Dear Rabbi Lamm,

I was interested to read your views on the possibility of life on other planets as quoted in this Sunday's N.Y. Times.

My husband is an artist, & he feels, as you do, that we must take the possibility of other kinds very seriously. As our history on earth has been a gradual integration of men into Mankind, so the destiny of Mankind may well be integration into the universe, & the formation of a new, larger composite being by communication of cultures. Cultural integration between the planets can occur.

Those who venerate the great world religions will surely be most interested in the new descriptions on the forces of creation which may be forthcoming as man's awareness increases.

As an artist my husband, Earl Hubbard, seeks to portray man as Mankind in the Universe - the bright light of humanity in the darkness of space. I am sending you a copy of his first book of portraits & text which I edited for his museum exhibition at the Gallery of Modern Art last November. I am at work on a new one now.
Sincerely, Barbara Hubbard
