

BURRI public elements®

An aerial photograph of a large, diverse crowd of people gathered on a vast, green lawn. The people are scattered across the entire frame, some sitting on blankets, others standing in small groups, and many walking. The perspective is from directly above, looking down on the scene. The text is overlaid on the upper portion of the image.

«Public spaces are more important than buildings.
They make a city alive.»

Amanda Burden
Former Head of New York City Planning

Public spaces

Lively public outdoor spaces form the basis of liveable cities. They provide security and create identification, which in turn leads to a high degree of participation in public life. This participation is a fundamental precondition for a city to fulfil its central task: the social integration of its inhabitants. Public spaces are more important than buildings. They alone can make a city come alive.

When can we bring your public outdoor spaces to life?

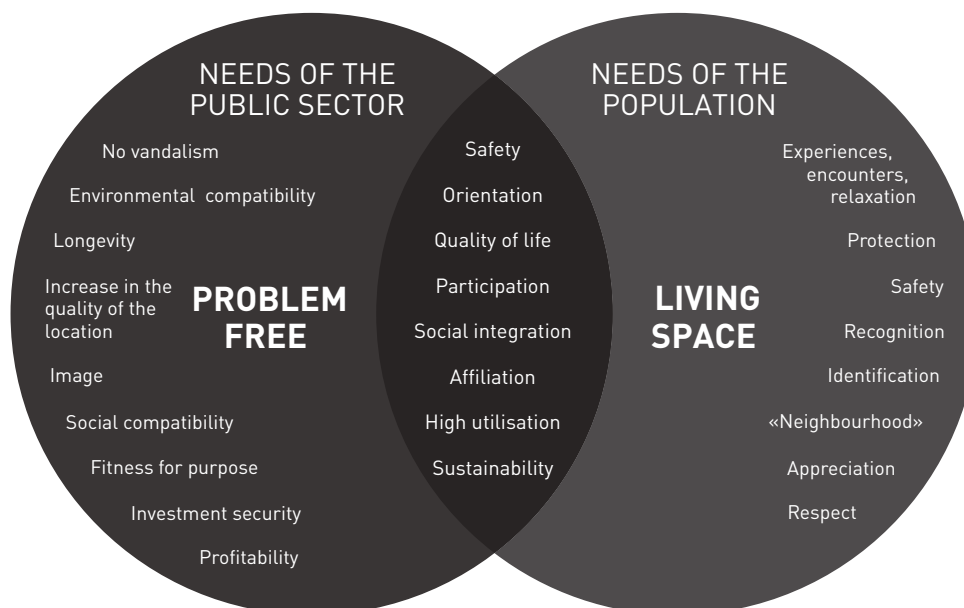

© BURRI: Public space cycle

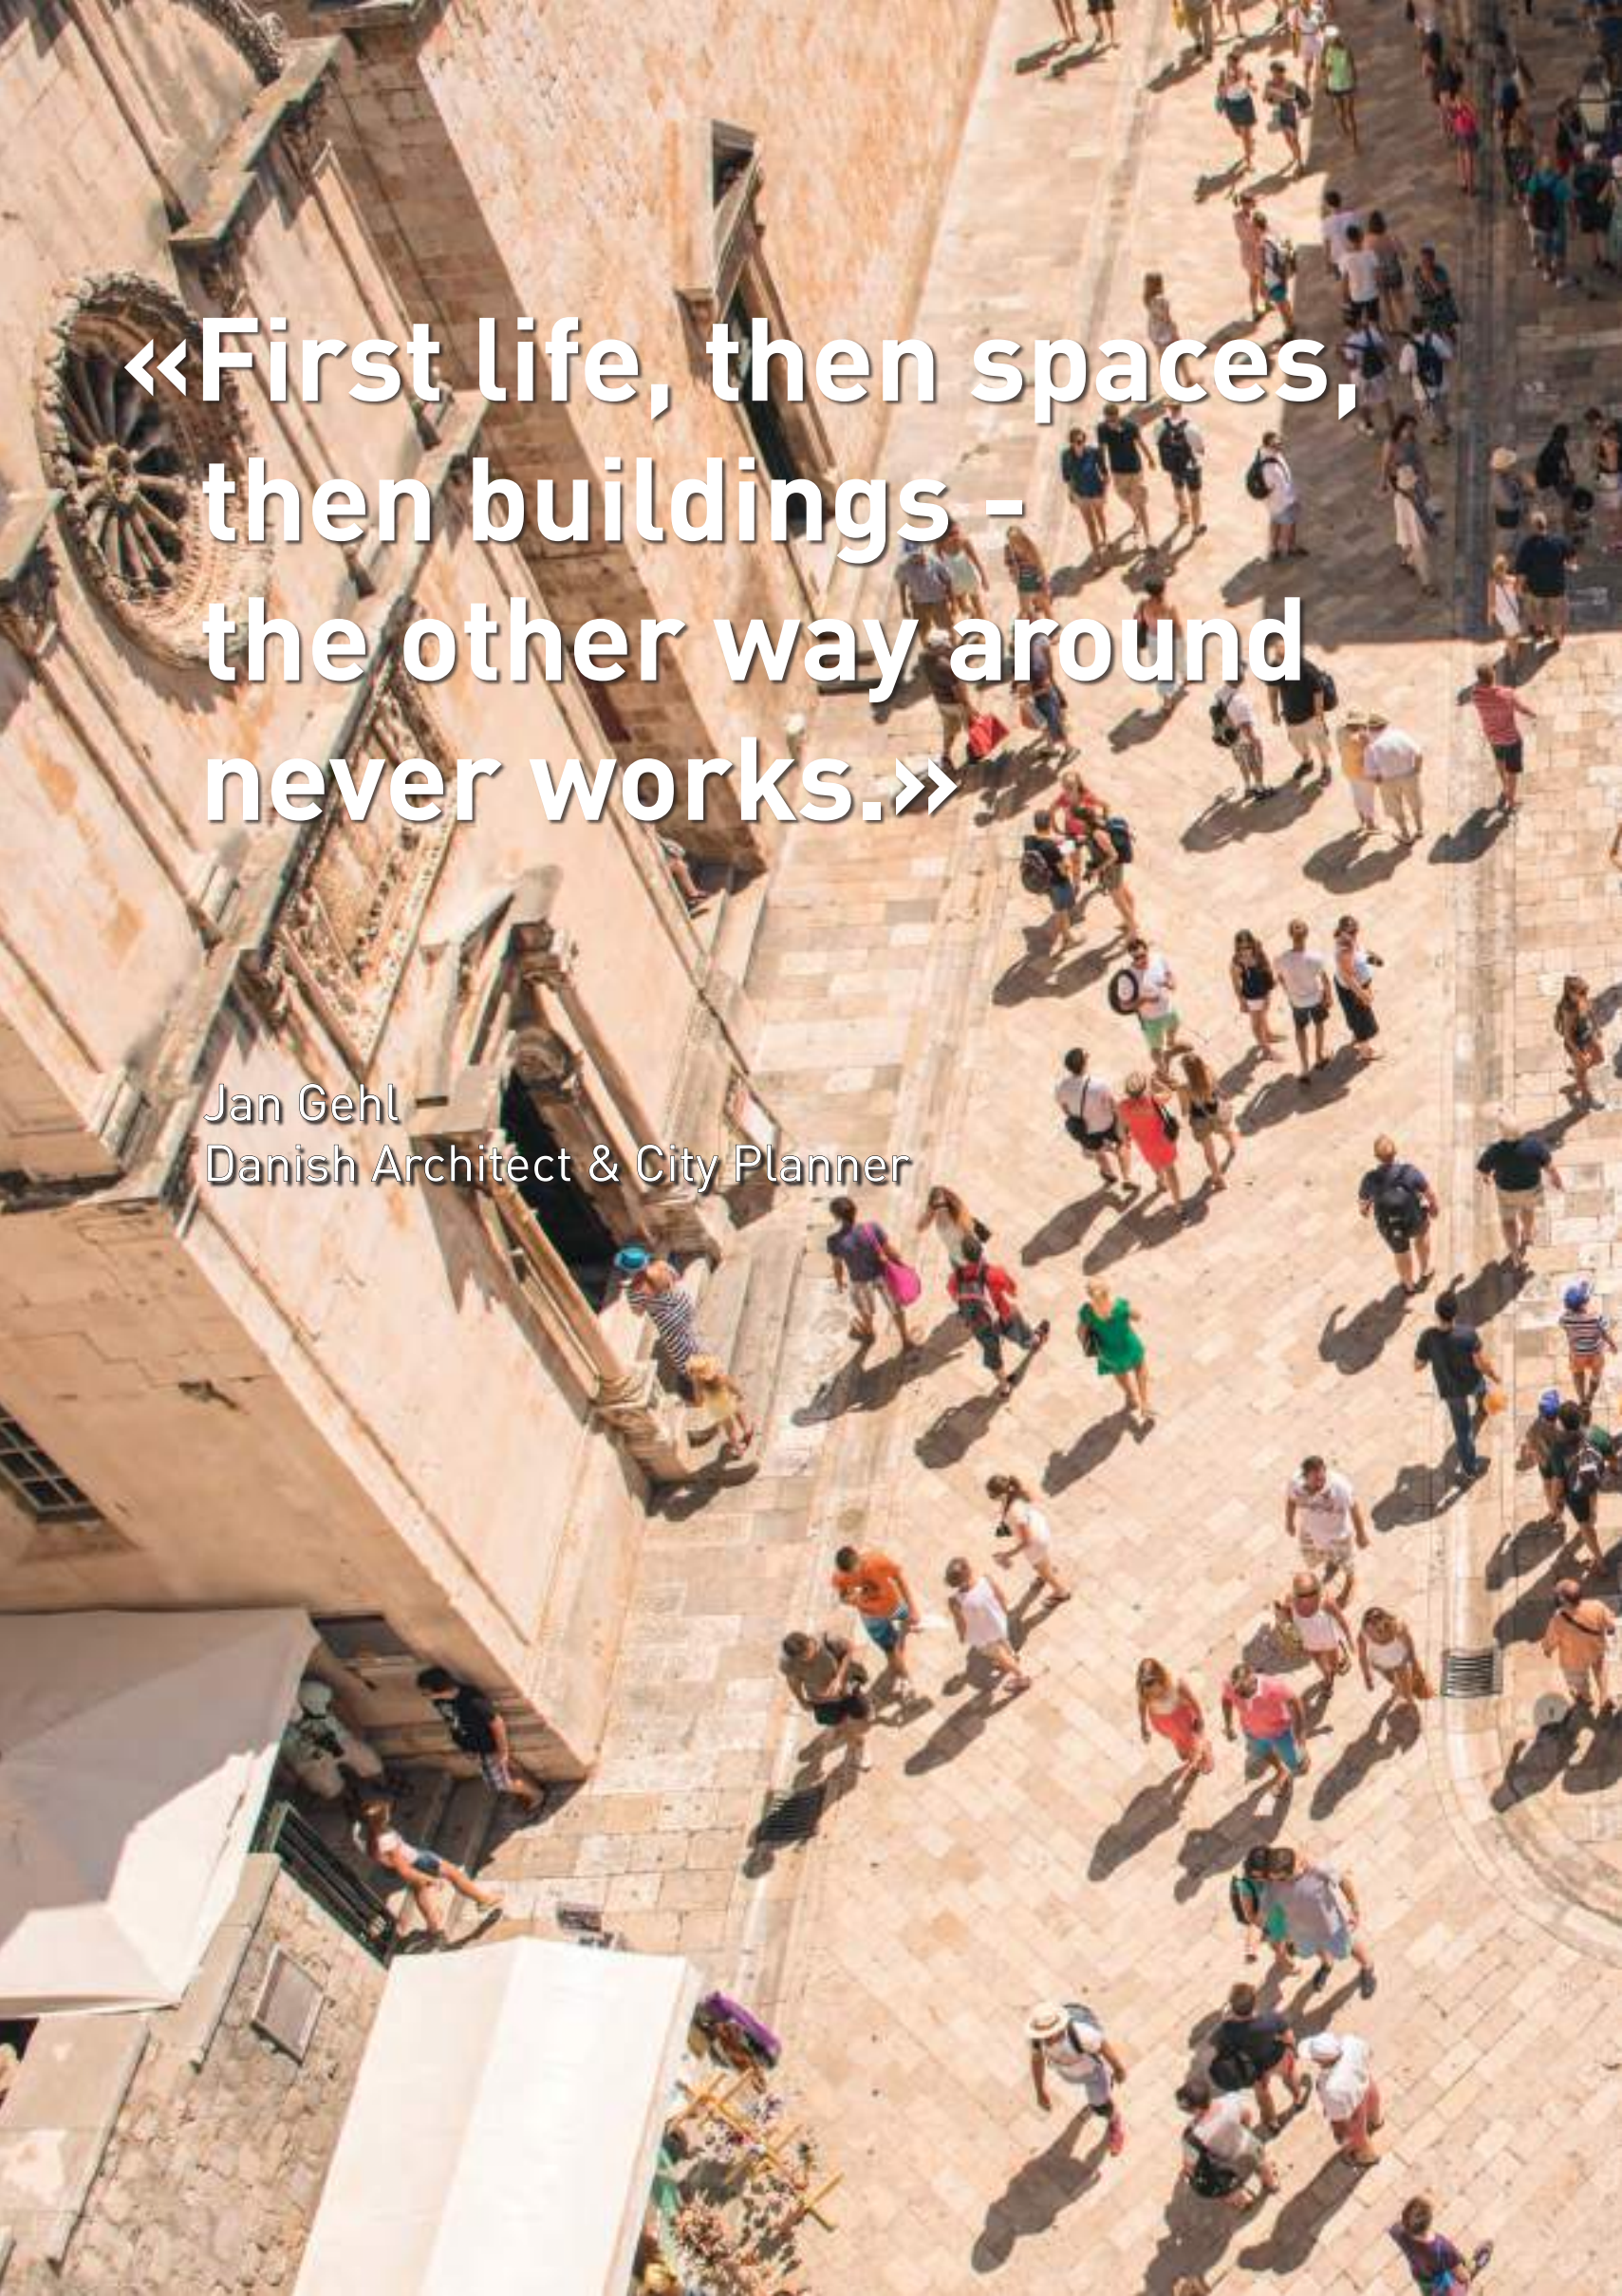

Public buildings

Thanks to our many years of experience, we know what is needed for visitors to easily orientate themselves in a public building and to safely find the quickest route to their destination. We know how to plan and construct advertising spaces so that they complement instead of compete with the building architecture, while still generating high returns. We know how to utilise tailor-made light and signage solutions to create a unique «building personality».

When can we help make the character of your public building come alive?

An aerial photograph of a busy pedestrian plaza. On the left, a historic building with a large, ornate stone wheel sculpture is visible. The plaza is paved with light-colored stone tiles and is filled with many people walking. Long shadows are cast across the plaza, indicating it is either early morning or late afternoon. The text is overlaid on the upper left portion of the image.

«First life, then spaces,
then buildings -
the other way around
never works.»

Jan Gehl
Danish Architect & City Planner

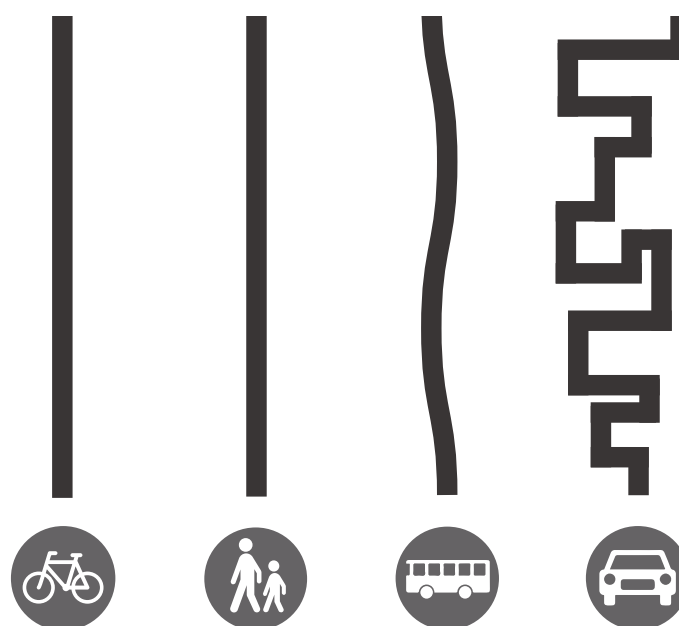

Public & individual transport

Mobility is the beating pulse of a city. Liveable cities create the space and enable the solutions for a successful coexistence of the most diverse mobility requirements. New concepts such as «human powered mobility» and new motorised modes of transport (kickboards, hoverboards) are clear signs that public transport zones face constant change, and must adapt.

When can we support you in updating your traffic zones for the mobility of the future?

Traffic planning for liveable cities

Source: Copenhagen Design Co. / www.copenhagenize.eu

Lighting & electrotechnology

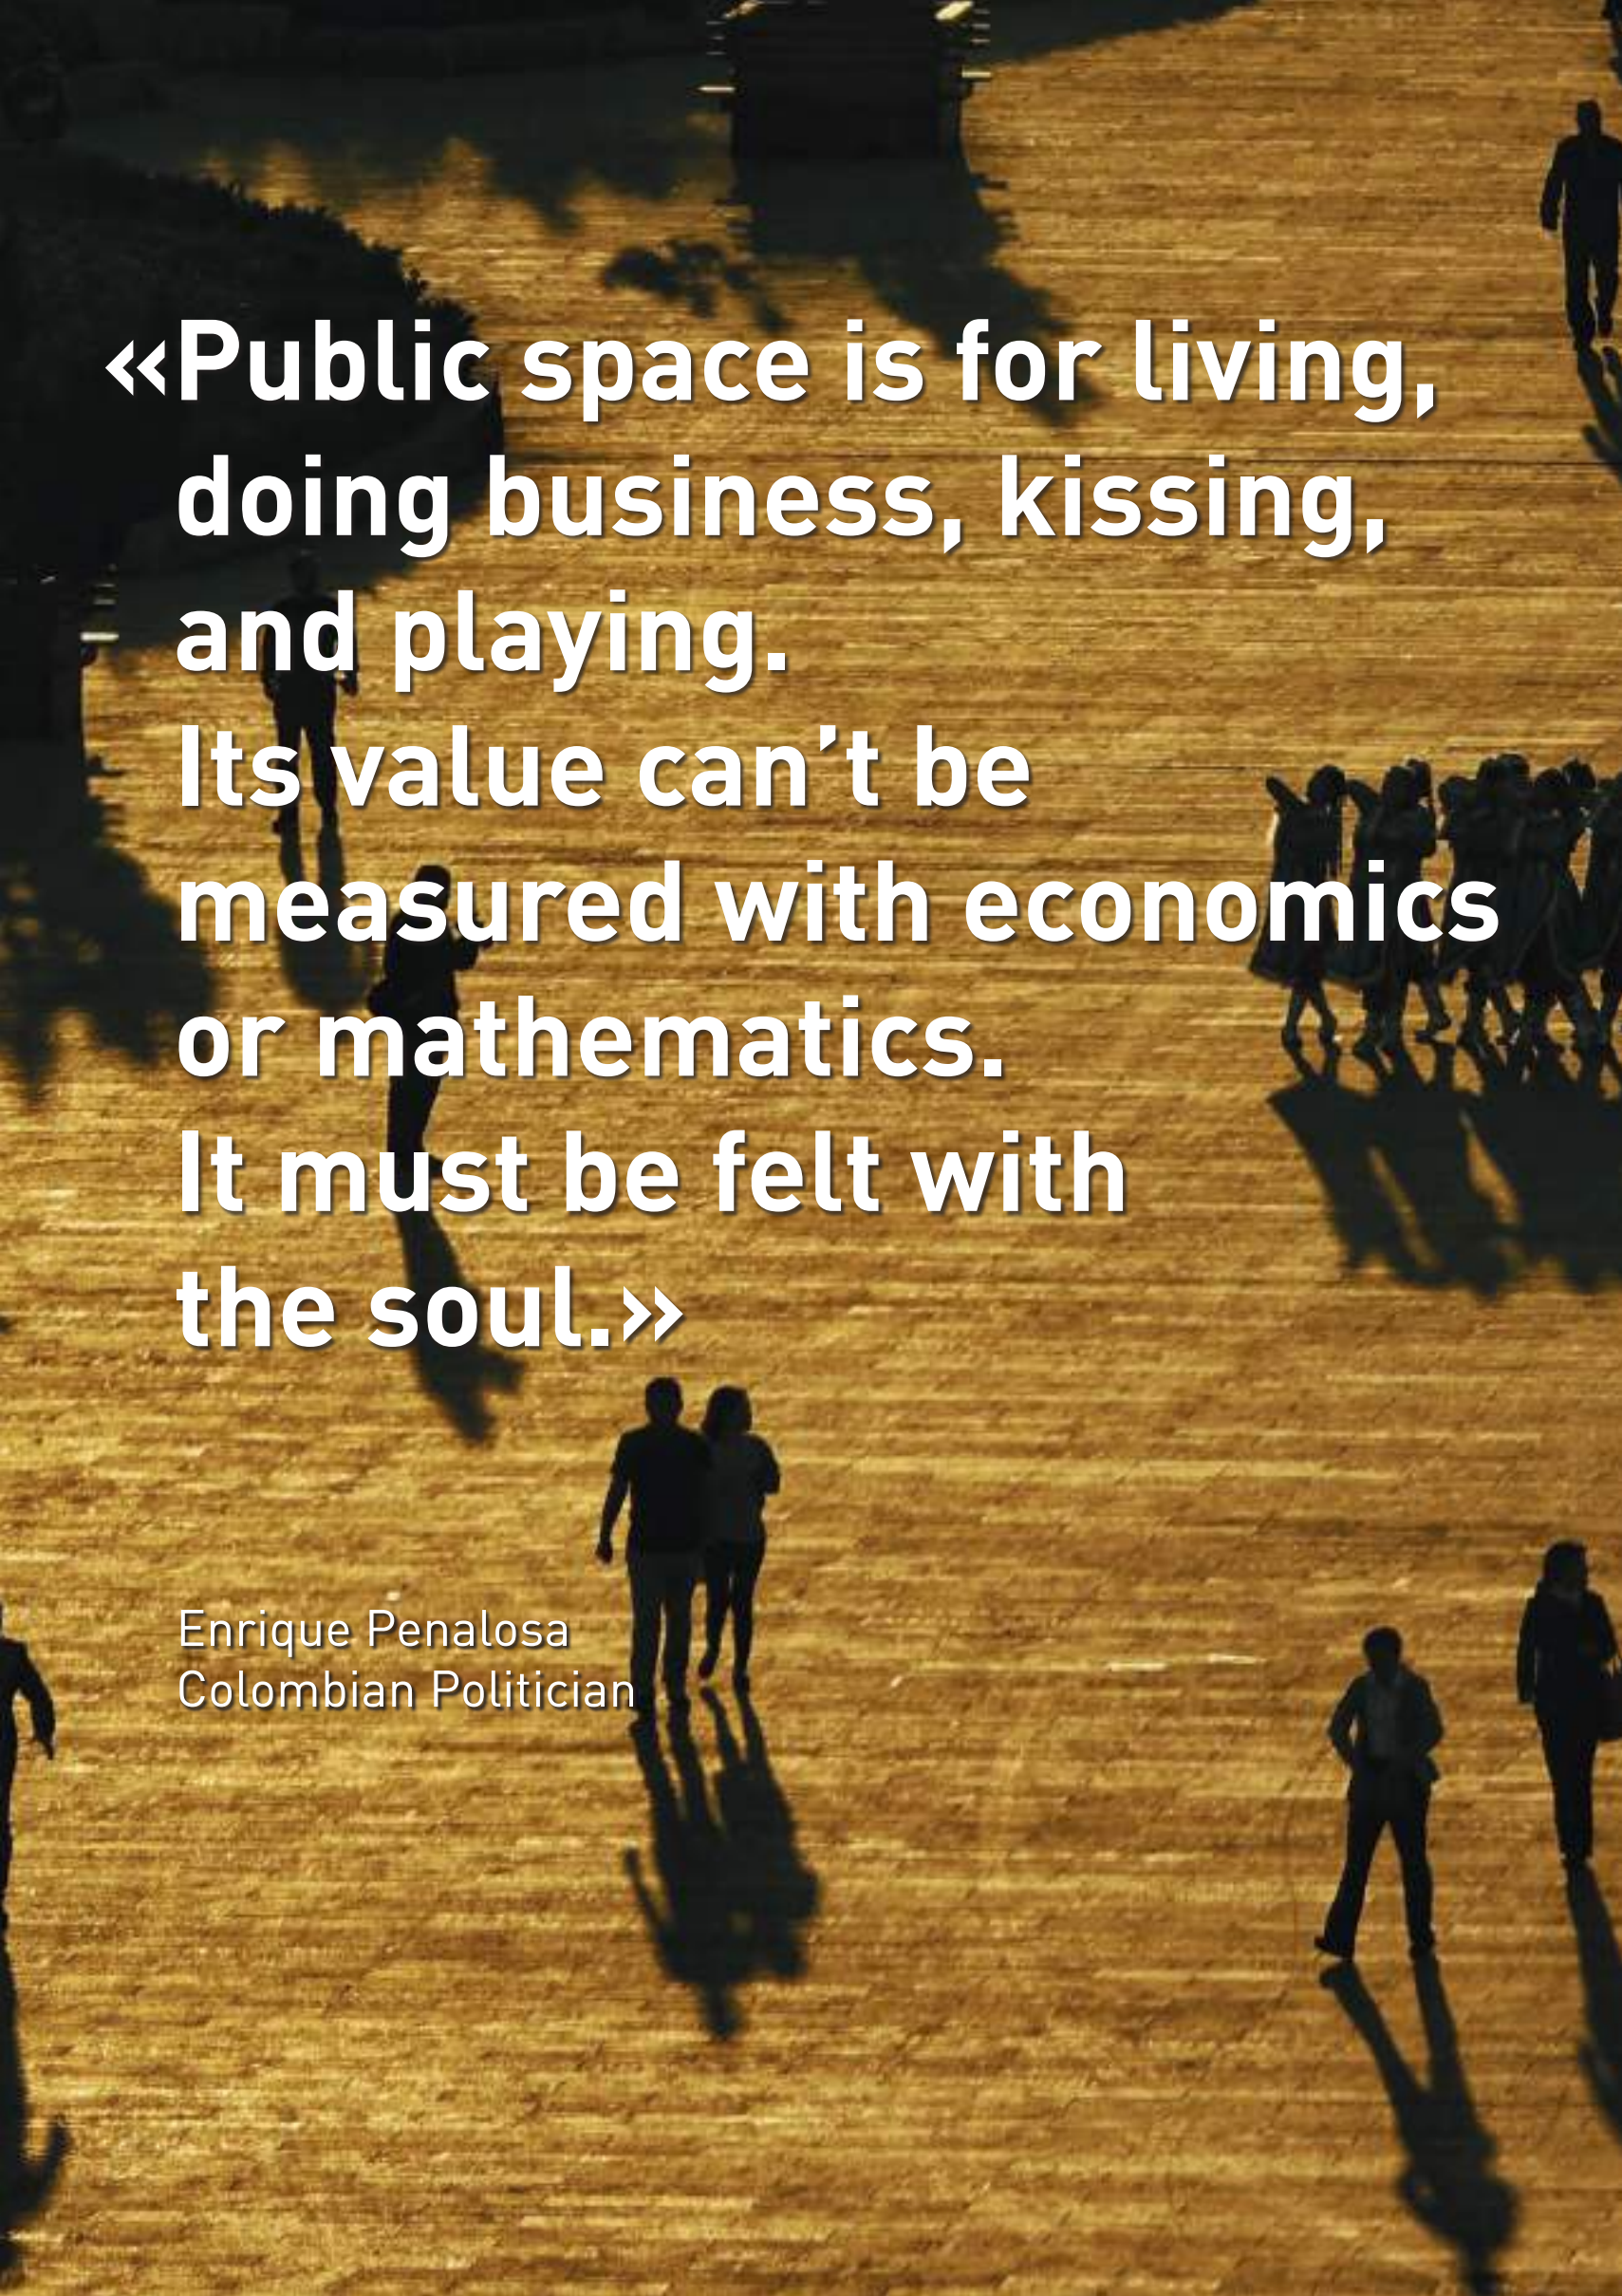

In this age of «Internet of Things», roads can detect drivers and pedestrians and can adapt their illumination according to demand and daylight. Knocked-over bollards can automatically contact the maintenance team, and stopping points know when trains are late and can cheer waiting passengers with electronic vouchers for local restaurants and kiosks.

When can we help you to realise the digital future in your public space?

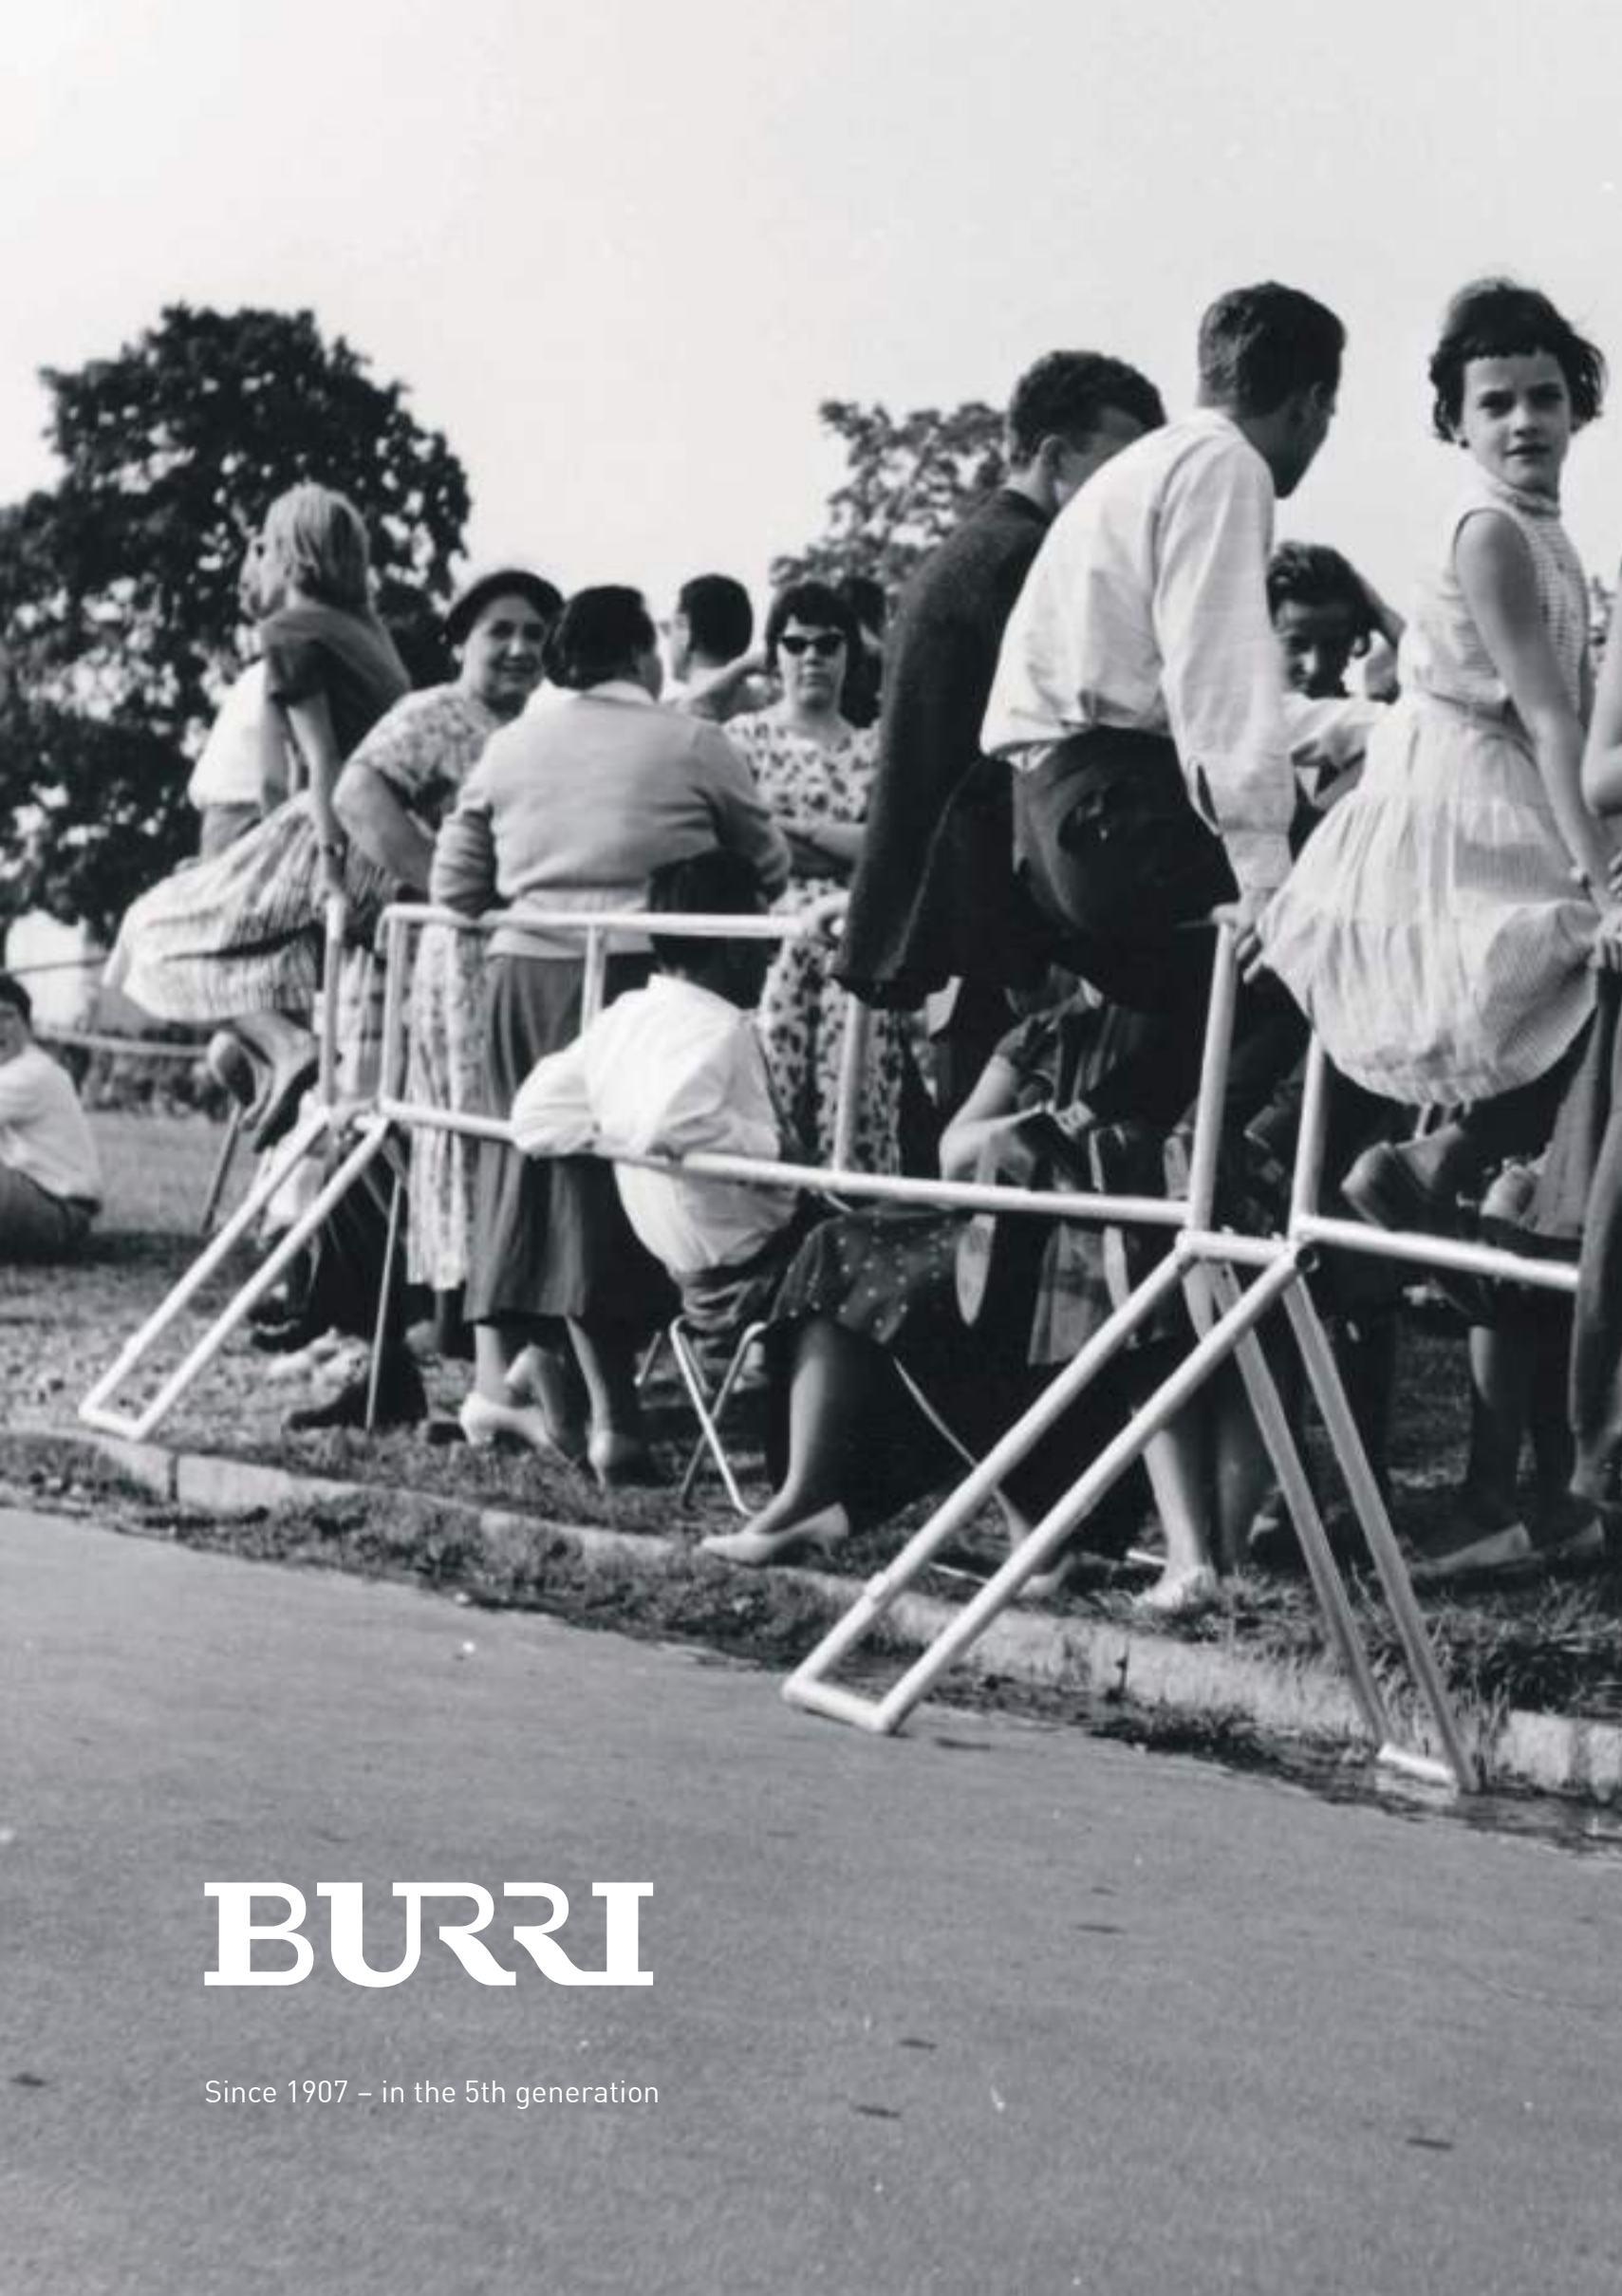

© BURRI: Public elements & internet of things

An aerial photograph of a public space, likely a park or plaza, with a golden-brown ground. Several people are walking, their long shadows cast across the ground, suggesting late afternoon or early morning light. The shadows are dark and elongated, creating a rhythmic pattern on the textured surface. The overall mood is contemplative and serene.

«Public space is for living,
doing business, kissing,
and playing.
Its value can't be measured with economics
or mathematics.
It must be felt with the soul.»

Enrique Penalosa
Colombian Politician

BURRI

Since 1907 – in the 5th generation

Public spaces

Public buildings

Public & individual transport

Lighting & electrotechnology

© BURRI: Product pledge

BURRI public elements AG
Sägereistrasse 28
CH-8152 Glattbrugg
Schweiz

+41 44 874 44 22
office-ch@burri.world

www.burri.world
www.burri.shop

