Part I Summary

1 Briefly describe the organization's mission or most significant activities
Greater Columbia Accountable Community of Health (GCACH) is a collaboration of community leaders from nine counties and the Yakama Nation in Eastern and Central Washington representing a variety of sectors with a common interest in improving population health. By addressing the social determinants, access to care, and care coordination, the organization is driven to reduce duplication of services, identify gaps in the system, improve care coordination, and implement evidenced based programs and services that address priority health issues. The Board of Directors represent 17 sectors related to health and meeting on a monthly basis to guide the work of the organization. The Leadership Council is a broader base of subject matter experts and interested community members who contribute to the various committees and project teams, organized around specific health issues.
