Gorrissen Federspiel

On 5th September 2022 at the Auditorium of Gorrissen Federspiel in Copenhagen Marine Money hosted the first Marine Money Copenhagen Members Event.

Around 100 high level executives from ship owning and operating companies, finance providers, shipping technology innovators and leading thinkers in decarbonization met to discuss and network.

Topics discussed at the event included:

- Erratic geopolitics and tough economic indicators to come
- The mission of shipping towards decarbonization
- The energy transition from oil to LPG / LNG and other alternatives
- Financing future shipping
- Purpose or Profit - how shipping must see itself going forward, combining the effort to decarbonise and remain a profitable business.

AGENDA

That Denmark is a pioneer in the decarbonization mission was left in no doubt from the commitment and deep thought and effort that was demonstrated during the discussions.

Both leading shipping companies and finance providers are committed to aggressive targets in their efforts to reduce carbon emissions, and the local bodies centered in Copenhagen which focus on research for decarbonisation have huge membership and global reach.

What is certain is that this is a global effort and collaboration and cooperation is essential, and that Denmark is playing a leading role in the effort.

Looking forward already to our next event in Copenhagen in 2023.

And money for green investments will be sorely needed. ... Conversely, it is positive that more companies have set a zero-emissions target and that the number is increasing," said Bo Cerup-Simonsen, CEO of MMMCZCS, at Marine Money. "The majority of companies think decarbonization is important, but they are just not very clear or specific about their own targets," Cerup-Simonsen said

Our thanks to our sponsors, speakers and attendees.

We look forward to be back in Copenhagen next year in September 2023.
