Dear Norman:

Your most recent note brought me much delight. At long last I discovered that even you are not perfect.

The Leo Jung Jubilee Volume was reviewed in the Fall 1963 issue.

With respect to Jung's "Men of the Spirit", I would like you to know that we lack the financial resources to purchase the book. If the publisher would make available to us a copy, we would be glad to find a reviewer for it.

As to his Hildesheimer article, I am not too keen on it. But before making a final decision, I would like to take another look at it.

It's not easy to be a pluralistst and to be torn apart by all kinds of conflicting loyalties. How I long for the serenity of the "higher unity" that would bring to an alienated and exiled creature like myself the fullness of the delight for which your letters whet my appetite.

Yours,
