Dear Norman:

Before I become involved in the work which accumulated on my desk, I quickly want to write to you and thank you for your participation in the Symposium held in connection with the annual meeting of the Memorial Foundation.

There were numerous comments on the importance and high quality of the presentations and discussions. Your paper was most informative and outstanding. Many people paid special tribute to your valuable insights.

As you know, we are planning to publish the presentations made at the Symposium. If you have a written manuscript, I would appreciate your sending it to us by return mail, since it would save us the time and cost of transcribing the tapes. As I mentioned to you previously, we will transcribe all the comments made in the discussion and send them to you so that if you wish, you can incorporate all or some of them into your formal presentation.

May I again, on behalf of the Foundation, express our appreciation to you for taking time, from what we know is a busy schedule, to prepare your excellent presentation and to come to Geneva for the Symposium.

I look forward to hearing from you and seeing you again soon.

With warm regards!

Sincerely yours,

Jerry Hochbaum
Assoc. Executive Director
