

The rehabilitation demonstration site is for education

WQVC, as part of the publicity campaign, decided that seeing and experiencing a renovation would be an effective tool to capture our owner's interest. This demonstration project has chosen to focus on the native plant vegetative buffer and to display an alternative to rocky hardscape by installing coir logs.

We were aware of many owners who already are managing their shoreline nicely, but chose this public site for its accessibility and visibility.