Dear Rabbi Lamm:

Many thanks for sending me the issue of Tradition containing your article on the New Morality. The thoughtfulness of the editors and/or the authors in supplying a translation of the Hebrew was most helpful. I once attempted to learn Greek to my despair and the degradation of my instructors. I felt that Latin (of happy memory) with its four part verbs was sufficiently intricate for my capabilities.

At the moment I am receiving mailed threats from Life that my subscription is about to expire if I do not act on this practically last morning. I am going to wait awhile and see if they really mean it. If they do I will accept the fact and subscribe to Tradition instead.

With best wishes and thanks again, I remain

Sincerely,

Peter M. Chebar
