If there are over 90 units and it is likely each would have at least 2 occupants; that number of under 100 peak hour trips seems very low! If each occupant works outside their dwelling, socializes, grocery shops, etc. the number of trips would likely be at least double that on an already very busy State Street. Sadly State Street is going to be overrun with no way to widen it in the future.....Wishing we could take a breath and let the roadways catch up to the huge uptick in population that we've already experienced in the past decade before adding more and more high density apartments!
