Big Ten honoree.

"Cade's been great," Colby said. "He's a great leader. When he first got here, he really took control and got us all going in the right direction again. He raised our standard that we had here. Erick's the same way, getting us all hyped up for practice and stuff like that. He and Cade are the great leaders that we needed."

Colby himself was named to PFF's preseason All-Big Ten first team and is projected to be one of the top interior offensive linemen in the 2024 NFL Draft. Don't tell him that, though.

"I don't pay attention to any of that," Colby said. "I told my parents not to send me any articles. I told my girlfriend not to send me anything. I don't want to know anything about it. I have to focus on practice every day, blocking our great D-line that we have."

The junior is taking everything day by day, although he does have some long-term goals in mind.

"Win the West [division], win in Indy, win whatever's next."

What's currently next for him and No. 25 Iowa is the season opener this Saturday against Utah State in Kinnick Stadium.

Title: Xavier Nwankpa could be headed for breakout season

Author: Tyler Tachman

Date: 8/23/23

IOWA CITY — In a single play, Xavier Nwankpa gave a sample of his capabilities.

It was during the second quarter of last season's Music City Bowl between Iowa and Kentucky. Nwankpa, a true freshman at the time, was making his first career start for the Hawkeyes. With Iowa leading 7-0, Kentucky quarterback Destin Wade took a snap and slung the ball over the middle of the field.

The pass sailed out of the reach of his intended target. Nwankpa, who was hovering near the area, plucked it out of the air. In a flash, he took it the other way, scampering all the way into the end zone for a pick-six.

"Honestly, I really don't remember much," Nwankpa recalls about the play more than seven months later. "But we were in cover 3. It was a ball I could break on, so I just went in, caught it. Then I blacked out after that. Just ran it into the end zone and celebrated with the team."

Nwankpa was one of Iowa's more impressive defensive players in that win over Kentucky. Though a small sample size, it validated what many had hoped to see from him. Now in 2023, Nwankpa is an obvious breakout candidate. Kaevon Merriweather, a standout safety for the Hawkeyes last season, has moved on to play professionally. That leaves a clear path to playing time for Nwankpa.

It means that Nwankpa will likely have to be a consistent contributor under the bright lights. But that is something he's used to.

High expectations swirled around Nwankpa during his time at Southeast Polk High School, where he was a highly sought-after recruit. To understand why, look no further than the first game of his senior season.

Southeast Polk was coming off of a loss in the state championship during Nwankpa's junior season. But in the season opener against Dowling Catholic, a big-time matchup, Nwankpa delivered.

He scored Southeast Polk's first touchdown. Later in the game, with Southeast Polk backed up in its own territory, Nwankpa reached back for an interception in the end zone. Dowling tied the score at 7-7 shortly after. On the last play of the game, with the score still tied, Southeast Polk's quarterback chucked up a Hail Mary. Nwankpa came down with it, scoring a touchdown and giving Southeast Polk a 13-7 win.

Southeast Polk went on to win a state championship that season. Nwankpa played a big part in that.

"There's always ratings out there and sometimes you get a kid at that level, not necessarily in the state of Iowa, but in other areas of the country, things can go sideways pretty quick and they're not too focused on their high school careers and they're worried about the next step," said Southeast Polk coach Brad Zelenovich. "And that was never him. (I) take great pride in knowing his high school teammates and his high school friends and the experiences he had in our program was special to him."

Given his profile as a recruit, it's not a surprise he had powerhouse programs vying for his talents: Ohio State, LSU, Notre Dame and Clemson, among others. But Nwankpa decided to stay in Iowa.

"Really just the people here," Nwankpa said about why he chose to play at Iowa. "The people here were the main factor in me coming here. Like coach (defensive coordinator Phil) Parker, all the coaches and all the players. Like all the players, I'm close with now and I was close with during my visits. So becoming close with them there, it just felt like this is home. And it really is."

As a freshman at Iowa, opportunity for Nwankpa was limited with Merriweather and Quinn Schulte patrolling the safety spots. But Nwankpa still made an impact on special teams and was the Team Hustle Award honoree for that unit. Then, with Merriweather opting out of the bowl game, Nwankpa gave a glimpse of his potential.

Though Merriweather is no longer at Iowa, the ripple effects of his presence are still having an impact.

“Personally, from Kaevon, he taught me how to watch film,” Nwankpa said. “In high school, you can watch film, but it’s not the same as you have to do it at the college level. So he really took me under his wing and really taught me how to watch film and grow as a player.”

The difference between watching film in high school and college is ... ?

“In high school, you’ll just go through clips and see plays,” Nwankpa said. “But in college, you really have to break down like where the offensive line’s looking, the receiver, if his gloves are strapped, if his helmet is tight. Really fine details you can find and you really just go dive into those and it helps you with run-pass reads, what the receiver may run.”

That Nwankpa is locked into the mental side of the game is encouraging, given his physical tools are already so advanced. He also said he is focusing on his sleep, where he tries to get at least eight hours per day.

While Iowa's secondary is returning star Cooper DeJean and Schulte, there is also some turnover heading into 2023, notably the departures of Riley Moss and Merriweather. Even though Nwankpa is still young and relatively inexperienced at the college level, there is optimism he can slide into Merriweather's role and help Iowa continue its defensive dominance.

“He’s got all the potential in the world,” Zelenovich said. “It’s just a matter of him continuing to develop. Obviously, he’s in a good spot, like we talked about. I know those guys at the University of Iowa are going to continue to challenge him and have him develop his skills.”

Title: Erick All embraces blessing of balancing fatherhood, football

Author: John Steppe

Date: 8/23/23

IOWA CITY — When Erick All is not running routes in practice as one of Iowa's top tight ends, "goofing around" with teammates or soon going to class, he has "a lot of responsibility" the typical college football player does not have.

It's a difficult responsibility, especially for a 22-year-old, but one he considers to be "a blessing."

"I enjoy it to death," All said.

That responsibility goes by the name of Houston.

Houston, who is almost one year old, is All's first child.

"It can be hard, but when you love someone so much, it makes it pretty easy," All said.

As would be the case for almost any first-time parent, it has come with some lessons for All — lessons that translate to the football field.

"Keeping your head down and working and not having any excuses for stuff pretty much is what I've learned," All said.

All and Houston's mother, Mia, live in Iowa City together and raise their first child. When All had to be away for fall camp, Mia and Houston visited family in Michigan.

Iowa tight ends coach Abdul Hodge believes Houston gives All "added motivation to come out here and handle the business."

Houston was born on the morning of Michigan's 51-7 win over Colorado State. All was at Michigan Stadium in time for the noon game and went on to have one catch for 22 yards in that afternoon's game.

"Eight pounds, four ounces," Michigan head coach Jim Harbaugh told reporters after the game. "I'm still waiting for the wingspan and the hand size numbers, but from the pictures, they look long and athletic."

Houston will celebrate his first birthday on Sept. 3.

"He's growing so fast," said Cade McNamara, who also was teammates with All at Michigan.

For those doing the math, Houston was born nine months and seven days after Michigan's 2021 win over Ohio State. (And the due date was seven days earlier.)

"It was how life just happened," All said.

Houston and McNamara seem to be enjoying the time they get together.

"I was holding him, and he kept leaning back, looking at me and then he would tuck his head right back on my neck," McNamara said.

Houston did that "like five times, back-to-back-to-back."

"It was just the cutest thing ever," McNamara said.

McNamara already has noticed Houston "definitely has Erick's energy and positivity."

"He's almost as goofy as Houston is," McNamara said of his former roommate. "Erick is just the most uppity guy who's always in a positive mood, and I know Houston truly puts a smile on his face."

On the field, All's addition allows Iowa to continue its heavy use of tight ends in 2023.

Tight ends Sam LaPorta and Luke Lachey were the Hawkeyes' top two players in receiving yards last year. Now All, a former all-Big Ten honorable mention, and Lachey will be the top two options at the position.

"We lost a really good player, needless to say, with Sam LaPorta," head coach Kirk Ferentz said. "But then you get a guy like Erick All to join the team, so feel pretty good about those two guys."

Back at Michigan, All had 38 receptions for 437 yards in 2021 although he missed most of the 2022 season with an injury that required season-ending surgery.

"He has a really unique skill set," Hodge said. "I would describe it as being explosive."

All, a former co-captain at Michigan, also has contributed to the team as a leader.

"He has a really good personality that the guys take to on the field," Hodge said.

The highlight of All's eight-plus months since joining the Hawkeyes has been simply "being with the guys" on the team, whether that be "goofing around" in the locker room or "competing with the guys every day."

"Not only that, but eating meals, just chilling and getting to know different players on the team," All said.

All also has spoken highly of other aspects of Iowa City. That includes trips to the Coralville IHOP, which he previously said serves some of the best chicken and waffles he ever had, "when I'm not locked up in the hotel for fall camp."

Like many other aspects of All's life, Houston is often right there with him at IHOP.

"He's been there quite a few times," All said.

Title: Luke Elkin quietly makes Tory Taylor, Drew Stevens' jobs so much easier

Author: John Steppe

Date: 8/24/23

IOWA CITY — Tory Taylor's punting excellence has understandably gotten attention, whether it be in media coverage, award watch lists or Raygun's famous "Punting is Winning" shirts.

Drew Stevens' kicking excellence, likewise, has warranted media attention and a semifinalist nod last year for the Lou Groza Award.

But Iowa football's other first-team specialist, long snapper Luke Elkin? "I don't think people probably really understand his role and how important it is on the team," Taylor said.

The typical college football box score does not have any long snapping statistics. There is no major award watch list for the top long snappers in the country. But Elkin's teammates, especially Taylor, have attributed much of their success to what Elkin does as a snapper.

"Drew and I can't really do anything without him," Taylor said. "He just makes our job so much easier — just to be able to go out there and not have to worry about anything, just knowing that I'm going to get a good snap every time."

Elkin arrived at Iowa in 2021, and it did not take long for him to earn the starting spot.

Austin Spiewak started the first two games of the 2021 season before Elkin had his opportunity in the Cy-Hawk game and did not relinquish it in the two years since.

The key, Elkin said, was "just being prepared and ready for your moment to jump in."

"Throughout that whole fall camp and going through practice, you're just doing everything you can to get that spot out on the field," Elkin said.

Elkin has reached the point where Stevens and the field goal unit "don't have to worry" about the snap at all.

"It just like boom, boom, boom, boom," Stevens said. "It's robotic."

Elkin's contributions aside from just snapping has been a differentiating factor.

"He can cover, too," head coach Kirk Ferentz said. "I don't think we'll put a snapper around passing, but we might throw to him. You never know."

Elkin's athleticism was on full display in the third quarter of last year's 7-3 win against South Dakota State.

Taylor boomed a 50-yard punt down the center of the field. Even with an experienced and proven gunner like Terry Roberts on the field, at least a short return seemed likely.

"This one is returnable," FS1 play-by-play commentator Noah Eagle started to say. "Or is it? No, it's not!"

Luke Elkin happened.

After snapping the ball, Elkin sprinted 50 yards in approximately seven seconds to deck South Dakota State's Tyler Feldkamp as soon as he caught Taylor's punt.

"That was obviously pretty special," Taylor said retrospectively at this month's Iowa football media day.

But that's not Elkin's only highlight-reel-level play that comes to mind. Taylor still remembers a punt from last year when Elkin trucked someone on the punt coverage.

"Coach Woods shows it in the special teams meetings quite a bit," Taylor said. "It was a pretty cool moment for us."

Iowa Hawkeyes long snapper Luke Elkin (39) pulls down South Dakota State Jackrabbits punt returner Tyler Feldkamp (8) in the third quarter of the game at Kinnick Stadium in Iowa City, Iowa on Saturday, September 3, 2022. (Savannah Blake/The Gazette)

Those plays are less of a surprise considering Elkin's versatility in high school. He played quarterback, long snapper, wide receiver, safety and linebacker during his time at Neenah (Wis.) High School.

"If we wanted him, he could punt the ball, but he can't snap the ball to himself," his high school coach Steve Jung once told Green Bay-based WFRV-TV in 2021.

Off the field, special teams coordinator LeVar Woods has praised Elkin as someone "wise beyond his years."

"Luke is the stabilizing force," Woods said. "He's a quiet leader within the room."

Taylor similarly called him the "mediator in the room."

"Everyone kind of bounces off him," Taylor said.

This year will be a little different for Elkin.

Elkin, a walk-on for his first two seasons, was put on scholarship ahead of the fall semester.

"He's been spectacular since he's been here," head coach Kirk Ferentz said after telling reporters Wednesday he was on scholarship. "Just consistent, dependable, great team guy."

Title: After breaking barriers at Des Moines North, Iowa football's Deavin Hilson wants to keep going

Author: Dargan Southard

Date: 8/28/23

IOWA CITY — Scout-team running back isn't a place for football glory, especially with a menacing Iowa defense delivering body blows left and right on the opposite side. But Deavin Hilson wasn't rattled.

He slowly turned one head — then another, then another — as the likes of Jack Campbell, Lukas Van Ness and the rest of Iowa's defensive stalwarts challenged Hilson's toughness and competitive spirit on every rep. It was those repetitive collisions — and Hilson's immediate unfazed response — that convinced defensive coordinator Phil Parker there was something to work with here.

So midway through last season, and more officially during December bowl-game prep, Hilson traded in his running back role for a spot in Iowa's secondary as a reserve cornerback — all while thriving on special teams as many young Hawkeyes do. It's a shift that now has Hilson on the cusp of something more substantial.

With rumors swirling that Iowa may need to lean on its cornerback depth to begin the season as a result of the state's sports-betting probe, Hilson is in the mix with T.J. Hall, Deshaun Lee and others for an early elevated role. With opposing quarterbacks likely trying to avoid all-everything cornerback Cooper DeJean on the other side, it's imperative the Hawkeyes establish additional reliability on the perimeter.

"At first it was some of the DBs, they were telling me little stuff. 'Hey coach (Parker) is looking at you (for defense).' But I didn't think too much of it," Hilson recalled. "Then one day at practice, coach (Parker) came up and asked me how I would feel about (shifting to defensive back)

"That alone, for me, did it — just him thinking I could do that for him. As soon as he asked me, my mind was clear."

Just reaching this spot has already required an arduous journey few believed was possible. Yet Hilson is thankful for the hurdles.

He and everyone else who's been associated with Des Moines North football heard it all. The remarks, the jabs, the constant chatter that Polar Bears don't end up in Division I football with decades' worth of supporting evidence.

Remember, North went winless during Hilson's entire tenure. By the time his senior season started in 2020, no Polar Bear had gone straight to a Division I program since 1991, And Power Five status? Forget that. The last North player with that accolade was Iowa State's Marcus Butts in the 1970s.

None of that mattered to the ever-determined Hilson. He barged through those barriers with his Iowa offer and commitment in January 2021, laying the groundwork for North's bubbling breakthrough.

The Polar Bears ended a 36-game losing streak in 2021, then followed that up with the program's first four-win season since 2008 last year. After Hilson came future Iowa State defensive end David Caulker and current Northern Illinois linebacker commit Augustine Sleah, giving North three FBS prospects in the last four recruiting classes. Not to mention former Polar Bear Jayden McGregory, a four-star athlete in the 2026 class, landed an Iowa State offer before transferring to West Des Moines Valley this offseason.

"Deavin is from the north side — and he went to North High School — and he wears that like a badge of honor," Polar Bears coach Eric Addy said. "He really embraces, 'Hey, you can be from North High School and do anything that you want.'"

"I think his experience here at North — a taste of having to showcase his versatility and having to handle a lot of adversity — makes him mentally tough where nothing is going to rattle him."

Hilson, though, doesn't want his story to stop here. His Iowa career has started like many young Hawkeyes before him; a redshirt in 2021, limited action last season while still recovering from a knee injury suffered during 2022 spring ball. But you could see an upward trend by season's end. Hilson came oh so close to a breakthrough in the Music City Bowl, coming inches away from blocking at least one Kentucky punt.

It's possible that's again where Hilson makes his biggest 2023 impact. Whatever materializes, it's clear he'll approach it with the same fierce, competitive attitude that's brought him here.

"He's got a great attitude," Parker said, "and he's a tough kid."

Title: Mason Richman learned from Alaric Jackson and now on rare path to join him

Author: Pat Harty

Date: 8/29/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa – Alaric Jackson has the distinction of being the only four-year starting left tackle for the Iowa football team under Kirk Ferentz.

At least for now because the person who replaced him at left tackle in 2021 is also on course to be a four-year starter for the Hawkeyes.

Redshirt junior Mason Richman is expected to make his 26th career start at left tackle when Iowa faces Utah State in the season opener on Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

“Honestly, the other day I thought about it, thinking about week one and thinking about going into the season and stuff like that,” Richman said Tuesday. “With Alaric coming before me and then me coming in, I think there’s just a lot of things that the past has taught me about these tackles at Iowa and what they mean, and just to be accountable to the team and be someone that everyone can count on I think is the most important thing to me.

“For me, I just want them to play the best five players. So, if I’m that every week for four years, that’s great. But at the same time, I just want to see team success.”

Richman’s time as a starter hasn’t been easy because to play left tackle at the Power Five level is a daunting task under any circumstance.

But to play left tackle as an underclassman, especially as a redshirt freshman, takes the challenge to another level because the learning process is greatly accelerated.

It’s no secret that Richman and his young cohorts on the offensive line struggled last season with both run blocking and pass blocking. Some of them were asked to contribute before maybe they were ready to hold their own at this level.

Iowa only averaged 94.9 rushing yards per game last season, and that statistic certainly doesn’t speak well for the Iowa offensive line.

But this is also a new season, and for the first time in his career, Richman is an upperclassman, as are four of the five offensive linemen listed as starters for Saturday’s game.

Richman said being an upperclassman, in his case, a fourth-year junior, helps from a mental standpoint.

“Oh, yeah,” he said. “The last couple years it’s like, oh, I’m a second, third year. I’ve had a voice for a while as an offensive lineman. But now it’s like, dude, you’re getting old. That kind of thing. I turned 21, so, I was told you can legally have a drink. And I was like, what the heck.

“Just an understanding as you get higher and higher in this program of experiencing everything, your role might change just a little bit. And for me, just helping those younger guys out and just making sure we leave the jersey in a better place.”

The Iowa offensive line is being counted on to help lead a much-maligned offense that has a new starting quarterback in Michigan transfer Cade McNamara and several other key additions from the transfer portal.

The group is a year older and year wiser from last season, and with that experience comes a sense of leadership, which Richman shows daily in practice.

“I feel like he’s definitely a leader on the offensive line and the offense as well, and the team,” senior receiver Nico Ragaini said of Richman. “I think he’s doing a great job of being vocal and coaching up all the other guys. You can hear him all the time, like when the twos are in, he’s correcting all the tackles if they make a mistake in a positive way.

"So, it doesn't surprise me that he's (on course) to be a four-year starter here. I'm excited for him and the offensive line and our offense this Saturday."

Richman was redshirted as a true freshman in 2020 after having appeared in three games during the Covid-shortened eight-game season.

He then won the starting left tackle position that was vacated by Jackson after the 2020 season and Richman has been in the starting lineup ever since.

And still with two seasons of eligibility, Richman could leave Iowa with over 50 career starts at left tackle over four seasons barring injuries.

Richman missed spring practice due to an injury, but he's healthy now and eager to help change the narrative on offense.

"I think right now we've got a great rotation of guys and everybody is ready for whenever their name and number is called," Richman said. "At the same time, there's a certain feeling that we have and everybody is just ready to go out there and compete against the other guys.

"There's not a single guy in the lineup that I wouldn't want to go out there with. So, that's most important thing."

Richman was asked at Iowa's weekly media gathering on Tuesday what is the expectation for the offense this season.

He is fully aware of the criticism, but he tries to avoid it just by staying the course and staying focused.

"Our expectation is just to compete and get better," Richman said.

Richman doesn't take what he has accomplished so far for granted.

But he also doesn't seem in awe of his situation as a potential four-year starter at left tackle.

"I'm not really surprised," Richman said. "I think with my work ethic and just the attitude I kind of go about it every day and my competitiveness, there was just nothing that was going to stop myself but myself.

"Four years; sure, that's a lot. Obviously, I think when I came in, I knew I wasn't going to start my first year. I was way small and way too skinny in the redshirt year."

Richman spent his freshman season in 2020 learning from watching Jackson play left tackle.

Jackson, in addition to starting all 42 games in which he played for Iowa, also earned All-America and All-Big Ten accolades as a Hawkeye.

"He has great feet and the big thing I learned from him is how he practiced and certain drills and things he did indoors just by himself," Richman said of Jackson, who now plays in the NFL for the Los Angeles Rams. "I know he had helped me with a couple of them.

"He's a great guy to look up to. I just expect nothing but success from him. He's a great dude."

Richman hasn't spoken with Jackson in a while, but he looks forward to reconnecting with his former teammate and mentor.

"I appreciate him and I learned so much from him," Richman said of Jackson.

Richman has gained about 22 pounds since he joined the Iowa program in 2020 and is now listed at 6-foot-6 and 312 pounds.

He came in as a teenager from Leawood, Kansas and will leave as an adult in select company.

"The first game, that first start I wasn't nervous at all for some reason," Richman said. "I don't know if it was I probably wasn't thinking as much. And now I'm thinking a lot more.

"I think just to understand my mental approach has changed so much, my approach to the game and my focus out there on the field. Just really appreciate everyone that has helped me with that."

At the top of that list besides Alaric Jackson is Kirk Ferentz and Iowa offensive line coach George Barnett.

"I just really appreciate what coach Ferentz and coach Barnett have instilled in me just to be able to be accountable and be someone that everyone can count on," Richman said.

Title: Jay Higgins has a chance to break out on defense

Author: Tyler Tachman

Date: 7/28/2023

INDIANAPOLIS – Jay Higgins was actually trying this. There he was, wearing a football helmet, jersey and pads, crouched with his hands and feet dug into the ground. Higgins was connected to an RV, using his strength to try to pull it.

His father, Roy Higgins III, was there watching. Roy knew there was no way his son could actually pull it.

But Higgins?

“Something told me I could move it,” said Higgins, who had a homecoming of sorts on Wednesday at Lucas Oil Stadium. He was one of Iowa football’s representatives at Big Ten Media Days, returning to his hometown and the stadium where he played in a high school state championship game for Brebeuf Jesuit.

Higgins kept pulling and pulling but the RV didn’t budge. He continued until Roy told him to stop.

That ambition is fitting. The 6-foot-2, 233-pound linebacker has waited his turn at Iowa and now enters his fourth season with the program expected to be a crucial part of the defense. That Higgins had the persistence to try to pull an RV makes sense. An RV, absent of luggage, weighs about 10,000 pounds. Even for elite athletes, moving one is quite the challenge.

Except ... when Higgins tried to pull the RV, he wasn’t an elite athlete. Far from it.

The uniform he was wearing? It was for a youth football team — ages five to seven.

Higgins was around that age. Trying to pull an RV.

Higgins was less than 1 year old when he was a registered contestant at a rodeo. Roy was participating in bulldogging — steer wrestling — and wanted Higgins to be part of the rodeo, as well. Sitting on a saddle that was far too big for him, with legs far too short to be properly secured, he rode on a horse in front of a large crowd. Higgins got a standing ovation for his performance.

Connecting with animals was passed down in the family. A member of Roy’s family was a veterinarian in New Albany, Indiana. Roy’s father owned property. Roy took after his father’s passion for animals. Higgins took after Roy.

When Higgins was elementary school-aged, he walked right up to a dangerous reptile — either a crocodile or alligator — at a petting zoo and started touching it (the animal’s mouth was wrapped for safety). He also held a smaller one. But in Indiana, being around animals also meant chores. Assisting with exercise meant Higgins got so muddy he had to be hosed off. He cut grass. He washed horses. He cleaned up poop with a pitchfork and wheelbarrow.

“Sometimes, I would get mad at him,” Roy says, “because he would be cleaning the stall and he would pick up the manure and it would be heavy and he would try to throw it in the wheelbarrow and it would fall right back on the ground. I had to go behind him and do it again.”

Fortunately, Higgins was better at sports than cleaning up animal droppings. He excelled as a two-sport athlete at Brebeuf Jesuit in Indianapolis. Higgins has an “infectious” personality, as described by Brebeuf defensive coordinator Jake Weinstein. On Wednesday, he reasoned his basketball skills were similar to LeBron James: “Just the ability to see the court, you know what I mean?” Higgins said.

During a game at Brebeuf, Weinstein thought Higgins blew a coverage and screamed at him. Later in the game, Higgins went up to Weinstein.

“Hey, coach,” Higgins said, “when we get in on Saturday, I think you’re going to be apologizing to me for that one.”

“I’m like, ‘What are you talking about?’” Weinstein recalled.

“I’m just telling you, I didn’t screw that one up,” Higgins told Weinstein.

Later, they sat in a room and watched film. Sure enough, Higgins didn’t screw up the coverage.

"Hey Jay, you were right, buddy," Weinstein said. "That was on me."

"He's just able to like handle those type of situations so maturely and come back and have those conversations," Weinstein said.

Higgins' personality was evident to many of those around him. One time, after an exhausting Brebeuf off-season workout in scorching heat, Higgins took time to help others work on technique. Another time, during a miserable, rainy practice, Higgins opened a door leading to the field and yelled for his teammates to hear, "Let's get it." Then, along with a few teammates, he started singing Christmas music, which eventually spurred others to join.

At Lucas Oil Stadium on Wednesday, it wasn't difficult to see Higgins' energy. Toward the end of a media session, Iowa tight end Luke Lachey walked up to Higgins and asked about the players in that position group.

"They struggle, let's be real," Higgins said with a smile.

"These tight ends, they think they're these big guys, you know? But they're big cupcakes, you know? Lachey, he doesn't want to get near a block. And don't let me guard him. Don't let me guard Luke. I mean, the guy won't catch a pass all practice."

When Roy met former Iowa linebacker Jack Campbell, he asked something of him.

"Promise me that you will pour everything that you learned from Iowa into my son," Roy told Campbell.

"He said, 'I'll do just that,'" Roy recalled.

Campbell was the nation's top linebacker last year and is now gone from the Iowa program. So is Seth Benson, who combined with Campbell to make a brick wall in the middle of the Hawkeye defense. Part of the reason that Higgins had to wait so long for his opportunity was because he was behind that duo. After playing on special teams in his first season, he had a slightly larger role in his second, then he made a more significant jump last season, tallying 39 total tackles.

In the transfer portal era, it's uncommon to see role players stick around a program as long as Higgins has. But Iowa believed in Higgins, and he has not forgotten that. Higgins was overlooked as a high school prospect. Iowa was the only Power 5 program to offer him a scholarship. Even after that, when other programs showed more interest, Higgins was set with his decision.

"I knew the value of trusting the process," Higgins said. "I knew Iowa was the place for me. I wanted to go somewhere I was coached extremely hard and expectations were high, so I felt like Iowa was always my home. I knew it was a place where I could thrive. I felt comfortable to stay. Just the relationships I've made up there. Some of my best friends are at the University of Iowa. The relationship I have with (linebackers) coach (Seth) Wallace. I mean, I would want nothing more than to make coach (Seth) Wallace and coach (defensive coordinator Phil) Parker proud."

For Iowa's defense to return to dominant form this season — and for the team to have a chance at getting to the Big Ten Championship Game — the departed production of Campbell and Benson needs to be replaced. Higgins can help do that, along with returning veteran Kyler Fisher and Virginia transfer Nick Jackson.

"He doesn't have the experience of Campbell and Benson," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said, "but he's just been so strong in our program since he's shown up. He was on the scout team, all that stuff, which a lot of guys were. But he's just a guy that people kinda want to follow and he backs it up through his actions."

And trying to pull that RV? It was actually Roy's idea — a mental exercise meant to build Higgins' confidence.

"If you want to focus, if you want to do whatever you want to do, you have the power, you have the will within yourself to do whatever you want to do in life," Roy said.

More than a decade later, Higgins is well on his way.

Title: Kaleb Brown Betting on Himself, Iowa

Author: Rob Howe

Date: 7/23/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa - Receiver Kaleb Brown spoke with the media Tuesday for the first time since transferring here from Ohio State this offseason. A key addition for an offense in serious need of help came across as very reflective.

It makes sense. The second-year sophomore is leaving one of the country's top offenses for one that, to be nice, is not. It's a move leading others to create their own narratives.

To be clear, Brown believes success was coming with the Buckeyes. Considering their embarrassment of riches at his position, it probably wasn't imminent.

Nobody's feelings should be hurt hearing me declare Ohio State's receiver room more talented than Iowa's. If you're debating that, well, we're not on the same page.

"One of the reasons for leaving was just how stacked we were at Ohio State," Brown said.

OSU receiver coach Brian Hartline sees three first-round picks for next year's NFL Draft among the group. It's adding a five-star and three four-stars this fall in the true freshmen class.

Ergo, Brown stands a better chance playing for the Hawkeyes this season than he does in Columbus. That doesn't mean he would be on the Buckeye bench. He's playing the odds.

A soft-broken Brown seemed wary of saying too much. He certainly didn't want to utter something that could be misconstrued, taken as an insult by his former school, his new school and/or fans from both.

Again, it makes sense. He lives in a world where information travels faster than ever. It's often filled with nuance, context is needed and too often there are inaccuracies.

That's what we have here. This was a difficult decision for Brown. And it might not be the right one. But it's one made with the best intentions after a lot of deep thought.

"It was hard to up and leave my team," he said. "I definitely felt like I could have stayed and made an impact. But there's only so much time you have. I made the decision that it was something I just had to do."

A four-star prospect in the 2022 recruiting class coming out of Chicago St. Rita, Brown reported scholarship offers from Alabama, Michigan, Notre Dame, Penn State and a lot of others. He chose Ohio State, a factory for NFL players at his position.

Iowa doesn't often beat the blue bloods for recruits. The odds go down when we're talking receivers.

The Hawkeyes tried hard with Brown a few recruiting cycles ago. He talked with HN after they offered a scholarship.

While he liked them, Brown couldn't pass up playing in OSU's explosive attack. He had high hopes for Year 1, but appeared in just four games with one reception for five yards. Again, the Buckeyes were loaded on the outside.

Brown competing during his first season in college also needs context. It's impressive when considering he played running back in high school and didn't enroll early.

Last season, Ohio State ranked 14th out of 131 FBS programs nationally in passing yards (298.3) a contest. Its 42 touchdown throws were the 4th most. Iowa averaged 156.7 yards (123rd) with seven scoring passes (128th).

The Buckeyes will be fine without Brown. The Hawkeyes should be better with him. And along with talent, he brings wisdom picked up in Columbus through a season and practice in the spring.

"I feel like I took a lot away from that, just seeing the game. It was great to take from Ohio State, just to be developed by them, see how they roll and how things should be done," Brown said.

That knowledge along with his pedigree make him an exciting addition here. He joins a rebuilt offense, which is adding new starting quarterback in Cade McNamara from Michigan along with former Charleston Southern receiver Seth Anderson and other key players.

The Hawkeyes return just two scholarship receivers with a college reception. Nico Ragaini has 125. Diante Vines has 10, all coming last season.

Brown heads into training camp after a crash course with Iowa's offense this summer. He's working with McNamara and other players at his position. He has a good connection with Ragaini.

"It's definitely a process. It's not easy. But I'm working," Brown said.

Working to make the most of this opportunity. Sometimes guys just need a chance.

It's an extreme example, but we saw it when quarterback Joe Burrow won a Heisman Trophy and national championship at LSU after not cracking the lineup at Ohio State. Last year, receiver Charlie Jones earned second-team All-American honors at Purdue after catching 22 passes in two seasons at Iowa.

It should be repeated that these comparisons come with context and nuance. That said, sometimes the grass is greener somewhere else.

That's what Brown and the Hawkeyes are hoping. This offense needs a jolt. The new guy believes he can provide it given the chance.

Title: Cade McNamara, Joe Evans relationship could help shape Iowa Football in 2023

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 7/19/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — QB Cade McNamara and DE Joe Evans have one of those “How did that happen?” relationships.

McNamara transferred to Iowa from Michigan in January. Evans began his career as a walk-on in 2018 and has tied for the team lead in sacks the past two years.

Their interactions generally are limited as players on opposite sides of the ball. But somehow in six short months, the duo went from a bad first impression to inseparable.

“Joe — me and him are usually a package deal,” McNamara said. “About anywhere we go, we’re together.”

It didn’t start that way. It was quite the opposite, in fact. There was something about McNamara that rubbed Evans the wrong way, and the defensive end couldn’t shake it.

“When he first got here, we had a little interaction, and the conversation didn’t go great,” Evans said. “Not like anything bad was said; I remember going on like, ‘I just don’t know if I really liked this kid.’ I’m gonna be completely honest here. I probably had some choice words — not to him. I was just like, ‘Dude, this kid, man. Like, who does he think he is?’”

At the time, Evans was deciding whether to return for a sixth season, and the situation bothered him. He even took his concern to football strength coach Raimond Braithwaite.

“Coach Braithwaite is kind of like one of the guys I just tell everything to,” Evans said. “If I have something to say, I’ll go to his office, and we’ll, like, just talk it out. It doesn’t always have to be about football; it can be about everything.

“I remember kind of telling him, ‘I don’t know how I feel about Cade’ and whatever. Coach Braithwaite was like, ‘You need to, like, give it some time, and you guys need to keep working on it.’”

A few weeks later, a group of Iowa football players went to dinner, and the issue weighed on Evans, a second-team All-Big Ten defensive end. Few players have his team-first mentality, so he decided to give McNamara another shot. Both are considered team leaders and essential toward Iowa’s chances of improving on an 8-5 record. It was worth it.

“He was coming along, and I’m like, ‘Well, he’s my teammate now,’” Evans said. “Everyone here I view as a brother, so I’m going to be as nice as possible. And the funny thing is, after the two weeks, we just hit it off. Then it just kind of kept going until we literally are just like a package deal. We just do everything together.”

The duo has become inseparable, from off-field activities to workouts. When McNamara planned a week-long trip to California with his receivers and tight ends, he invited Evans to join them. Although Evans last played a skill position when he was the quarterback at Ames (Iowa) High in 2017, he played a role in keeping everyone focused.

“He was this interim head coach/head of strength and conditioning for the week,” McNamara said. “He would lead, like, the conditioning while I was meeting, like, with Jordan (Palmer) at the office. He was my right-hand man the entire time.”

From a rough first impression to hanging out daily to becoming roommates on Aug. 1, McNamara and Evans have demonstrated how bromances can brew from unusual circumstances. Within two weeks of Evans complaining about McNamara, Braithwaite threw it back at the defender with a laugh.

“Coach Braithwaite comes up to me before a lift and was like, ‘So, you guys are kind of hitting it off now,’” Evans said. “I’m like, ‘Yeah, we’re like best friends.’ That’s kind of how that worked out.”

“I wonder if this story will ever be told because Joe Evans is definitely one of the best friends I’ve ever had in my life,” McNamara said. “He’s my best friend right now, and he did not like me at first. I remember him saying that. And like, for some reason, like, two weeks into me being here, we just ended up, like, not doing anything without the other guy.”

Title: Why Iowa's LeVar Woods is one of college football's best-and most beloved- assistants

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 7/02/2023

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Dejected with his football career at a crossroads, George Kittle entered his fourth season at Iowa facing multiple ankle surgeries and sitting at least third on the depth chart.

At that moment, Iowa assistant LeVar Woods shifted from outside linebackers to tight ends. It was a major change for the Hawkeyes; Woods had never coached on offense, and the program usually had graduate assistants leading tight ends. It was this move that changed Kittle's life and altered the trajectory of Iowa football.

"Honestly, I didn't have a ton of fun in football," Kittle said. "When I got him as a tight ends coach, he just kind of rigged out of that fire for me and it completely changed my mindset. He definitely pushed me back in the right direction and allowed me to start making plays and taking advantage of the opportunities that were in front of me."

Woods provided a new beginning for his tight ends. No matter how they performed for his predecessor, Woods wanted them all to feel comfortable. It wasn't going to be easy, but it would be fair and he would believe in them. That's what Kittle needed to hear. That's what he hears now in their conversations.

"He's one of my closest friends," Kittle said. "I love him. LeVar has been one of the most important people in my football career."

Eight years later, Kittle is a perennial Pro Bowl tight end with the San Francisco 49ers. Woods, 45, is considered one of college football's top assistant coaches.

He since has moved from tight ends — where he also coached NFL first-rounders T.J. Hockenson and Noah Fant — to special teams coordinator at Iowa. Woods' special teams resume includes two Big Ten returners of the year (Charlie Jones, Ihmir Smith-Marsette), two top kickers (Keith Duncan, Caleb Shudak) and the league's top punter (Tory Taylor). Last year, Taylor was a first-team All-American, while Duncan was a consensus All-American in 2019. Smith-Marsette ranks second in Big Ten history in kickoff return yardage, and kicker Drew Stevens was named a freshman All-American last year.

Each of the players have different levels of personality and background. Kittle, Smith-Marsette and Duncan are extroverts, while Shudak is reserved. Taylor is a 25-year-old Australian, and Stevens was a true freshman who looked like a middle-schooler before packing on 30 pounds this offseason.

On a random Wednesday in early June, Woods met with potential recruits throughout much of the day. During a break, he took a call from Duncan, who runs his own kicking school in the Des Moines area. A few minutes later, Woods walked to the special teams meeting room and Stevens was inside.

"He's honestly just a players' coach," Duncan said, "and he's pretty good at what he does, obviously. He's a great person, a great coach, and I could go on and on about him."

Like with Kittle, Duncan and Shudak faced adversities that could have led to exits without Woods. Duncan was the starting kicker in 2016 and drilled the game-winning field goal to upset No. 2 Michigan. He then lost his position for two seasons before regaining it in 2019. Before the 2020 season, Shudak entered the transfer portal. Woods persuaded him to stay and found him a scholarship. In 2021, Shudak became one of the nation's top kickers. He's now on the Tennessee Titans' roster.

Woods said in 2020 he would "cry literal tears" if Shudak transferred. "That really meant a lot," the kicker responded.

So, what makes Woods so relatable? It starts with building relationships and filling a void.

Woods' first task in 2015 was to invite his tight ends to his home for an introduction. He and his wife, Meghann, opted for pizza as an icebreaker.

"I'm brand new with them," he said. "They had never been over to a coach's house. They've always had a graduate assistant as their position coach. 'Well, what do you guys like? Whatever pizza you want, I don't care.' 'What about the Wig & Pen? It's like really expensive.' I was like, 'Yeah, it's no problem.'"

"They were so happy to have Wig & Pen pizza," Meghann Woods said. "I guess I remember I couldn't afford that in college, either. They were so excited to be here, and they were so excited to be with LeVar."

Woods keeps in touch with dozens, perhaps hundreds, of former players for life updates and birthday wishes. When the college season concludes, he regularly takes one of his children on a road trip to watch a former player. Often it's Kittle. Sometimes it's his first Iowa protégé, linebacker Christian Kirksey.

But Woods stays in contact with more than just the NFL stars. In 2015, Jake Duzey was in line to become Iowa's next NFL star tight end. Late in spring football, Duzey tore the patella tendon in his knee. He barely saw action during the season. Then Duzey reinjured the knee in a Rose Bowl practice. He never achieved his NFL dream.

"I got a year to play with him but never really got to play," Duzey said. "He was constant support and always made sure I kept my head up. Who knows, I'd be lost without that guy, too. To this day, he reaches out and sees how everything is going. He helped me look for jobs, trying to make sure that I'd be OK without football."

It's not that Woods has an outsized personality. In fact, it's the opposite. He's understated and calm. Professional and personable. His ability to lead comes from his background as a former starter at multiple positions at Iowa, then as a seven-year NFL vet who made his living on special teams. He understands the sting of defeat and the prolonged pain of injuries. He also knows the joy of overcoming adversity to achieve personal and team goals. Some players are drawn to him as a father figure. Woods reciprocates because he grew up without one.

Woods was born in Cleveland in 1978 to parents who were medics in the Vietnam War. His parents split up when he was young, and his mother moved Woods and his younger sister to Iowa's far northwest corner near Sioux Falls, S.D. They moved regularly, but his mother was always there for him. But that doesn't mean he didn't want his father, whom he met only at his high school graduation.

He has dealt with those feelings throughout his life. Woods has three children — college sophomore Sydney, high school junior Mason and fifth-grader Whitney. During Sydney's final season of high school volleyball, Woods rearranged schedules to ensure he didn't miss any of her matches, whether they were 2 miles up the road at Iowa City West or 90 miles away in Dubuque.

"I don't want to miss out on anything," he said, fighting through emotion. "My mom was there for everything. My dad was not, and he had plenty of opportunities to be there. I don't ever want my kids to say that I wasn't there. They know I work a job where I'm not always around, but I don't ever want them to say I missed something that was important to them. So whether I'm a good dad or not, I have no idea. I just know I try to show up."

This fall will be difficult for Woods with Mason playing games on Friday nights when college coaches have player meetings and recruiting responsibilities. Iowa has offered Mason Woods a scholarship, though — he is considered one of the state's top 2025 prospects.

"He's a great dad," Meghann said. "I think it makes it hard that his job takes him away for so much of it because he does hate missing all the things."

There are times when Woods' efforts lead to discussions that sound a bit like lectures to his children, especially Mason, but they come from a good place.

"It was my mom that played football with me," LeVar Woods said. "My mom hit baseballs with me. It was my mom that did all the stuff when she could. My mom also worked 60, 80 hours a week. She was phenomenal. But all I ever really wanted was a dad."

“I heard some of that’s probably filling voids.”

Woods joined Iowa’s football program as a player in 1996. After redshirting for a year, he saw limited action early, then became a stalwart amid the transition from Hayden Fry to Kirk Ferentz. As a senior, Woods became a team captain and an honorable mention All-Big Ten linebacker. He also met Meghann Hunt, the daughter of Lawrence Hunt, who was a first-team All-Big Eight defensive tackle at Iowa State in 1973. Her godfather is Cyclones great Matt Blair, a six-time Pro Bowler with the Minnesota Vikings. Yet, Meghann had little interest in the sport.

“I grew up around football and going to football,” she said. “I didn’t enjoy watching because it was probably always on TV. I just got used to it.”

That changed when they started dating. In 2001, they were married in Ames and spent their honeymoon in Iowa City. Woods had to train for the NFL, while Meghann worked two jobs at the time.

Undrafted, Woods signed a free-agent contract with the Arizona Cardinals. He played four years with the Cardinals and primarily saw action on special teams. In 2003, Woods was named a finalist for the Walter Payton Man of the Year with his charity work. He later played for Detroit, Chicago and Tennessee. In 88 games over seven years, Woods finished with 168 tackles.

When his NFL career concluded, Woods had options. He had a real estate license and spent time in the NFL’s executive and entrepreneurship programs. To figure out the family’s next step, they moved back to Iowa City. Woods signed on as an administrative assistant and helped with recruiting visits. That lasted four years. He filled in as a linebackers coach in 2010 when defensive coordinator Norm Parker was hospitalized. Then in 2012, Woods was elevated to linebackers and special teams assistant.

“Going to the office every day, I think the bug just kind of bit him,” Meghann said. “It just kind of happened naturally. I think he gravitated toward it.”

Under Woods, individual players have improved — as proved by their accolades — but no unit of Iowa football has made more strides than special teams. In Woods’ first year as special teams coordinator, Iowa ranked 62nd nationally in special teams efficiency, according to ESPN’s Football Power Index. The past four years, the Hawkeyes ranked fourth three times and sixth once. No team nationally has ranked that highly more than twice over that span.

Starters fight to compete for roles on Woods’ units. Butkus Award-winning linebacker Jack Campbell demanded to play on the punt team. First-team All-Big Ten cornerback Cooper DeJean has become one of the best gunners in program history. Even more, scholarship players and walk-ons who don’t appear on a depth chart take pride in becoming critical special-teamers.

Among the many examples includes Henry Marchese, who never made the two-deep. In his final two regular-season games in 2021, Marchese sprung Jones with a key block on a 100-yard kickoff return. The next week, Marchese blocked a punt for a touchdown. The Hawkeyes trailed by double digits in both games and won them both.

“LeVar has really worked hard at it,” Ferentz said. “Part of that job is to get players to understand how important they are. A guy like Henry, you’re not playing on offense, not playing defense, where you can maybe find a role on special teams and take pride and help the team win.

“LeVar has really grown into that role, really embraced it. That’s how he made his living in the NFL, being a good special teams player. So he can fully appreciate the value of it.”

Woods also has become one of Iowa’s most proficient recruiters. His experience as one of only two biracial students (he and his sister) in a rural high school helps him relate to young Black players from metro areas moving to Iowa. Likewise, he is comfortable understanding small-town players who view Iowa City as a large community.

In The Athletic's Iowa Recruiting Confidential in 2022, which asked six high school coaches throughout the state about recruiting, Woods received rave reviews. Coaches from central Illinois, Omaha, Neb., and the Dallas Metroplex have expressed the same opinions.

In 2020, Woods traveled to Australia to sign Taylor, who was training at Pro Kick Australia. Woods' laidback personality immediately put Taylor's family at ease.

"The moment I met him, he made me feel really comfortable," Taylor said. "He's one of the best people I've ever met, and he pushes us every day."

With his on-field prowess coupled with the personal anecdotes, it seems Woods has more to offer beyond a coordinator position. The 247Sports coach rating index ranked Woods sixth among college football's coaches. The organization's list included head coaches and assistants.

It begs the question: What does Woods' future hold?

"I want to be a head coach someday," he said. "Whether it's college or pro, I don't know. Right now, I'm in the season of life where I'm with my kids, and this year, we had a tough decision to make. It felt like it was best for the family that we're going to do this here at Iowa.

"If I wasn't coaching here, I could see myself going high school, and I could see myself going to the NFL. Aspiration-wise, I'm not totally sure, in that regard. But I've thought about this before: Could I coach at another school? I certainly could, as long as the people were right, the place was right. I don't know if it would mean the same."

Title: Iowa football player helps teens who run out of gas

Author: Jay Stahl

Date: 7/13/2023

IOWA CITY, Iowa - Hawkeye linebacker Zach Twedt was leaving a Walmart in Iowa City when he spotted two stranded girls. Riley Uthe's car had just run out of gas on her way to the gym with her best friend Emma Kuepker.

It was a familiar sight for Twedt, who stopped to help single mom Tina Gunn, who had a flat tire near Story City, so she could get home to Omaha last year in July. Gunn detailed Twedt's good deed on social media and the story went viral.

A night before the anniversary of meeting Gunn, he did it again. Twedt pulled over in his truck to help the pair of 17-year-old girls, who were traumatized from an event they experienced the night before.

"It really was just a reminder when a lot of people are kicking you down, there's a lot of good people in our community," Uthe's mom Salina McCarty said.

Early Sunday morning, the girls went out to a restaurant for pizza with a friend and there was gunfire in downtown Iowa City.

The Iowa City Police Department responded to reports of shots fired at the Pedestrian Mall around 1 a.m. on July 9 and officers located shell casings and property damage. The incident involving two men is currently under investigation, according to a news release.

The people with weapons ended up in the same parking ramp as the girls, which caused more fear, according to McCarty. On Sunday afternoon, Uthe went to hang out with Kuepker.

"She was pretty scared the next day and had a lot of anxiety. She had gone to pick up Emma, gone to the gym, and her Jeep Renegade is having an issue with the gas reader," McCarty said. "We remind her (to) just fill up every day, but she's 17 and even if I was told to do that, I wouldn't as her mom and she eventually ran out of gas."

McCarty and her husband Curtis Uthe showed up a few minutes after, but things started to go awry.

"Curtis bought a gallon of gas that they sell in the store now and the paper funnel wasn't able to handle the gas tank," McCarty said.

Then, Twedt stopped and left to grab something from his house.

"Five minutes later it was Zach again and he had a full portable tank of gas and insisted on helping and got the car started. It was so kind," McCarty said.

Twedt said he does not seek attention for good deeds.

Why Twedt became a walking billboard for 'Iowa Nice'

After filling the gas tank, McCarty had a question for Twedt, who was donning a "Hawkeye Football" T-shirt.

"I just asked him, 'Is it OK if I post about what he did because my daughter is going through some stuff right now ...' we needed this boost of kindness," she said.

McCarty said it was a "bright, beautiful and inspiring" moment during a difficult weekend.

"His willingness to do it so quickly and to be there was really, really something we haven't experienced in a while, and it was genuine. Genuine acts of kindness are amazing," McCarty added. "He was so wonderful, so kind, and followed up to make sure everything was OK."

The junior at the University of Iowa said he enjoys helping others. He is inspired by his friend Gunn, who works as an operations manager at an Omaha hospital system, and his dad Seth, who is a second-generation farmer and lieutenant at the Ames Fire Department.

"My old man's always preaching on me that 'You think you're having a long day or a tough day? You never know what someone's going through,'" Twedt added.

Last week, Zach Twedt reunited with Gunn at his family's Tall T Farms in Story City.

McCarty is the co-founder of a Coralville-based nonprofit organization Houses into Homes, which provides services for community members in crisis situations. She is looking forward to reuniting with Twedt when the football team helps the charity.

From Kinnick Stadium to city streets and Story County highways, Twedt said he will continue to do what he can to be "Iowa Nice."

"Life's too short. Nobody's too good regardless of if I'm on the football team or just a farm kid from Story City, Iowa. It don't matter."

Title: Hawkeyes Gain Persepective at Deaf Camp

Author: John Bohnenkamp

Date: 8/03/2023

IOWA CITY, Iowa -- Kelby Telander admitted he was a little jealous.

Telander, a sophomore linebacker at Iowa, has a cochlear implant. And when he went with teammates Yahya Black and T.J. Hall to the Mississippi Bend AEA Deaf Camp in Bettendorf in June, Telander saw some of the implants the children had.

"Some of them have the brand-new Neptune," Telander said, laughing. "It was cool for me to see. I was like, 'You've got this? I don't have that.' I'm missing out on so much — theirs have Bluetooth, and they're water-proof. It was kind of crazy to sit there and compare with them."

Telander understood the challenges the children were facing — he got his cochlear implant when he was 3 years old. Black and Hall, who took an American Sign Language class in the spring semester, also were impacted by the visit.

"It was cool to see from my perspective, obviously, because I have a cochlear implant," Telander said. "I wanted to compare and look back on where I was at in my life, when I was at that age. Just to see how much I've progressed over time, see the problems that they're dealing with."

"These kids, they have their own stories," said Black, a junior defensive lineman. "They're kind of a left-out group. ... It's a reality check. It brings me down to the fact that it's not all football, football and football."

"It was cool to see how happy they were when we played football," said Hall, a sophomore defensive back. "Even with the hearing disability, even with the implants, they were kids playing football, having fun."

Telander said he understood the challenges the children face, especially when it comes to playing sports.

"I was at that point when I was a kid playing," he said. "I had the same questions, the same worries."

"For the most part in the deaf community, people speaking to them don't have a cochlear implant, so they don't understand where they're coming from. That was something I had to deal with growing up. So to speak from my end, my experience, it was a lot more understanding for them."

Telander faced questions on how the receiver for the implant stays on during football — "My direct answer was we have our helmets on, so that keeps it attached. But when you're in a contact sport, it's bound to come off," he said.

And there was also a question about how to deal with communication on the field. Telander played quarterback and safety at Iowa City Liberty, where he was in more direct communication to make the calls. As a linebacker, though, "We're not making the calls any more. Your head's on a swivel, and it's only a matter of 10 seconds," he said.

One message Telander made sure to pass on was one that came from his mother when he was young.

"My mom always told me being different is unique. Being normal is boring," he said. "I was just trying to give them a different perspective, for motivation."

The motivation, Black and Hall said, worked both ways.

"It was cool to have another perspective," Black said. "The best part is, I know that's the next generation. And that's what's after me, and that's who will lead the world someday. It's good to know I'm leaving some sort of imprint or impact on their lives, as people have left on me. I know it's a lasting memory that will live forever. That's good for me to know."

"I love seeing people happy, I love seeing kids happy," Hall said. "There are a lot of negative things in the world. When you can brighten somebody's day, and they can take something from it — I hope this is something they can remember for a long time. That's always something cool that I can take from it."

"Most of our lives are about football. But when you can take away time and help kids, it's a little bit refreshing."

Title: Iowa's Gennings Dunker: Hay bale toss champ, duck herder and most interesting man in CFB

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 8/16/2023

IOWA CITY, Iowa — With a half-eaten sandwich in one hand and a bottled sports drink in the other, Gennings Dunker, at first glance, looked ill-prepared for and not interested in taking on a conversation at Iowa's media day.

But during the next 10 minutes, Dunker held court on a range of topics so broad that it baffled the mind that a sophomore offensive lineman could be that deep while appearing so shallow. He's sarcastic and comedic yet serious and studious. Dunker's dimensions — 6 feet 5, 320 pounds — belie the size he seems to pack on that monstrous frame.

As the only underclassman listed as a starter along Iowa's offensive line, Dunker has the trajectory to impact Big Ten football. But it's the anecdotes he's attached to that stand out. Each one helps form a mosaic of one of college football's most interesting — and eccentric — personalities.

With fire-engine red hair and a mustache to match, plus the team's broadest shoulders, Dunker looks like a modern-day Paul Bunyan. His weight room exploits confirm that comparison, with a 680-pound squat and 15 bench-press reps of 345 pounds, all before his 20th birthday. He barely missed the program record in the squat, which was set by center Logan Jones at 700 pounds, but even Dunker's weightlifting rival acknowledged he wouldn't be long to hold the mark.

"Dunk is definitely going to get it eventually," Jones said. "I'm just happy I have it over his head right now."

There are many reasons Jones likes holding the record. But primarily it's because of how Dunker celebrated his second consecutive title in the Solon Beef Days hay bale toss, an annual summer ritual Iowa offensive linemen have dominated for a generation. Dunker launched a hay bale, which weighs between 50 and 60 pounds, 14 feet and 6 inches over a bar to set the event record. Jones lost in the finals against Dunker, and the trash talk has intensified since that July evening.

"I really should be better, but I just can't help myself when it comes to Logan Jones," Dunker said. "I love Logan Jones. I like to mess with him a lot. It's a great time. It's one of my favorite things to do. I just had a large Casey's coffee right beforehand, and I was ready to roll."

Jones offered context to the competition. It was the final day of summer workouts, and he had played 18 holes of golf that day. He said he "was a little worn out" but wanted to throw a little scare into Dunker's repeat hopes.

"Dunk thought he had it in the bag, and I was like, 'I'm gonna give him a run for his money here,'" Jones said. "We went up to throw 14-6. We each had three attempts. I was like, 'I'm gonna give Dunk the win. Let him take it. He's been preparing for it.' I let him have the win.

"He's just been holding it over me freaking since he did it. He's very happy about that. He likes to rub it in my face."

At a team meeting the following Monday, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz announced the results to the team. Dunker avoided any semblance of humility.

"He was talking a little crap," Ferentz said. "Gennings exaggerated a little bit. I think he said he was, like, 2 feet in front — it was more like inches. So I think he pissed Logan off, and you may see an upset next year."

The Solon Beef Days hay bale toss might have given Dunker fame, but his personality has given him cult status.

The origins of 'Dunk'

Dunker grew up in Lena, Ill., located 100 miles northeast of Iowa near where the state meets Illinois and Wisconsin. With a father who was a powerlifter, weight training came naturally for Dunker. Football prowess, however, did not.

“He was a good-sized freshman but not gigantic,” Lena-Winslow High football coach Ric Arand said. “He was a horrible athlete and a horrible football player his freshman year in high school. Absolutely god-awful. Then he found the weight room, and it’s quite obvious he’s never stopped seeing the weight room.”

Thanks to a disciplined regimen and speed-training workouts with the track coach, Dunker became the starting left tackle as a sophomore for a state semifinalist team. In his junior year, Lena-Winslow won the Illinois state championship.

“I still wouldn’t say I’m a great athlete,” Dunker said. “I came up with a plan and just kind of followed that. I don’t even know what I weighed my freshman year — like, 180. Then I graduated at 280.”

Dunker was undetected as a college prospect until he stumbled upon Iowa’s coaching staff. Ferentz and assistant coach Seth Wallace, who recruits Illinois, were at Lena-Winslow talking with former Iowa signee Isaiah Bruce when Dunker came out of nowhere and made a big impression with his size 17 shoes.

“We’re standing in the entryway of the school, and our cafeteria is right next to it,” Arand said. “And this tall, red-headed kid comes walking out of the cafeteria, had a legitimate question for me, and it was Gennings. He was wearing bright red tennis shoes — which, again, is not unusual for him. I was standing next to coach Wallace when Gennings came up, and he just said, ‘Hey, Coach’ and asked me a question. Coach Wallace looked right at him, looked down at his feet, and he goes, ‘What is your name?’ That was the only reason that Iowa ever saw Gennings.”

A bale-tossing ‘bookworm’

Dunker has a studious side that contrasts with his outsized personality. He’s majoring in human physiology with a pre-med track. In all four semesters at Iowa, Dunker has earned dean’s list distinction. He doesn’t own a television and is a voracious reader.

His favorite book is “Man’s Search for Meaning” by Viktor E. Frankl, an Austrian psychiatrist and Holocaust survivor. Dunker prefers nonfiction, although when he was younger, he read “Harry Potter” and other books. His aptitude for reading began early, and he won prizes for Lena-Winslow’s accelerated reading program.

“He was actually a bookworm. He was a nerd,” Arand said. “He was always the top kid, not only in his class but in the entire school. He was a nonstop reader, and probably so much to the extent that he was actually a distraction to teachers in class. Rather than doing a math assignment, for example, he’d always have a book in his hand.”

That scholarly nature has spilled over to football. At Iowa, he has bought into the style of play and weightlifting routine. Dunker credits offensive line coach George Barnett for his development but said former offensive lineman Matt Fagan was “the only reason I played a snap last year.” Dunker rotated snaps last fall and started at guard in the Music City Bowl as a redshirt freshman.

“His upside, obviously, is what you think it is,” Barnett said. “He’s very talented. He cares a ton. He has an energy and pace about him that you just want to be around and you want other kids to see and you want recruits to see. Then you put on the size, and you put on the ability, and it’s like, ‘Holy crap.’”

Dunker’s raw ability has allowed him to get by physically as he refines his fundamentals. The staff has chosen to keep him at right tackle during camp rather than shift him around.

“There’s a lot to be encouraged about,” Ferentz said. “Even when he was doing things wrong technically, it still looked OK. So if you can get him to do it right and get him the way he needs to do it, it might look really good.”

“Dunk is all strength all the time,” Iowa football strength coach Raimond Braithwaite said. “He’s a force-driven athlete, so a lot of that stuff comes naturally to him. There’s areas of development that he still has to undergo. People see a big, hulking mass of a man, and he’ll even acknowledge that he has to develop more fluidity, which he understands. I think that’s the next step in his physical evolution.”

There are numerous Dunk stories at Lena-Winslow. Dunker wanted a new shirt for max power clean day, so he went to the local Goodwill and found matching Hawaiian shirts. He cut off the arms for himself and handed the other to Arand, who Dunker said “really loved that shirt.”

“He always shopped at thrift stores,” Arand said. “You’d say, ‘Where did you get it?’ And before you even get that out of your mouth, you’d know that he got it at the thrift store.”

On his final day of classes at Lena-Winslow, Dunker let animals loose inside the high school as a senior prank. He considered mice or gerbils but wisely opted for ducks. Dunker put them in a dog kennel, packed them in the back of his pickup, “drove smartly” and then let them loose.

“When ducks get freaked out, they just poop everywhere. So they were just pooping all over the hallways,” he said. “The principal told me I wouldn’t get my diploma if I didn’t clean it up.”

Dunker still has three years of eligibility at Iowa, but he already has filled a barrel with college stories, most of which are untapped. Yes, he drank 14 protein shakes a day as a freshman. He chose ducks over mice for his senior prank, not because he was afraid the mice would scurry away and become a problem but because “they might get kicked, and that wouldn’t be great.”

“He’s one of the smarter guys we’ve had, based on the courses and grades,” Ferentz said. “The courses he takes I can’t pronounce, and the grades he gets. But he really hides it well. Like, when you talk to him, it’s like, ‘Really?’”

“Sometimes he’ll make you want to think that he’s not thinking. But he’s thinking; the wheels are spinning,” Barnett said. “My son comes to the facility after practice during the spring, and I can’t find him. I’m like, ‘James, where you at?’ Well, he’s in the meeting room with Dunk, just laughing. But that’s who Dunk is. He can be with a 60-year-old and make their day, and he can be with a 14-year-old and make their day.”

“Gennings is an interesting study,” Wallace said. To Arand, Dunker is “like a little kid in a huge man’s body.” As a seventh-grader, Dunker said his father dropped him off at a family friend’s farm and told him not to come home until the hay was baled. “I won’t mention the name of the farmer because I think there’s child labor laws or something,” Dunker joked.

“The funniest thing is you’ll be talking to him, and if he doesn’t know what to say, he’ll flex at you,” Jones said. “He’ll give you a bicep flex or he’ll just start blinking really fast. It’s hilarious.”

As for preferring reading in his downtime, Dunker said, “You learn a lot more (from reading) than just watching TV and watching SpongeBob.”

If there’s a way to summarize Dunker’s whimsical ways, it’s the nontraditional manner in which he catches catfish. One day, he took fellow offensive lineman Mason Richman to catch bluegill on a lake near Hills, Iowa. Afterward, Dunker fileted the bluegill, and they left for the Iowa River that cuts through Iowa City. Dunker used portions of the bluegill as catfish bait on large hooks, attached them to 2-liter bottles, stripped down to his shorts and shoes and waded out to the middle of the river.

“He just looked like the funniest dude ever,” Richman said. “I think coach Ferentz likes that guy more than anyone else on the team. Obviously, offensive line is a good part of it, and just the way he acts.

“We love that guy. He’s just a really, really good character for us and just brings something different to the room each and every day. We appreciate him for it.”

Title: Iowa RB Kaleb Johnson 'was touched by God' with physicality: How high is his ceiling?

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 8/14/2023

IOWA CITY, Iowa — No matter where Kaleb Johnson stands on the practice field, the sun seems to shine on the Iowa Hawkeyes running back.

Blessed with a chiseled physique that many NFL runners strive to achieve with year-round conditioning, Johnson stands out among his teammates. At 6 feet and 225 pounds, veins bulge from his biceps like train tunnels through a mountain. Yet he carries it so naturally, it's almost minimized by the true sophomore.

"He was touched by God, so to speak, from a physical standpoint," Iowa football strength coach Raimond Braithwaite said. "He looks like a Greek god. A statue."

But physical traits are hardly unusual among elite running backs, and that's something Johnson has learned this offseason. Last year, Johnson rushed for an Iowa freshman record 779 yards and burst out with a 200-yard performance at Purdue that earned Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week honors. Overall, Johnson averaged 5.2 yards per carry and scored six touchdowns.

Just about every yard he earned in 2022 came naturally. Johnson, who turned 20 on Monday, arrived at Iowa barely 14 months ago. He played sporadically and, at times, timidly throughout his freshman season. After watching himself on video and talking with Braithwaite and running backs coach Ladell Betts, Johnson recognizes his potential and what he needs to do to achieve it.

"Last year, I was kind of scared, timid because I didn't know what to expect," Johnson said. "I came from high school straight to college and played against people that were older than me about two, three years."

Even with a frame like Johnson's, it's easy to forget players are away from home and their insecurities are often exposed for the first time since entering high school. Not only did he play behind an undeveloped offensive line, but Johnson faced seven of the nation's top 14 defenses last year, not including the No. 2 overall unit in practice every day.

Those competitions hardened him on the field and sharpened his offseason focus. Johnson needed to learn more about positional nuance and further develop his body. Building the proper mindset is where it starts. That's where Braithwaite and Betts came into focus.

"Being 18 years old and being physically gifted, you can cut corners in certain things like your sleep habits, your dietary habits," Braithwaite said. "This guy can eat a tray of brownies and probably keep a six-pack, whereas I'd look at one and I'm just like huge. Things like that, he has grown to understand that he can't take for granted. That's going to be the next step that separates him."

"One of his goals is to be one of the best running backs to ever come out of the university, which is a lofty statement. But there has to be some action behind that talk."

Braithwaite described the process as an everyday approach, something Johnson has embraced. The 10 pounds he has gained since last season led to muscular growth, not hidden pockets around his midsection. Johnson listens intently to Betts, who can help the young man achieve his NFL goals.

"He has a natural feel for running the football, obviously, that's why we recruited him," Betts said. "He definitely has good vision, good feel, good feet. Now it's about trying to maximize on that and continue to get better. And the best thing that can happen for him is what has actually already happened, is the guys around him are getting better as well."

Betts endured one of the most difficult eras in Iowa history from the end of Hayden Fry's tenure through Kirk Ferentz's rebuild. But Betts is the only player in Iowa history to lead the program in rushing for four consecutive seasons and ranks second in career rushing yards at 3,686. He became a second-round draft pick, played nine NFL seasons and produced 1,599 yards from scrimmage in 2006, along with 1,154 on the ground that year.

“Coach Betts, man, I love that dude,” Johnson said. “He cares so much, and the thing that makes me believe in him even more is that he was in the league, so he understands what the standard is to be great at that level.”

Youth, inexperience and injuries prevented Iowa’s offensive line from competing up to its standard the last two seasons. Of the 80 starts by Iowa’s offensive line last season, 67 were by underclassmen. The Hawkeyes averaged 2.9 yards per carry overall, which Johnson almost doubled on his own. His 200-yard rushing performance at Purdue was the first by an Iowa freshman in a regular-season game.

“He’s a big, strong running back and he had a great freshman season,” Iowa center Logan Jones said. “With the development of the offensive line, we’re gonna be able to help him succeed more. Last year we struggled a little bit, but it starts up front and he knows that. We have a great relationship with Kaleb. We want to block for him.”

Johnson’s attentiveness has helped him remain on task and goal-oriented. Since he was a child, he has kept copious notes and written affirmations. It helped him stay focused in his pursuit of becoming a starting running back at Hamilton (Ohio) High School.

“I kept doing that, kept saying that, and it happened,” Johnson said.

Johnson eyes improvement in multiple areas, but especially as a receiver. He caught four passes for 27 yards last year and wants to become more than a one-dimensional running back. On kickoff return, Johnson averaged 25 yards on 13 returns and told special teams coach LeVar Woods in his offseason studies that he saw two openings where he could have scored touchdowns.

As a running back, Johnson could leverage his size a bit more to wear down defenses. He has an upright style of running, but finishing runs with contact could elevate his game to an elite level.

“I tell him all the time defenses get tired of tackling,” Betts said. “If they have a guy that keeps attacking them and attacking them play after play, they don’t like that. They don’t want to have to deal with that.”

“He weighed in at 225, so he’s like Shonn Greene right now,” Braithwaite said about the program’s only Doak Walker Award winner. “Only he doesn’t look like Shonn Greene. He’s a taller, longer guy.”

Johnson has reverence for running backs from the past and present, listing Marshall Faulk and Eric Dickerson along with Najee Harris and especially Derrick Henry as his favorites. Johnson aspires to have a stiff-arm like Henry’s and “just own it.” He also has his own brand of bravado now that his initial apprehension has faded.

“You’re going to see something,” he said.

“He’s still young,” Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. “He’s still learning. He’s got so much ability, and he’s doing well. I don’t mean to say it in a disparaging way, but he still has a lot more there, like just little things.”

Title: How Kirk Ferentz crafts his offensive lines: Will Iowa's meet the standard

Author: Scott Dochterman

Date: 8/22/23

IOWA CITY, Iowa — When one strips away the wins, the accolades and the fancy facilities, what Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz stakes his reputation upon is how he molds offensive lines.

From 1981 to 1989, Ferentz built the Hawkeyes' offensive line into one of the nation's best units. As an offensive line coach with the Baltimore Ravens, Ferentz helped develop Jonathan Ogden into a Hall of Fame offensive tackle. Under Ferentz, the Hawkeyes have had six offensive linemen selected in the first round of the NFL Draft — second most among college football programs — in the last two decades. Ferentz's best Iowa protege, Marshal Yanda, is a likely Pro Football Hall of Fame selection and was a third-round pick in 2007.

That history built a foundation but didn't block anything besides a legacy last fall. Iowa's offensive line was ravaged by inexperience, attrition and injuries. Only 13 starts came from upperclassmen and just five from an original scholarship lineman. The center flipped over from defensive tackle, the left tackle had lingering issues with a dislocated kneecap and inconsistency plagued every position. It led to 38 sacks — a 15-year high — and 2.92 yards per carry.

But one step at a time, the offensive line has grown. Left tackle Mason Richman had surgery in January to repair the ligament around his kneecap and it has bolstered his confidence. Center Logan Jones no longer has to think like Rimington Award winner Tyler Linderbaum; he now can react like the first-rounder. The lumps the offensive line has taken in games against Big Ten defenses have aided its development of more than a thousand scout-team reps.

"We're not there yet by any stretch," Ferentz said. "But I think we'll have a chance maybe to play a level where it kind of meets the standard we're looking for. And it's not because I haven't tried. There are a million things that factor into it.

"That's one area I know a little something about in football: That's about it. I've been saying you really can't microwave maturity. You just can't do it. That is a position where maturity really shows up."

For a developmental program like Iowa, the ideal situation up front is to start at least three multiyear upperclassmen, perhaps a talented sophomore and then rotate a senior or junior with an underclassman. Then one of Ferentz's late-blooming "good stories" would emerge. For the better part of a generation, that philosophy served Iowa both in annual competition and program maintenance.

But in 2021, the pipeline tapped out. Iowa's 2018 and 2019 recruiting classes struggled to produce capable linemen. The two most promising candidates — the late Cody Ince and Justin Britt — suffered career-ending injuries. Others either didn't reach expectations, transferred or both. Then injuries shredded the unit. At best it looked ordinary. Against good defenses, the line was exposed.

Last year, the Hawkeyes faced seven of the nation's top 14 statistical defenses. Any upward trajectory was muted by the quality and growth of its opponent.

Offensive line coaches often deal with numbers because position flexibility is expected. Iowa wants at least seven, maybe eight, linemen available to play winning football every Saturday. Offensive line coach George Barnett walked into a depleted room in 2021 "having a couple of headliners and then patches." There was Linderbaum, a unanimous first-team All-American, flanked by several linemen seeing action for the first time. It was even worse in 2022 when the youngsters forced to play too early in 2021 still were developing and there was no All-Big Ten lineman to help in a pinch. Injuries were rampant.

"I think you block people and play winning football with juniors and seniors," Barnett said. "I think there's a maturation process at that position the closer you get to the ball."

But for the first time since 2020, Iowa might have a unit with enough depth and talent to compete the way it wants. The Hawkeyes return five players up front with double-digit career starts, plus two grad transfers who were multiyear starters. In addition, there are rotational linemen from last year with spot starts making a push.

"I think we have some competition in the group, which we haven't had," Ferentz said. "We've been trying to survive. Now we've got competition, and maybe with a little bit of luck, we'll probably be able to play at the tempo we want to play at.

"That's our goal. We're not there yet, but I feel a lot better."

Jones (6 feet 3, 290 pounds) is the linchpin to Iowa's resurgence up front. A knee injury cost Jones all but two games of the 2021 season. Ferentz sought Jones to switch to center and potentially replace Linderbaum. A deep pool at defensive tackle made the flip easier to handle.

With a program-record 700-pound squat, Jones has uncommon strength for an average-sized body. He also has rare explosiveness, but it became an issue for him last year. Teammates and coaches mentioned Linderbaum's quickness off the ball, and Jones strived to match it. That caused several bad snaps as he developed muscle memory and a better mental approach.

"I'm a lot more comfortable with what I'm doing and the calls that I'm making," Jones said. "I know what I need to do now. I know how I need to do it, why I need to do it, just everything that I didn't really know last year. I know the why conceptually of our offense: why I need to get there; why I need to get vertical; where the backs are hitting, just things like that."

"Logan probably should get a medal for the way he played last year," Ferentz said. "Because what he did was so difficult, moving him in March and then starting every game. He played pretty well last year. Everything he does is just at such a high level. So to think he's not going to be better this year and next year, like seriously?"

Richman (6-6, 312) has 25 starts at left tackle, which included 12 games in 2021. In previous eras, Richman would have rotated at guard that season, and perhaps kicked outside last year. Instead, he received an education against some of college football's top defensive ends over the last two years. Losing those one-on-one matchups, combined with fighting a lingering knee issue, dipped his confidence.

"He can be an overthinker because he's really intelligent," Barnett said. "He cares so dang much. He's starting to play with a little more rhythm and feel and not worrying about this and worrying about that."

This offseason, Richman doubled down mentally and physically. He was unable to compete in spring football, but he battled quarterback Cade McNamara each morning to arrive first at the facility, always before 5 a.m.

Connor Colby (6-6, 311) started 11 games at guard in 2021, the most ever for a true freshman under Ferentz. Last year, Colby kicked out to right tackle but struggled in his sets and shifted to left guard for the final six games. A four-star prospect, Colby has opened 24 career contests.

"Nobody wants to hear it, but we've had injuries," Ferentz said. "We've had some unusual personnel situations. Connor Colby is a great example, in my opinion. Connor was a really good prospect, and he's a really good young man, and he's going to be a really good player. But we threw him in there two years ago, and he wasn't ready."

Others have dealt with their own trials. Nick DeJong (6-6, 305), a senior who began his career as a walk-on, has 17 starts over four different positions. Now a sophomore, Beau Stephens (6-6, 319) opened 10 games last year at right guard. Tyler Elsbury (6-5, 312), a junior, and Gennings Dunker (6-5, 320), a sophomore, combined for three starts last year. They're joined by a pair of grad transfers. Rusty Feth (6-5, 310) had 34 starts at Miami (Ohio), and Daijon Parker (6-5, 315) opened 19 games at Division II Saginaw Valley State.

Now, they're all experienced. They're all battle-tested. They compete daily against one of the nation's top defenses but no longer become the daily party favor. There's better chemistry and execution in their outside zone and they genuinely like one another. That doesn't mean this unit will become a dominant force like some of its predecessors, but it should look more like an Iowa unit than the last two seasons.

"It's been the best it's really been in my four years here," Richman said. "I think a lot of it's due to guys just buying into what we're trying to achieve here."

"They're really hungry," Barnett said. "They got a good look in their eye. They're showing up every day, and we had that last year, too. The difference this year is we have competition."

Title: Yahya Black has opportunity to showcase unique ability

Author: John Steppe

Date: 8/22/23

IOWA CITY — Yahya Black is not one to hype himself up.

“He’s not a guy that’s on social media,” Iowa defensive line coach Kelvin Bell said. “He’s not a guy that’s all about me and not a guy that brings a lot of attention to himself with his mouth.”

When asked about what he thinks he can individually accomplish, Black pivoted to how the “sky’s the limit” for the entire team. Black considers his bull rush to be a strength, but also is quick to say he wants to improve “everywhere.”

“From the run game to the pass game, I know I can improve in all those areas,” Black said.

So let his teammate and fellow defensive lineman Joe Evans do the hyping for him.

“He could have a great year,” Evans said. “He’s definitely putting in the work. He is as big as ever, and he is progressing a lot as an individual. ... It’s pretty cool to see the progress that he’s made this offseason.”

Black, officially at 315 pounds, is the biggest defensive lineman on the Hawkeyes’ roster. (The only taller defensive lineman than the 6-foot-5 Black is 6-7 Chris Reames, who played sparingly last season.)

“He’s got unique ability,” Bell said. “He’s got unique size.”

Iowa football fans have seen some flashes of that ability.

His forced fumble in 2021 against Colorado State was a turning point as the then-No. 5 Hawkeyes survived an upset scare. He was one of four Hawkeyes to record a sack in the 2022 Music City Bowl.

Going back to his freshman year, he appeared in four games — the maximum while preserving his redshirt year — although his snap count was limited in each game.

But injuries have often gotten in the way of him taking on a larger role.

A foot injury sidelined him for much of the 2022 season. He eventually came back from the injury after missing five games, but it also kept him out of spring practices.

A hamstring injury also bugged him in the summer of 2021.

“It’s hard not to get frustrated over injury,” Black said. “But you just keep pushing forward, find other things to be productive in.”

Bell believes Black’s not-all-about-me attitude has helped him “from a mental standpoint`be able to handle some of the adversity that he’s had over the course of the years.”

“He’s kind of been able to, in his own way, persevere through those injuries,” Bell said.

Black is healthy again and listed as the second-team defensive lineman ahead of the 2023 season. He has received some first-team reps in fall camp although Bell said he is one of “six guys that are getting first-team opportunities.”

Iowa has seven defensive linemen returning, including Black, who took at least 160 defensive snaps last year, per Pro Football Focus.

That depth could be especially important considering the uncertainty around defensive lineman Noah Shannon’s status.

Shannon said last month he is part of the NCAA’s investigation into sports wagering at Iowa. Interim athletics director Beth Goetz said last week she was optimistic to get “some feedback” from the NCAA regarding player reinstatement.

Even if Shannon does not miss significant time because of the investigation, there is a track record of Iowa defensive linemen making significant year-to-year jumps.

Deontae Craig went from three tackles for loss and 1.5 sacks in 2021 to 10 tackles for loss and 6.5 sacks in 2022.

The year before that, Lukas Van Ness went from not playing at all in 2020 to racking up seven sacks in 2021. Joe Evans, meanwhile, went from one sack in 2020 to seven in 2021.

Black had one sack in 2022. Time will tell whether he is the one to make that jump in 2023.

For now, Black said it is a "good feeling" to be healthy again. But like many other things, Black is not going to make a big deal of it.

"We all have our times where we're injured," Black said, "but it's good to be out on the field."

Title: Quinn Schulte grateful his long journey is paying off on the gridiron

Author: Lynn Harrington

Date: 8/20/23

IOWA CITY, IA — Iowa's veteran safety is no stranger to perseverance, and he's all about staying the course to achieve a goal.

After all, Quinn Schulte began his Hawkeye career as a walk-on in 2019. Through hard work and determination, he earned a scholarship in 2022, and hasn't looked back. Schulte proved he was worthy of it all, and delivered a breakout campaign last season, in which he finished fourth on the team in tackles.

He also was a staple out in coverage, and broke up six passes, which ranked second on the Hawkeyes. With Riley Moss and Kaevon Merriweather no longer in the secondary, Schulte is embracing a leadership role, and understands what comes with the territory.

All-Big Ten cornerback Cooper DeJean returns to the unit, so Schulte is confident the group is going to keep the 'Doughboy' legacy alive and well this fall. The Iowa native feels being a Hawkeye defender is a privilege, so he doesn't take anything for granted, and learns something new on the job everyday.

"Just trying to know the game, do my job consistently, so we're all trying to do that on the back end, by putting out a good product and see what happens," Schulte said. "We lost quite a few guys, but at the same time we bring back a lot of good talent, and a lot of young guys that have studied the game and are ready for their opportunity."

Schulte was a very productive defender in 2022. The six-foot-one, 209-pounder posted nine tackles, including seven solo against Iowa State. Schulte also had nine stops and picked off a pass at Illinois. Not to mention he tallied eight tackles against Ohio State, and seven apiece in road victories over Rutgers and Minnesota.

Still, Schulte believes he's capable of more this fall. Which is why he's striving everyday to improve certain areas of his game as a defensive back.

"Being faster in and out of your breaks, you can always get better at that," he said. "Obviously tackling, running through the tackles, closing space as much as you can on the back end, and try to take away green grass."

Schulte loves playing for Defensive Coordinator Phil Parker, who's arguably the nation's best, and a former safety himself. Iowa's secondary has been a puppy mill for the NFL under Parker, with a jaw-dropping, eight defensive backs drafted under his watch. And Schulte trusts Parker is going to put everyone in the best position to be successful.

"Coach Parker is a Hall of Fame coach, any day you get to learn something new from him, it's a good day," the senior said. "Just try to take as much knowledge as I can from him in the time that I'm here, try to apply that onto the field, and see what it brings for the future."

Schulte grew up a Green Bay Packers fan, and idolized Nick Collins. His work ethic comes from his parents, and Schulte still listens to his playlist from high school before games. The chemistry in Iowa's defensive back room couldn't be better in his eyes, and he knows Parker is going to be fielding another elite group this upcoming season. Schulte just wants to represent for the Doughboys again.

"We're continuing that for this year, we're just out there trying to make plays together, and we definitely have a lot of fun in that room together."
