Dear Walter:

Enclosed please find the remains of my stewardship of "Tradition". It gives me a sad feeling, upon sending them to you, to know that henceforth I shall no longer experience the pangs of panic, hysteria, and utter disgust at the quality of material received. I regretfully bequeath these redoubtable experiences to you.

I met with Larry this morning and, as a result I am mailing to you the following consisting of: a number of rejected articles (for use in absolute emergency only) and, I suggest, after first contacting the author for permission; some correspondence with a number of people you may want to contact for articles; correspondence relating to reviews and articles promised but never received and other sundry material).

Also, please include in your next issue some note of "books received", i.e. books which are inappropriate even for a "briefly noted". In them, please include Baruch Spinoza's Principals of Cartesian Phil." newly translated by Harry E. Wedeck with a preface by Dagobert D. Runes Philosophical Library New York 1961.

Cordially yours,

RABBI NORMAN LAMM
