Dear Sir:

I take the liberty of sending enclosed for your perusal a reprint of an article I recently published and which you might find of interest. It concerns a comparative study of the principle of self-incrimination in Constitutional Law and Talmudic Law, and an explanation of the latter from the point of view of psychonalysis. As you will notice, I have quoted from or referred to your works a number of times.

May I be favored with a reply containing some of your comments and reactions? Thank you most kindly.

Sincerely,

S.

Rabbi Norman Lamm
