Figure 1 displays the effect of the number of trials on the probability of a correct response for two groups: Control (top row) and Training (bottom row). The x-axis represents the Number of trials (1 to 6), and the y-axis represents the Probability of a correct response (0.0 to 1.0). The plots show individual data points (open circles) and a fitted curve (solid line). The Training group consistently shows higher probabilities of correct responses compared to the Control group across all trial counts.

Figure 1. The structure of the proposed system. The system is designed to be a self-contained unit that can be used in a variety of environments. It is composed of a main unit and a remote unit. The main unit is responsible for the overall control and data processing, while the remote unit is used for data collection and transmission. The system is designed to be scalable and flexible, allowing for the addition of more units as needed.

Figure 1 consists of five maps, labeled (a) through (e), showing the spatial distribution of the 10 most abundant species in the 1990s. Each map displays a geographical area with a grid of cells, where the color of each cell represents the abundance of a specific species. The species are: (a) P. tenuis, (b) P. tenuis, (c) P. tenuis, (d) P. tenuis, and (e) P. tenuis. A scale bar at the bottom of each map indicates a distance of 100 km.

Figure 1 illustrates the experimental setup. A participant is seated at a table, observing a screen. The screen displays a 3D model of a hand holding a tool, with a coordinate system (x, y, z) and a scale bar. Thus, it's vital that you consider every player (on both teams) with any statistics in any game this season (get season player statistics from both SIDs). Then list below the last name of players who have season figures but did NOT play in this game. All players with previous statistics will be charged with a game unless you indicate otherwise under DID NOT PLAY IN THIS GAME. A game played is one play—whether or not the player touches the ball. (For guidelines on a game played, refer to BI-7 in 1977 Official Football Statisticians' Manual.) If a player with first-time statistics has missed games, fill in below—after getting from his SID how many games missed.
