

Consumer health data privacy Policy

Type of Data	Why We Collect It
Individual Health Conditions Example: information about your diagnosis and treatment for a specific disease, such as certain skin conditions	We may collect this information in order to provide you with treatment, and to ensure that we understand what treatment is best for you – including when you use our website to “Find A Treatment,” contact our customer service team, or otherwise disclose this data to us.
Prescription Drug Information Example: information about a drug that you have been prescribed by our clinicians	We may collect this information when you register with us, including to provide you with necessary support for your treatment.
Diagnoses, Treatment and Non-Prescription Medication Example: information that you suffer from or are treating conditions such as seasonal allergies with over the counter products	We may collect this information when you register with us, including to provide you with necessary support for your treatment.
Health and Safety Data Example: information about incidents that occur in our stores or information collected if you have an adverse reaction to our products or services.	We may collect health information in connection with accidents or health emergencies in our stores. We may collect other health and safety information as required by law.
Other Data Example: contact information (such as your email, phone number), identifiers (name, IP address), and other inferences drawn from the information you provide may be tied to your health data.	We may collect this information to provide you with customer service, to interact with you about the services you request, and for other purposes as disclosed at the time of collection.