Part III Statement of Program Service Accomplishments (see the instructions for Part III)
 Check if the organization used Schedule O to respond to any question in this Part III

What is the organization's primary exempt purpose?
 Support for people coming home from prison to reduce chances that they will return to crime and prison. We accomplish this through leadership training, life skills training, mentoring and transition housing. Specifically, we foster one-on-one conversation between ordinary community members (coming into our prison classes as visitors). These conversations are on specific topics in a classroom environment. The conversations are debriefed in the large group. These one-on-one interactions with community members are the bedrock of our work. Prisoners recognize that they can talk to "normal" people when they return to the community. It gives them confidence that they can make it.

Describe the organization's program service accomplishments for each of its three largest program services, as measured by expenses. In a clear and concise manner, describe the services provided, the number of persons benefited, and other relevant information for each program title.

30 Community InReach (In-prison mentoring) - We taught a weekly leadership class in the prison to 29 prisoners over the course of the year. We convene a leadership class (2 hours) and a life skills class (2 hours) each week. Our life skills facilitator left mid-year. There were 924 contact hours with students during the year. We teach a 12-hour intensive on leadership skills that sets the agenda for the class the rest of the year. We graduated 7 people from our July 2017 training and another 8 in March 2018. These students in turn become class leaders and help teach future trainings. If they remain with PHOENIX in the community, they may be eligible to become mentors. The most important characteristic about our prison InReach is that we take in community volunteers to almost every single class. Over the course of the year, 65 volunteers came into our classes (in addition to three staff members). These volunteers are OHSU students and professors, National University of Natural Medicine medical students, members of churches, and members of institutions that are part of Metropolitan Alliance for Common Good (MACG) and other community groups. MACG is a community organizing collective. We use a version of their leadership training to teach men in prison about personal and community transformation for better. The focus is a culture of positive relationships built on one-on-one conversations around a directed topic (e.g., what are the pressures in your life?) and reporting out to the large group. These one-on-one conversations with community members normalize community contact before release and give hope that one may become a positive, contributing member of society. In addition, community members are transformed by the experience and are more motivated to work with those coming home (as 95% of all prisoners do) to help them succeed and become actively engaged citizens. When people get out of prison, they may participate in training and actions through MACG. This year PHOENIX staff and volunteers traveled to Salem to make presentations at the Oregon State Penitentiary with a view toward expanding our work to that prison. In February we made a presentation to a large inmate club (7th Step Club) of 100+ members. We also made a presentation at their annual release fair in April. (Grants $ 0) If this amount includes foreign grants, check here . . . <input type="checkbox"/>	30a	6,864

The Impact of Incarceration on Health Educating Prisoners & Health Care Providers - we continue to work with the School of Nursing at the Oregon Health & Science University, serving as a practicum site for 2-3 students (most terms) taking their "Population Health" class - specifically looking at the impact of incarceration on health Student teams attend PHOENIX classes at the prison and any events or trainings we hold in the community They also interact with the men in the PHOENIX House for their projects We worked with three teams (7 students) from OHSU during the year They build on the collective knowledge gathered from their peers (through research and in-person interviews with prisoners/ex-cons in our program) from term to term This year's first team organized a community outreach event to educate the public on prison-to-community transition issues and to recruit volunteers and mentors - an event that drew over 60 community members, the second team completed a resource guide for prisoners to use when they get out "Healthier You A Resource Guide for Accessing Healthcare in Multnomah County", and the third team created a new life skills development curriculum focused on self & social awareness, self management, relationship management and responsible decision making We also continue to have monthly presentations from medical students from the National University of Natural Medicine to educate the men in the prison class about healthy diet, natural pain management, self-massage and other things they can do on right now in the prison - and on their own after they get out - to live healthier lives This is critical because health problems are staggering for those getting out of prison They are 12.9% more likely to die within the first two weeks of release from all causes compared to the general population And one in 12 convicts is hospitalized within 90 days of release from prison This prisoner health work is geared toward speaking to medical professionals and students as well as prisoners This interaction is extremely important since 95% of all incarcerated people are eventually released Because the prison population is hard to access (because of safety and security issues), many OHSU and NUNM students join our prison class as visitors to have the experience and exposure to the health and subculture issues that impact them
