My dear Rabbi Lamm,

I just read in the New York Times about your complaint. I fully agree with you

To put it still far greater a blasphemy to make a Sefer Thora into a cake as I see it time and again in the Lakewood bakeries. Or a Scholar — filled with sugar candy? (Bartans)
The first time I did not trust my eyes when I saw it. I think it is one of the most disgraceful things to do.
Have you ever seen a New Testament baker into a cake — or a Crispy?

I am a liberal Jewess — I do not go to service regularly. I do not observe the Sabbath — but I have the highest esteem for everything that is sacred to people.

Re-reading the article I think when you say: "This is not the only example of such exploitation and misuse" —

You mean these things?

Is there no way to stop it?

Sincerely, Yours,

Gertie Rescuer
