

In "THE LESSONS OF HISTORY," Will and Ariel Durant, two somewhat older students of morality, past and present, declare:

"Out of every 100 new ideas 99 or more will probably be inferior to the traditional responses which they propose to replace.

"No man, however brilliant or well informed, can come in one lifetime to such fullness or understanding as to safely judge and dismiss the customs or institutions of his society, for these are the wisdom of generations after centuries of experiment in the laboratory of history.

"A youth boiling with hormones will wonder why he should not give full freedom to his sexual desires; and if he is unchecked by custom, morals or laws, he may ruin his life before he matures sufficiently to understand that sex is a river of fire that must be banked and cooled by a hundred restraints if it is not to consume in chaos both the individual and the group."

Dr. Ralph R. Greenson, a clinical professor of psychiatry at UCLA's school of medicine, speaks of that same river of fire:

"The 'cool' set is accustomed to quick and easy gratifications. Instant warmth and instant sex makes for puny love, cool sex and a turning to pot and LSD. The emphasis on security as the goal of life makes for peace of mindlessness and emotional uninvolvedness.

"Love is risk-taking. It implies daring to be vulnerable and hurt. The search for security is the enemy of loving."
