Form 990, Part III, Line 1 - We empower teens from hard places to reach their full potential by first establishing a foundation of trust with each new young person as trust is a pre-requisite to addressing trauma and working through challenging life circumstances. Our coaches, clinical staff, enrichment partners and volunteer mentors collaborate through this whole-person approach, simply focusing on bringing each youth to a place of stability where these young people are no longer constantly battling the negative 'disruptions' of truancy, housing instability and frequent hospitalizations. Only at this point, which we describe as the Journey phase, when a baseline level of emotional and life stability has been reached, can individuals start visioning and working towards larger life goals so they can begin growing into truer versions of themselves. Our goal is then to equip each young person when they reach this baseline, in what we describe as the Launch phase, to develop the social-emotional skills, practical life-skills and provide them with a network of resources and supporters who are behind them every step of the way. This network prepares each young person to step into the world as stable, healthy and relationally connected youth and young adults who can advocate for themselves, develop their full potential and achieve their career and life goals. All programs (enrichment, education, resourcing basic needs, coaching and clinical mental health support) are purposely integrated towards our end goal of holistic health and stability for each young person, and provide a whole-person model of care that is centered on relationships and trust. This highly successful proven whole-person model of long-term care results in significant reductions in hospitalizations, behavioral challenges and housing instability-and significant increases in academic achievement and overall health and well-being.
