SCAM report and things to watch out for

- With the end of the tax season approaching it's the time for scams claiming to be the IRS to start showing up again. The big thing to remember is that the IRS is going to use the mail system. If you receive a call from someone claiming to be the IRS you can bet it's a scam. Don't give out any information. If you question the phone call you can contact the IRS, but otherwise if they need something you will get it in the mail.
- We have had for sure one incident in which a person was contacted by phone and the suspect said they had one a car. Don't give out any information to these calls.
- For those of you that use Facebook some of the scams are starting there. Suspects are creating fake accounts and then telling you that you have won a prize. They will ask for money to be sent to claim that prize. Don't send money to the person and don't give out any information.

Everyone stay safe and have a great month

DEO Jonathon Dzekute
