Thank you for your desire to start a new business in Garden City!

Garden City is home to many productive, thriving businesses, both large and small. The city continuously strives to support and work collaboratively with the business community. We are proud to provide the community with resources such as the Artisans Pathway mapping system and places like the Surel Mitchell Live-Work-Create district. In addition, the city provides many amenities for both employees and clients, such as:

- City amenities
- Small, nimble, and personable government
- Ideal location in the valley with quick access to downtown Boise or Meridian
- The Greenbelt
- The Boise River
- Parks
- Restaurants, Wineries, and Breweries
- Artists and Artisans
- A wide variety of other businesses ranging from retail to manufacturing

Navigating the requirements to ensure that your business is legal can be unnerving. Often business owners find a building that appears to meet their needs and they sign a lease before they find out that they have made a misstep. Garden City provides a free meeting with several disciplines and agencies to help you determine if the location you have found is your best fit, and how to make the process as predictable as possible for you. The reviewers present at this meeting may include representatives from Planning and Zoning, Building, Fire, Environmental, and Public Works.

Before starting a business, you need to have a Certificate of Occupancy for your business at the location where you will be doing business. The following questions will help us know how to best direct you in the process of receiving your certificate of occupancy. Questions will also help us determine other common permits you may need or potential business licenses.

OCCUPANCY

All businesses require a Certificate of Occupancy prior to starting businesses. The information that you provide will help us determine which process or processes will be needed for you to start your business. The below determinations will dictate the building review process:

1. If your proposed occupancy is the same as what the building was built to, there have not been any changes, and there is an existing certificate of occupancy on record. If you do not have a Certificate of Occupancy on file and if there is only one tenant space in the structure documents verifying that there is no change can be used such as an affidavit of use, previous lease agreements, or previous utility bills.
2. There is a change to the occupancy which will require upgrades to the building.
3. Tenant Improvement building permit.
4. New build building permit.

What occupancy best describes each portion of your structure.
