1 Briefly describe the organization's mission or most significant activities
 Children have unique legal rights and interests. Children involved in the juvenile court systems face cascading repercussions such as poor school attendance, graduation rates, unemployment, involvement in the criminal justice system and homelessness. These children are in need of legal advocacy that goes beyond what is provided through today's standard public defense. Legal Counsel for Youth and Children (LCYC) provides multidisciplinary, holistic legal advocacy for children in child welfare proceedings and other juvenile court matters. When we represent a youth in juvenile court we also provide educational advocacy such as addressing special education needs and school discipline. LCYC also provides legal counsel to immigrant youth and homeless youth and young adults. We strive to ensure each child's voice is heard, unique legal rights protected, court experience enriched and life improved.

"I have had the pleasure of working with three attorneys at LCYC, in three separate dependencies. In every case, my foster youth were represented in a courteous and professional manner. The attorneys have worked not only around the child's schedule, but around ours, as well. We are a therapeutic foster home that receives foster youth with emotional and behavioral issues. The agency has always maintained a good relationship with my youth. For us, that is so stabilizing. I cannot tell you how many times the attorney has gone above and beyond their jobs, to keep our youth feeling heard and cared for, without pandering to immature or angry demands. Whenever I hear that I will be working with this agency, I feel like I have another vested team member. They make a huge difference in the life of my children, by being consistent and responsive." - Foster Parent In 2016, 86% of LCYC staff attorney time was dedicated to child welfare advocacy. We provided legal representation to approximately 200 children in child welfare cases in 2016. LCYC employs a unique service model in representing children and youth in child welfare and juvenile offender matters, immigrant youth and youth who are or are at risk of becoming homeless. Our holistic legal service model has positively affected the lives of the children we represent and is helping to inform and shape the statewide standards and policies regarding legal advocacy for children. When representing children in child welfare matters, our full time attorneys represent thirty children, rather than the public defense standard of sixty children. With lower caseloads, the attorneys are able to enter the child's world, ensure their rights are protected, services provided and movement towards permanency steady. LCYC provides proactive advocacy, engaging with children, caregivers, schools, family, services providers and other community supports. We look not just to meet the immediate basic needs and rights of the child, but towards the future, to follow the child's stated goals, build support around these goals, and help to realize long term stability, positive connections and school success. In addition to low caseloads, LCYC's model is also grounded in a strong community of practice. LCYC attorneys engage in monthly all staff meetings, regular supervision and case management and in-house trainings on legal issues and child development. We routinely come together to problem solve on individual cases and to identify systemic barriers and potential solutions. We also engage with the broader community on larger advocacy efforts such as children's representation, preparing adolescents for independence, extended foster care, immigration and homeless youth. LCYC is raising awareness of children's legal rights and the role of counsel in protecting and advocating for children in the child welfare system. Our unique position in this positive movement forward is through the example we set in our advocacy, the trainings we help plan and provide for children's attorneys around the state, and the data we collect and share regarding legal services and results. LCYC has conducted data reviews and issued Impact Reports on the findings. Here are some highlights from our 2015 Impact Report: (1) Placement: Children with attorneys from the first hearing are more likely than children without counsel at the start to reside with parents, relatives or other caring adults they know throughout their dependency cases. (2) Permanency: Children with attorneys from the first hearing onward are more likely to remain with or successfully return to their parents than children without counsel at the start. (3) Out-of-Court Advocacy: The vast majority of all open cases require out-of-court legal advocacy in the areas of placement, family visits, education and services for the child. Out-of-court advocacy is also commonly provided on issues of permanency planning and timely permanency. (4) Motions: 42% of the motions filed by LCYC on behalf of children in open cases related directly to placement, requesting that children be placed with their parents, family or known community members, 27% of the motions involved family visitation. (5) Child's Participation: Children with attorneys from the first hearing are more likely to engage in the court process by appearing for hearings or submitting written testimony to the court. LCYC will continue to collect and assess data and outcomes to improve services and raise the bar of children's defense around Washington.

Over the past year, LCYC has increased the number of youth we represent in juvenile offender matters. LCYC utilizes a multidisciplinary approach in providing high quality, holistic advocacy to youth and children in King County. LCYC's legal advocacy is directed by the youth we serve. We gather and share information with each child at the appropriate developmental level and help them to understand their legal options and the potential consequences of each choice. LCYC works to ensure the protection of each child's unique legal rights, to aid each child in her understanding of complicated and often frightening legal processes, and to help each child communicate her interests to the court. LCYC Staff Attorneys team with one another and with Child Advocacy Specialists to help assess and ensure each child's well-being while moving cases forward towards a positive outcome. LCYC connects with service providers, families, Tribes, and schools. When we represent a child in an open juvenile court matter, we make a commitment to engage in the child's educational planning and goals, and to address other legal issues that may arise, such as immigration relief. LCYC recognizes that a child's goals and challenges cannot be compartmentalized into separate boxes or silos, but must be viewed and served as a whole. James' (fictive name) story provides an EXAMPLE of the difference an engaged, proactive LCYC attorney can make. At one time, "James" was facing a grim future of recidivism, having been previously charged with a number of felonies. The matters were set to be resolved by way of a deferred disposition where he would be able to clear his record if he successfully completed probation, but James was failing to satisfy those conditions, and picked up new charges. Then, James' life trajectory was reset through several interventions. James became involved with the King County YMCA's Alive and Free program, and through their efforts, he began to participate in productive activities. For example, he attended a job fair where he caught the eye of a Starbucks employee. While other companies turned James away, Starbucks was willing to give him a chance. After the job fair, James' LCYC attorney learned that he did not have identification, which, of course, is necessary for employment. Since James' parents are not engaged, the LCYC attorney took it upon herself to personally assist. Through a day long affair, she traveled to multiple locations to secure the necessary documents, then waited in a long line to present the information and obtain the ID with James. The youth's positive choices, actions and actual employment were critical in the resolution of the new criminal charges, and the deferred disposition and record sealing were not jeopardized. LCYC and a local public defender worked hard to support James in the successful resolution of his cases. James is still working at Starbucks and is making plans to complete his education. A portion of James' income helps to pay rent for himself and an elderly relative. James' deferred disposition was successfully dismissed and vacated.

In collaboration with private funders, other nonprofits and a school district, LCYC has implemented an innovative pilot, Legal Services Partnership for Youth (LSPY). LSPY is an 18 month pilot, which began in July 2016. Through LSPY, we provide free direct civil legal services to youth, ages 12 -24 years, who are or are at risk of experiencing homelessness in King County. Civil legal advocacy is an important tool in addressing youth homelessness. We utilize legal advocacy as a means to dismantle barriers, which are preventing youth from otherwise experiencing family and school stability, or accessing employment, housing and public benefits. One example of our services involves a referral from Real Escape from Sex Trade (REST) and a youth, "Claudia" (fictive name). Claudia (age 23) was a victim of sex trafficking at the hands of her parent. Claudia needed legal assistance to obtain an order of protection. While safe in a shelter, Claudia will be able to focus again on school, employment and longer term housing. Our pilot's innovative service model places experienced children's attorneys directly into the community. We engage in regular intake at YouthCare's Orion Center and adolescent shelter, at Auburn Youth Resource's adolescent shelter and at Foster High School in Tukwila, Washington. In addition to these sites we frequently respond to referrals from Real Escape from Sex Trade (REST), Northwest Immigrant Rights Project (NWIIRP) and professionals at Juvenile Court. With a team of five attorneys, each working part time on LSPY matters, we are able to respond to emergencies and quickly follow up on referrals. Upon receipt of a referral, we promptly engage with the youth, making plans to meet them in person at a location convenient for the youth. We are able to provide legal advice and representation in court on a variety of civil legal issues. The effectiveness of LSPY's direct services is amplified by strong partnerships among LCYC attorneys, YouthCare staff, educators and other service providers. Together we are working to address the immediate needs of individual youth while building on longer-term, youth-directed goals of education, employment, family permanency and housing stability. LSPY attorneys participate in YouthCare staffings, to learn from one another, identify and address systemic challenges. These staffings also help to improve shelter staff's ability to work within the legal systems and to timely identify legal issues requiring the assistance of counsel. LSPY attorneys have also presented at YouthCare staff trainings and to the residence of the adolescent shelter. Through LSPY, we have assisted youth with a variety of legal issues including, but not limited to, warrants, orders of protection, debt collection, employment law, landlord/tenant, child welfare, immigration, public benefits, medical insurance, emancipation, identification documents, child custody and family law. Based on self-reports from the youth served July - November 2016: 40% experienced domestic violence, 35% reported child abuse at the hands of their parents, 16% were immigrants, 71% identified as racial or ethnic minorities, and 46% came from families who have experienced homelessness.

990 Schedule O, Supplemental Information

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, Part III, Line 2	LCYC's services for immigrant youth and families expanded following the presidential election in November 2016 LCYC immediately considered the countless children, U S citizens, immigrants and refugees, who face increased risks of separation from their parents One of LCYC's two Latina attorneys, Chach Duarte White, created a Safety Plan, a tool kit of steps and documents for parents to complete in preparation for their worst case scenario - what happens to their children if they are placed into custody or deported Students and alumni from the University Washington School of Law Latina/o Student Association and students from Seattle University School of Law Latina/o Student Association helped Chach to create LCYC's "Safety Plan for Immigrant Youth and Children " Seeing the positive legal tool and growing need, Seattle Public Schools ("SPS") contributed translation services to translate the document into Spanish and Somali Since the release of LCYC's Safety Plan, LCYC has experienced a tremendous increase in service hours required to educate and empower children and families at risk of separation due to deportation, LCYC is striving to raise funds to meet this need LCYC is working with others to disseminate the plan in multiple languages , educate families, communities, schools, volunteers and professionals on how to complete the Safety Plan or how to aid others in doing so LCYC also provides direct legal advocacy to immigrant youth and the children of immigrants

990 Schedule O, Supplemental Information

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, Part III, Line 3	In 2016, LCYC expanded its services for homeless youth, building partnerships, onsite intake services and providing direct legal representation in civil issues. Thanks to the receipt of some substantial grants, LCYC was able to initiate an 18 month pilot, beginning in July 2016, to provide regular onsite intake, civil legal advice and representation to youth, ages 12 -24 years, who are or are at risk of experiencing homelessness in King County. Legal advocacy can help address barriers blocking a youth or young adult's path to safe and stable housing. Legal advocacy has a critical role to play in reducing and preventing youth homelessness.
