Dear Rabbi Lamm,

I just wanted to congratulate you on the splendid chag hasemicha this past Sunday. My wife and I were there because Rabbi Samuels was among the inductees, and also because our future mechutanim's current son in law, Akiva Sacknovitz, was too. (Our own son Ari was engaged last week. This is a new, and very pleasant, phase for us.)

The speakers were excellent, particularly Ari Berman and Minister Ne'eman, whose presence was obviously of political significance. He was a little hard to hear, but what he had to say was very much to the point.

And of course hearing you speak is always a great pleasure. Oratory like yours is really a lost art -- I can hardly think of anyone who practices it, in this country anyway. I particularly enjoyed the way you turned the Yosi ben Kisma baraita into a dramatic dialogue, complete with colloquial inflections. Terrific! I also enjoyed the irony of hearing you advocate taking controversial positions (or nonpositions), while standing in front of a faculty who presumably thought that's just what you were doing. I just wonder, though -- how many of the new musmachim are actually planning careers in the pulpit?

Anyhow, a hearty yasher koach from the out-of-towner.

Best wishes to you and your family for a chag kasher v'sameach.
