

5G, made in India

A clutch of domestic companies is developing equipment and software solutions for this upcoming next-gen telecom technology

SURAJEET DAS GUPTA
New Delhi, 4 June

A new opportunity is knocking on the doors for domestic telecom equipment companies in the upcoming entry of 5G services — and they are grabbing it with both hands.

On Thursday, the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) announced the final guidelines for a production-linked incentive (PLI) scheme for telecom and network manufacturing, inviting domestic players to participate within a one-month window. Both they and global players are being offered a 4-6 per cent incentive for five years totalling over ₹12,195 crore. DoT has also reserved three out of the 10 slots among the large players to domestic players, provided 50 per cent of the equity comes from Indians.

The action is already palpable. Sunil Vachani, managing director of Dixon Technologies, the world's 20th largest electronics manufacturing services (EMS) player, said the company is getting ready to apply for the scheme. "The ₹100 crore minimum threshold in five years that we have to invest to be eligible is very reasonable. So is the scope of the sales value on which we will get the incentive," he said (the latter is capped at 20 times that of the investment).

"It will be a big booster for local telecom equipment production. We will concentrate on telecom customer premises equipment," he added.

The company will make routers, WiFi and IoT devices, which is a ₹7,000-crore market and of which imports account for half. A joint venture with telecom major Airtel is expected to provide Dixon with a ready market.

Three other home-grown players — Saankhya Technologies, HFCL and Sterlite Technologies — are already working with partners to design and manufacture "make in India" 5G radios for both domestic and export markets.

Armed with over 70-odd patents, Bengaluru-based Saankhya has designed 5G radios and base stations and a range of chipsets to support them. As Parag Naik, co-founder and CEO, said,

"With Open Radio Access Network (O-RAN) technology, there is a change in perception that Indians can also design high-tech products of world class." The company has won a telco customer, against tough competition, in the US and is in talks with Indian operators and tech firms.

Naik said Saankhya designs the products and outsources manufacturing to smaller companies in and around Bengaluru. "Just like in Apple phones, the margins are in design and IPs," he added.

Pune-based Sterlite Technologies has tied up with Gurugram-based company VVDN Technologies, which will manufacture the radios for them, and is reportedly planning to make a bid for the PLI scheme. Sterlite is designing the radio and a systems integration software.

That is not the only 5G product on which domestic players are working. Telecom equipment maker HFCL's Chairman Mahendra Nahata confirmed that his company will apply for the PLI scheme. It is designing and manufacturing macro and small cells to improve 5G coverage. For every tower standing (there are 600,000 of them), telcos would require about 25 small cells so that customers can be delivered high-speed 5G with low latency. HFCL has applied for a patent for the technology.

The market that domestic players are looking at accounts for over half the capital investment in a 5G network (radios alone account for about 30 per cent). They are banking on offering 5G service providers lower forex costs. India spends about $10 billion in telecom equipment annually, just $3 billion of which is made in India.

But domestic players have failed to make a dent against the big boys of mobile network equipment — Nokia, Ericsson, Huawei, ZTE — for decades. So why are they so bullish on their 5G equipment offerings? "One big change has been the Narendra Modi government's policy that focuses on 'make in India' and is supporting it with the PLI scheme as well as through preference to products (including price) manufactured in India in government projects," said HFCL's Nahata.

The second big change has been that O-RAN, an open platform technology, came into vogue for 5G a few years ago. This has meant that the handful of global telecom gear players can no longer bundle software and hardware and lock in an operator through proprietary technology. "The O-RAN evolution has been like the Y2K movement in India for the telecom equipment ecosystem. With network software becoming free from vendor lock-in because of the virtual open 5G network, India has a huge competitive edge with its IT prowess," Ankit Agarwal, whole-time director of Sterlite Technologies, explained.

Third, Indian players will get some protection from cut-throat Chinese competition because the government is unlikely to give Huawei and ZTE permission to enter the 5G play. "Our biggest problem was we could not match the long-term credit lines they offered at low interest as incentives to buy equipment. European players don't provide such sops and their costs are higher in any case," a senior executive of a domestic equipment maker pointed out.

HFCL's Nahata said he expects localisation in 5G telecom opportunity to hit over 50 per cent. Sterlite's Agarwal said his company is working on an expected 25 per cent reduction in overall 5G network costs, which is what operators are looking for. Saankhya's Naik points out that since the patents for the designs reside in India, the indigenisation of their products is over 80 per cent.

Service providers, too, see value in buying from domestic companies, not least because of the large sums they expect to pay out for 5G spectrum in the upcoming auction. Reliance Jio has gone a step further by developing its own 5G technology, which will soon be tested in India. Analysts said Jio would look at domestic players to manufacture the hardware, too.

All the same, it'll be a tough game for domestic 5G gear manufacturers. All Indian operators are conducting their upcoming 5G trials with equipment in collaboration with Nokia, Ericsson or Samsung. Other big players, such as Nokia, have endorsed O-RAN and are part of that alliance. The mood is summed up by a senior Airtel executive in a recent interview: "We will work with everyone, including incumbent telecom gear makers. Our aim is simple, we want to get the best quality and at the lowest cost." Domestic players clearly have to meet this key criterion.

A monetary policy of continuity with change

This time, RBI's rate-setting body is not only talking about sustaining growth but also reviving it

BANKER'S TRUST

TAMAL BANDYOPADHYAY

The no-action, status-quo monetary policy of the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) signals continuity with change.

Let's take a close look at what has been continuing and what has changed.

One, the accommodative stance of the monetary policy continues. The Monetary Policy Committee (MPC), RBI's rate-setting body, has unanimously decided to continue with the accommodative stance as long as necessary, while the key policy rates remain unchanged. It has also stuck to its data-based guidance as opposed to the time-based guidance that it was giving till February.

However, one word has made a big change. This time it is saying the accommodative stance will continue for long to revive and sustain growth on a durable basis, while ensuring that inflation remains within the target, going forward.

In April, it had committed to continue with the accommodative stance as long as necessary to sustain growth on a durable basis while ensuring that inflation remains within the target going forward. This time, it is not only talking about sustaining the growth but also reviving it — bringing back the stance of the February policy.

This is an admission by the Indian central bank that the green shoots, which it had seen in April, aren't there anymore. The second wave of Covid-19 pandemic has attacked the economy badly. Two, this has led to the second change in the policy. Since the February MPC meeting, the RBI has been maintaining the projection for real GDP growth for fiscal year 2021-22 at 10.5 per cent — 26.2 per cent in the first quarter; 8.3 per cent in the second; 5.4 per cent in third; and 6.2 per cent in the fourth.

Despite the disruption in the economy on account of the second Covid wave, its annual report, released last month, has stuck to the same projection even though every agency has been paring it. This time, the RBI, too, has cut its growth projection to 9.5 per cent — 18.5 per cent in the first quarter; 7.9 per cent in second; 7.2 per cent in third; and 6.6 per cent in the fourth.

Look at the sharp downward revision of growth in the first quarter — shaving it off by a quarter. While vaccination holds the key, the RBI has also called for policy support from all quarters — including fiscal and monetary.

The RBI has also cut its growth projection to 9.5% — 18.5% in the first quarter; 7.9% in second; 7.2% in third; and 6.6% in the fourth

Three, while there is a one full percentage point cut in the growth projection, the inflation projection has been raised by just 10 basis points, from 5 per cent to 5.1 per cent. One basis point is a hundredth of a percentage point.

Even though the wholesale price inflation climbed to an 11-year high of 10.49 per cent in April, after an eight-year high of 7.39 per cent in March, India's consumer price index-based retail inflation eased to 4.29 per cent in April from 5.52 per cent in March, primarily due to reduction in food prices. The RBI tracks retail inflation and its mandate is to maintain retail inflation between 2 per cent and 6 per cent.

The risks to the inflation projection are evenly balanced. While rising crude prices could put upward pressure, the lack of demand will even it out.

Four, there is continuity in the RBI's secondary market government securities acquisition programme, or G-SAP. In April, it had announced a ₹1 trillion G-SAP 1.0 programme for the first quarter. This will continue in the second quarter. In fact, the RBI has raised the size of the G-SAP 2.0 to ₹1.2 trillion.

Despite this, the bond market was not exactly cheerful on Friday. Why? This is because the latest ₹40,000 crore bond buying programme under G-SAP 1.0 on June 17, its third tranche, contains ₹10,000 crore purchase of state development loans.

One can presume that more state development loans will be included in G-SAP 2.0. Following this, the net buying of central government securities will be much less than ₹1.2 trillion.

The state loans have to be included in the bond buying programme as otherwise the spread between the yield of central and state government papers, which has been widening, will expand further.

Finally, the talk about unwinding or withdrawal of accommodation is no more on the RBI radar. It's unlikely to return in the near future. The RBI probably can't afford to talk on this during the current year when everyone is rushing to cut the growth projections at regular intervals.

NEWSMAKER / ALAPAN BANDYOPADHYAY / FORMER CHIEF SECRETARY, WEST BENGAL

'Good boy' in the Centre's bad books

ISHITA AVAN DUTT
Kolkata, 4 June

It was 4 am when West Bengal Chief Secretary Alapan Bandyopadhyay returned home from the crematorium after performing the last rites of his 56-year-old brother, Anjan Bandyopadhyay. The popular television anchor and editor of Bengali news channel, Zee 24 Ghanta, succumbed to Covid-related complications on May 16, weeks after he had recovered and was discharged from hospital.

The siblings from Balijuri village, Asansol, in the Bardhaman district of West Bengal, were about four years apart. But the tragedy did not deter the bureaucrat brother from reporting at Nabanna, the state secretariat, the next morning. With Covid-19 cases mounting at that point, personal grief could, well, wait.

On May 26, Cyclone Yaas barreled into West Bengal, washing away houses and embankments. It weakened after making landfall — but not before precipitating a political storm with Bandyopadhyay in the eye of it. At the heart of the controversy is a review meeting by Prime Minister Narendra Modi at the Kalaikunda Air Force Station. He was on a visit to West Bengal and Odisha to take stock of the damage caused by the cyclone.

The sequence of events went something like this: Banerjee and Bandyopadhyay arrived late for the review meeting and left immediately after. Hours later, the central government directed Bandyopadhyay to report to the Department of Personnel and Training (DoPT) on May 31 — his previously scheduled date of retirement — even though he had been granted an extension for three months on May 24 to help the chief minister cope with the Covid-19 second wave.

Bandyopadhyay did not go to Delhi. Instead, the 1987-batch IAS officer of the West Bengal cadre, opted for retirement on May 31 and was appointed chief advisor to the chief minister for three years, within hours.

The Ministry of Home Affairs then sent him a show cause notice under the Disaster Management Act for abstaining from the review meeting by the Prime Minister, who is the chairman of the National Disaster Management Authority (NDMA).

Bandyopadhyay replied to the notice on Thursday, saying that he had not "abstained" and left the meeting on instructions of Mamata Banerjee to whom he reported as chief secretary.

That is a developing story, but there is no doubt that the chief minister has Bandyopadhyay's back.

Ever combative to challenges from the Centre, she recently said the state government would extend full support to whatever happens to him from here on. In the last few days, the former chief secretary even earned her praise for being "bold", "honest" and "sincere", among other complimentary adjectives.

There is a good reason for such unflinching support. Ahead of the Assembly polls, the state government had launched a massive outreach programme called "Duare Sarkar" for doorstep delivery of welfare schemes. Bandyopadhyay is largely credited for its successful implementation. "He would do regular video conferences to track the progress of the scheme," said a state government official.

Citing an example, the official said, after the state cabinet gave its nod to the Rajya Purohit Kalyan Prokolpo — a scheme under which a monthly allowance of ₹1,000 and free housing is allotted to 8,000 Sanatan Brahmin priests — Bandyopadhyay ensured the disbursement of the allowance within three days before it could be tangled in legal knots.

But Bandyopadhyay is not just Banerjee's blue-eyed bureaucrat — he was a favourite of her Left Front predecessor Buddhadeb Bhattacharjee, too.

The former chief minister, who would revel in the company of good books and films, penning plays and translating world literature, would often refer to him as "Bengal's pride".

As district magistrate, he had accompanied Bhattacharjee on his first official visit as CM to remote villages of South 24 Parganas on a rickshaw-van to survey vandalism by dacoits.

It is not particularly difficult to fathom Bhattacharjee's affection for this bureaucrat. A meritorious student all along, who went to Narendrapur Ramakrishna Mission and then Presidency College, Bandyopadhyay's penchant for the Bengali language — evident in the touching tribute he wrote to his younger brother in a local language publication recently — is beyond question.

He embodied the qualities of a bhalo chele (good boy) in his college days — articulate, well-read and, of course, a good student. "He was a name from the time he roamed around College Street," recalled one of his college mates.

Before cracking the civil service exam, Bandyopadhyay had a short stint as a journalist in Anandabazar Patrika.

Married to the dative of famous Bengali poet and litterateur Nirendranath Chakraborty, he is known to take a keen interest in Bengali culture and history. But his love for all things Bengal and Bengali isn't limited to that. In 2017, he penned Amlar Mon (The Mind of a Bureaucrat), a chronicle of evolution of civil servants in Bengal.

Those who know Bandyopadhyay also describe him as measured, tactical and extremely focused on achieving what he sets out to do. To many it came as a surprise that he would cut short a meeting with the prime minister. Whether it was a slip-up or tactical retreat is yet to be seen.
