FELLOWSHIP IN INTENSIVE CARE MEDICINE

Specialized medical professionals are needed to manage intensive care units, which are equipped to handle advanced technology. Patients requiring intensive care support most often have a critical illness that gets severe with time. By upskilling yourself in intensive care medicine, you understand the advanced equipment used in intensive care units. You will be able to provide effective patient care by becoming skilled in intensive care medicine. Being trained in intensive care medicine enables effective patient care delivery.

The Fellowship in Intensive Care Medicine program is designed for medical practitioners who wish to work in the technology and resource-intensive area of medical care. The course helps the trainee acquire accurate assessment of critically ill patients. Along with improving the skills in intensive care, the program helps you gain experience in attending patients in the emergency room.

In addition to the detailed curriculum delivered by expert faculty from reputed institutes, you also get a 2-week contact program at a reputed hospital where you will get to work with leading intensivists and gain hands-on experience in handling patients in a real life scenario.
