

Boulder Dog Bite Lawyer FAQ

Answers to common questions about dog bite incidents in Boulder.

Based on Boulder Dog Bite Lawyer by McCormick and Murphy

Q: What should I do immediately after a dog bite?

A: Seek medical attention right away, even if the bite appears minor. Deep infections can occur beneath the surface. Report the bite to Boulder Animal Control to create an official record and have the dog evaluated for rabies.

Q: Why is it important to report a dog bite?

A: Reporting the bite to Boulder Animal Control creates an official record of the incident. It also ensures the dog is evaluated for rabies, which is crucial for public safety.

Q: What information should I get from the dog owner?

A: Collect the dog owner's name, address, and homeowner's insurance details. This information is vital for any potential claims or legal proceedings.

Q: Should I take pictures after a dog bite?

A: Yes, take photos of your injuries as they develop and of the location where the bite occurred. Visual documentation is important evidence.

Q: What kind of injuries can dog bites cause?

A: Dog bites can cause deep infections that may not be visible on the surface. Prompt medical attention is necessary to treat these potential complications.

Q: Who should I talk to before speaking with an insurance company?

A: You should call a dog bite lawyer before speaking with any insurance company. They can protect your rights and ensure you don't say anything that could harm your case.

Q: Can a dog bite lawyer help me if the bite seems minor?

A: Yes, even minor-seeming bites can lead to serious infections. A lawyer can help ensure you receive proper medical care and compensation for all damages.

Q: What is the role of Boulder Animal Control?

A: Boulder Animal Control should be notified of dog bites. They create an official record and ensure the dog is evaluated for rabies.

Q: Why is homeowner's insurance relevant in a dog bite case?

A: The dog owner's homeowner's insurance details are important because they may cover damages and medical expenses resulting from the dog bite.

Q: What does it mean to 'document everything' after a dog bite?

A: Documenting everything means keeping records of medical visits, expenses, photos of injuries and the scene, and any communication with the dog owner or their insurance.
