In the biggest election year in history, shipping remains tied to national policies and geopolitical events shaping the global economy. With political uncertainty and ambiguity abound, ship owners and operators must build resilience, develop flexibility and remain agile to manoeuvre rising volatility.

On the bright side, firm shipping markets and healthy vessel supply/demand fundamentals have delivered strong cashflows allowing owners to deleverage and rebuild cash reserves.

Although shipping finance is now widely available and from multiple sources and geographies, impending environmental regulations and technological innovations are adding increasing layers of complexity.

How can shipowners, operators, financiers and investors interpret the data to leverage these strong shipping markets.

Join us at our 23rd Annual Marine Money Week Asia conference on Tuesday 24th & Wednesday 25th September 2024 at the St. Regis, Singapore, which will be full of private meetings, relationship building activities and high level industry discussions by some of the world's leading shipowners, investors, ship financiers and dealmakers in the world's fastest growing trading region.
