

Get Schools Cooking

“A Systems Approach to Change”

A program of Chef Ann Foundation, Get Schools Cooking is an intensive 3-year assessment and strategic planning program that provides school districts with comprehensive support to transition from a heat-and-serve to a scratch-cook operational model. Get Schools Cooking is open to school districts across the country thanks to generous support from the program’s partners, including Whole Foods Market Foundation and the Rachael Ray Foundation.

Program Targeted Outcomes

1. Increase knowledge surrounding scratch cooking
2. Assist with implementing operational changes to support scratch cooking
3. Support districts working towards a scratch-cook meal program centered around fresh, whole foods

Eligibility

To apply, school districts must meet the following criteria:

- Be firmly committed to working towards a scratch-cook meal program centered around fresh, whole foods
- Demonstrate support for improvement from district leadership
- Participate in the National School Lunch Program and run a self-operated food service program

“I can’t explain how informative, beneficial, and invigorating this whole experience has been. It’s really made me a better director and leader, and I can see my staff are happy with the changes I’ve made so far.”

- Amber Watson,
Marysville Joint Unified School District

Previous Participants Have:

- Introduced new scratch-cook recipes
