Influential Women Artists

Woman Waiting for the Moon to Rise, Uemura Shōen, 1944, Adachi Museum of Art
Enter a journey of discovery as we explore influential artists. We are going to discover art from across the world and get up close to some famous art pieces. Finally, we will explore the lives and art of four prominent artists.

This lesson plan is designed to support you as you explore Google Arts & Culture stories related to the lesson topic. This lesson is suitable for anyone but is recommended for students aged 11-14 years.

You can complete the lesson on your own working at home, with a group of friends, or in your classroom. They are designed so that you can work through them at a pace that suits you.

If you get stuck, you can talk to a teacher or parent.

Throughout the lesson you will find tasks to complete and questions to answer, so when you reach the end you will have used a range of skills to create something on your own that demonstrates your knowledge and understanding of the subject.

All you need to get started is any device with internet access.

Are you ready to learn more about women who have demonstrated their artistic talent and have achieved recognition for their achievements across the world?

Things you’ll need to complete this lesson.

- Tablet, laptop, or computer with access to the internet.
- Paper or a notebook and pen to make notes as you go.
- Drawing materials such as coloring pens and pencils, paper etc.
- Scissors, glue, scrap paper, and general stationary items.
- Art materials, specifically paints and brushes.
- A printer would be beneficial but not necessary – why not draw instead?
In this lesson, we are going to explore art in different ways. We will travel around the world to see works of art from different countries. Then we will take some famous art pieces and explore them individually. Finally, we will explore the lives and careers of four notable women in the art world.

What can you expect to learn?

In this lesson, we are going to explore art in different ways. We will travel around the world to see works of art from different countries. Then we will take some famous art pieces and explore them individually. Finally, we will explore the lives and careers of four notable women in the art world.

Activities to complete

1. Test your drawing skills by drawing objects upside down.
2. Make your own camera and project an image to the back of it.
3. Plan and sketch your own piece of art. Can you recreate the style of a famous Brazilian artist?
4. Test your knowledge of art terms by unscrambling words used for various art forms in this lesson.

Outcomes you will achieve

• See the wide range of art forms where women have shown their talents.
• Understand creativity has no limits and does not discriminate on gender identification, race, religion, or disability.
• Realise that art is universal and anyone from anywhere can create works of art.
• Learn that art can be used for social projects and support people wherever they live.

What is this lesson about?

This lesson will highlight the work from a variety of women artists and see the significant contributions they have made to their fields. You will explore art from different countries and time periods, examine historic paintings and the lives and work of five leading women artists.

This lesson will take around 120 minutes.
Elements of the Lesson

Art can be found in many forms, from paintings and sculptures to film and photography. Art is about using different creative mediums to express ideas, imagination and feelings.

In this lesson, you will be exploring the works and lives of female artists past and present. In some cases, their art is finally gaining the recognition it deserves in significant exhibitions in galleries and museums around the world.

We will start by looking at how women have used multiple art forms and the impact these works have had. You will explore various cultures and countries, looking at different aspects of the art and how it has been created.

You will then get the chance to examine three classic paintings, looking at their different styles and imagery.

Finally, we will explore the works and lives of five artists who have made their mark in their fields of art. The lesson will provide you with a better understanding of the worlds of classical and modern art.

Consider making notes on the stories you read them. This will help you with the end of lesson quizzes.
This chapter will take around 50 minutes.

Art Around the World

In this chapter, we will look at different art forms and learn about female artists from around the world.

Test your Geography

Where you see an image of a map, click on the link to open Google Maps and explore the geography of the area we are visiting. For each artist click on the link to see where the artist is located. Does their location influence their art practice? Does your location affect your style of art?
Let’s visit Lebanon, in the Middle East. Here female artists only started to find recognition in the first half of the 20th century. Historically it had been a struggle for women artists to share their voices in Lebanon. The expected roles of women in society were limiting and there was little support or space to explore artistic voice and creativity. In the 20th century, a Lebanese women’s artist community was established and developed by individuals who had financial independence. This gave women freedom and space to pursue their art. Use the explore button to find out about some interesting artists and their works.

Consider the following questions:
Why did women artists thrive in Lebanon from the 1930s onwards?
What is your favourite piece of Lebanese art? What do you like about it?

Julia Margaret Cameron was a British photographer, born in India in 1815. She became interested in photography in the 1850s and 1860s, when it was still in its very early stages as an art form. She started taking photographs after she was given a sliding-box camera as a present.

At this time, Cameron was living on the Isle of Wight and converted parts of her property to create a studio to take her photographs and a dark room to develop them. The majority of her work was created there.

Cameron specialized in portrait photographs, often close-ups with a soft focus. This is something she was criticized for at the time as her photographs were regarded as out of focus. However, this was a style she continued to explore, and it proved to be popular.

Cameron photographed many famous figures of the time, including Charles Darwin and Alfred Lord Tennyson. Her work has been shown in galleries across the world and she was the first artist in residence at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

In reviewing the photographs in the exhibit, can you describe the style of photography Cameron developed? Consider the subjects, type of photograph (e.g. portraits), setup, model’s poses, the style. How influential is this in photography today?
Activity 1

Build your own pinhole camera!

Why not try building your own camera?

All you need to do is make sure you have the items listed and then follow the steps below.

Things You Will Need:
- Cylindrical container – see picture
- Pencil, or push/drawing pin
- Wax, grease-proof or parchment paper to cover one end
- Tape
- Blanket or large towel

Instructions

1. Find a cylindrical container. Something like the one shown in the picture on the right. Any tube where one end is closed will be fine.

2. Push the tip of a pencil, or pin, through the bottom of the container, in the center, to make a pinhole.

3. Take some wax, grease-proof or parchment paper to fit over the top end of the container. Make sure it closes the end fully (where the lid should be.) If the lid is clear you can use that.

4. To ensure you are in darkness, drape a blanket or large towel over your head. Make sure the pinhole end of the camera is sticking out from under the blanket (see the photo on the left.)

5. Look through the paper or clear plastic lid at different objects. You will notice the objects are displayed backwards, and upside down.

You can find a detailed step-by-step guide for an alternative pinhole camera from the BBC here.
Tomie Ohtake was a celebrated Brazilian abstract artist whose work spanned over 60 years. She was born in Japan in 1913 and traveled to Brazil in the 1930s. Due to World War Two and the conflict taking place in Japan, she stayed in Brazil and settled there with her family.

Ohtake started painting in 1951 and was known for her explorations of lines and shapes in her work. This was something she continued to develop when she started working with sculpture. She was regularly commissioned to create pieces and had many public sculptures displayed in Brazil and Japan.

Ohtake has an art institute in São Paulo named after her, which opened in 2001.

Look at this painting by Tomie Ohtake. Make notes on the following points:

- How has she used lines and shapes in this painting? What visual effect has she conveyed?
- How would you consider that she has used color and structure in this picture?
- Now click the Explore button to find out more about Ohtake.
Activity 2

Create Your Own Artwork

Tomie Ohtake produced a wide variety of art in different forms. Review her artwork on Public Works, Cosmic Shapes, and Geometric Shapes.

Explore the different forms below and then choose a medium to sketch. Either sketch your own design or sketch your own version of one of Ohtake’s works. An example of a sketch is shown on the right. Write down in 100-200 words the reasoning behind your choice. Why did you choose that medium? What materials would you choose to use for the final work?

Chicana Murals
A Unique Mexican-American Artform

Chicana murals are a Mexican-American medium of street art, found in the US, with many located in California. They highlight the experience of women and often are used to convey political and social resistance.

Related to the Chicano movement started in the 1960s, Chicana murals incorporate feminist ideals and challenge the often-macho imagery of Chicano murals.

The ‘Mur Murs’ exhibit takes us on an exploration of variety of murals created and curated by Chicana artists and helps us to understand the impact these murals can have on the communities they exist in.

Click on the Explore button to see the ‘Mur Murs’ exhibit. Make notes on the following points. You may also need to carry out some additional research.

What are the main topics that Chicana artists helped highlight to the public in Los Angeles? What do we learn about the experience of women from the murals we see?
Zahra Al Mahdi
Kuwaiti Artist, Writer and Filmmaker

Zahra Al-Mahdi is an artist who works with different visual mediums, such as paintings, street murals, film, and graphic novels. She was born in Kuwait and studied English Literature there.

Her art often involves looking at layering textures and different ways at dissecting human and animal anatomy.

Al-Mahdi has been involved with different street art projects in Kuwait which look at the female experience. She has published a graphic novel called ‘We, the Borrowed’ and created a web series, ‘Bird Watch’, which explores different topics using layering of film, sketch and sound.

Click on the Explore button to see some of Al Mahdi’s work. Make notes about your observations.

Also, try watching 5 minutes of a lecture given by Al Mahdi and Yousif Yaseen, to get some insight to her work. It is in Arabic, with English subtitles.

In your opinion which of the artforms Al Mahdi uses is the most useful in getting a message across to an audience? Why?
Can you work it out?

Can you unscramble these words to identify the ten art terms mentioned in this lesson?

1. ABC start = Abstract
2. micsarec
3. vacans
4. caned
5. allergy
6. antin pig
7. Iron troppo
8. CPU luster
9. bear quo
10. aland pecs

Extra Challenge
Try making your own anagrams for the following terms:
- marble, mural, palette, action,
- allegory, portraitist, focus,
- lens, photography.

You will find the answers to this activity on page 35.
Focus on Canvas

In this chapter we will focus on paintings by three artists. We will examine each painting in detail and look at the meaning behind the imagery.

This chapter will take around 30 minutes.
A close study of three classical paintings

‘Design’ by Angelica Kauffman (1741-1807)
Angelica Kauffman was a Swiss painter who was known for her history paintings. She was versatile and was skilled in painting portraits, landscapes and decorative paintings. Her work is part of the Neoclassical genre.

‘The Love Potion’ by Evelyn De Morgan (1855-1919)
Evelyn DeMorgan was a British painter whose paintings explored femininity, love and spirituality. Her rich and colourful paintings featured themes and devices made popular by Pre-Raphaelite painters.

‘Marie-Antoinette’ by Elisabeth Vigée Le Brun (1755-1842)
Elisabeth Vigée Le Brun was a well-known French painter in the 18th century. Her work is most noted for her portraits of women and children, including famous figures such as Marie Antoinette.
Angelica Kauffman was born in Switzerland in 1741. She painted from a young age and her talent was recognised early on. Also, a gifted singer, she was pushed to choose between art and opera.

She studied art in Italy and was able to develop her skills and style there, becoming a recognized painter and popular portraitist. She identified primarily as a history painter and her art falls within the Neoclassical genre.

Kauffman moved to London around 1765 and became an established part of the British art scene. She is credited as a co-founder of the Royal Academy, London and exhibited there for many years. She retired to Rome in the 1780s and continued to work for several years. She died in 1807 and was given a lavish funeral which celebrated her art.

Kauffman’s varied career and artistic success was rare for a woman during the time and her work lives on in galleries around the world.

Follow the link below to explore Kauffman’s painting, ‘Design’.
Evelyn De Morgan was born in London in 1855. She was privately educated at home with her brothers, which allowed her to study more widely than other girls during this time. She was passionate about art early on and expressed an interest in following this as a career.

Despite her mother’s disapproval, De Morgan studied at Slade School of Art, where she was able to study life drawing alongside her male classmates, which was unheard of in other institutions at the time.

She enjoyed success with her paintings and exhibited in galleries in London. She married the ceramicist William De Morgan and later used profits from her art to support his pottery work.

De Morgan, was a feminist and pacifist. She painted many images protesting against the First World War and the Boer War, using demons in her art to represent war. She sold the paintings to raise funds for the Red Cross. Along with her mother, she also supported the suffrage movement.

De Morgan defied the expectations of her gender at the time and her work is a testament to that. The message of her work is one of feminism, the rejection of war, and the value of spirituality over material wealth.

Click the ‘Explore’ button to take an audio tour of De Morgan’s painting, ‘The Love Potion’.
Elisabeth Louise Vigée Le Brun was an 18th century French portraitist. She was particularly known for her paintings of women, including famous figures like Marie Antoinette who she became friends with.

Le Brun’s father was also a portraitist and she learned from him, as well as Gabriel Briard. She became a popular portraitist. Even as a teenager, she was commissioned to paint portraits of wealthy clients.

She became a member of Académie de Saint Luc in 1774 and later became a member of most prestigious art guild in France, the Académie Royale de Peinture et de Sculpture. She was one of only four female members. Her application had previously been denied, but Marie Antoinette helped secure her membership.

She left France during the revolution in 1789, due to her association with the queen. She traveled in exile to Italy, Austria, Russia, and Germany over the course of the following 12 years and only returned to France once she was safe to do so.

Her work is displayed in major galleries worldwide, including the National Gallery in London and Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Activity 4

Art Detectives!

A painting has been handed into your local gallery and they need your help to identify the artist. All that is known is that the picture has been painted by either Angelica Kauffman, Evelyn De Morgan, or Elisabeth Vigée Le Brun.

Time to step up and become an Art Detective!
You’ll find all the answers you need by reviewing the work of the three artists you have studied.

Some prompts to aid you in your mission…

What is the subject of the work?
Can you detect who the artist is from the colors used in this image?
In which time period do you think this was painted?
You can search the artwork of these artists by following this link.

Which of the three artists painted this? What is the subject? Look at the eyes... what do they tell you about the artist?
Five Inspirational Women Artists

In this chapter we will focus on four art practitioners from different genres.

This chapter will take around 40 minutes.

Uemura Shōen was a Japanese artist, who was known for her Bijin-ga paintings, a form which uses traditional imagery and techniques to depict women.

At the time Shōen was working, the creative world was male-dominated, and she was one of small number of women who were successful in becoming recognised for their art.

Shōen began drawing at a young age and entered formal art training aged 12. She started to exhibit her work a few years later and gained recognition.

Her style of painting has been noted for her clarity, simplicity and use of colour. Shōen often produced works for national exhibitions, with her work focused on classical Japanese literature and showed women in a variety of different scenes.

Shōen won many awards in her career, including the Order of Culture Award. She was the first female to receive this award and only the second woman to be employed as the Imperial Household’s official artist.
Find out more about one of Japan’s renowned artists. She is famous for her bjin-ga paintings which feature women in private moments at home.
Artemisia Gentileschi was an Italian painter born in 1593. Unlike many female artists who have challenged the roles of women, she was not born into a wealthy family. She was taught to paint by her father, who was also a portrait painter and a friend and contemporary of the artist Caravaggio. Her father encouraged her talent and helped her to train as an artist.

At the time, it was rare for women to be able to pursue artistic training and work, particularly for those who did not have financial independence. However, Gentileschi succeeded despite her circumstances. She was the first woman to become a member of the Accademia di Arte del Disegno in Florence and worked with people internationally.

Her work sits in the Baroque genre and she specialized in depicting stories about women and heroines in allegories, myths and Biblical stories.

Watch the video using the link below, which is presented by the songwriter FKA twigs. It examines the painting ‘Self Portrait of St Catherine of Alexandria’. Here you will learn more about Artemesia and what made her special.
Activity 5

Draw upside down!

The picture on page 26 is a self-portrait, to view it in detail click on this link. To create a self-portrait, artists use a mirror and then they need to flip what they see onto the canvas. They do this to ensure their left and right side, and perspective, are correct.

Learning how to transpose (flip) an image is a useful artistic skill to have. A simple way to start is to take an item and draw it upside down like a perfect mirror image of it.

Can you draw these Cola bottles upside down?

You can zoom into the picture by clicking on this link, or you can sketch an upside-down version of the image to the right.

Extra Challenge

Now find an object, or objects in your house and see if you can draw them upside down too. To challenge yourself further, try a self-portrait.
Arménian sisters, Mariam and Eranhui Aslamazyan, were born in the early 20th century and were known for their work in the fields of painting, graphic art and ceramics.

The Aslamazyan sisters were both encouraged by their parents and were often surrounded by academics and intellectuals at home. Despite losing their financial security and ending up in poverty, they went on to study at the Alexandropol Painting School and further studied in Yerevan, Moscow and Leningrad.

Mariam specialised in painting and Eranhui was known particularly for her ceramic work.

The sisters were well-travelled, and their work reflects the influence of their travels and experiences. Their extensive careers spanned over 50 years and they produced work that is now housed permanently in galleries worldwide.

In 1987 the sisters set up their own gallery in Gyumri, the second largest city in Armenia. The gallery has a floor dedicated to the work of each sister.
Review some of the artwork produced by the sisters by clicking the 'Explore' button below.
Georgia O’Keeffe was a prominent American painter, specializing in impressionist imagery. She often challenged how we see things through her art.

She is best known for her paintings of magnified flowers, animal skulls, and desert landscapes.

Born in Wisconsin at the end of the 19th century, O’Keeffe studied in Chicago and New York, where she learned traditional techniques. However, she was interested in creating art that communicated a message about how she felt about the subject.

O’Keeffe often used abstract imagery blended with realism. This allowed her to establish emotions and atmosphere in her paintings.

Many of O’Keeffe’s works used the New Mexico desert for its scenes and inspiration and she lived there for many years. Her work proved popular and has remained so. One of her paintings sold for nearly $45 million dollars in 2014, making a record for the most money paid for a piece of work completed by a female artist.

End of Lesson Quiz

See if you can recall what you have learned from this lesson. How many questions can you answer without going back through the pages.

1. Which country did the Aslamazyan sisters come from?
2. Would the famous artist, Artemisia Gentileschi be able to take a commission to paint someone in 1850?
3. How old was Julia Margaret Cameron when she started her career in photography?
4. Name one of the multiple artforms that the Brazilian artist Tomie Ohtake is famous for?
5. Which American city would you expect to find the Chicana artists’ murals?
6. Fill in the blanks: Georgia O’Keefe is known in art circles as the ‘Mother of _______ _______’.
7. In Evelyn De Morgan’s “The Love Potion” painting what does the presence of the black cat in the picture hint at?
8. Why was portraitist Vigée Le Brun not keen to deliver her portrait of Marie Antoinette? (A clue: think of French history at this time).

Now you've completed this lesson you may want to continue to find out more about influential women artists. This is a museum collection and a good starting point to find out more, and this is an exhibition about Artemisia at the National Gallery, London. Finally, you can explore a section on artworks in this theme, you will need to scroll down to around half-way down the page.
