Mr. Michael Tabor
Carmel College Junior School
Wallingford, Berks.
England

Dear Michael:

I do not know if I owe you a letter, or you owe me one, but as old friends we can mutually agree to forgive all debts and start over again. (Let's assume this is the year of our correspondence!)

The reason for my writing is a young lady whom I have known for a number of years, both through personal meetings and correspondence (not unlike our correspondence). She is a very sensitive, poetic person, very bright and cultured. She is about 20 years old and a student at Barnard, who is now on her way to London for a semester. I have given her your address and asked her to contact you, in the hope that you will be able to invite her on some free day for her to visit Carmel -- and, meanwhile, take the opportunity to talk with her. I think it would benefit her greatly just to meet a person like yourself.

Mrs. Lamm and the entire flock join me in sending our warmest regards to your good wife and family.

Cordially yours,

RABBI NORMAN LAMM
