Answers to common questions about dog bite incidents in Westminster.

Based on Westminster Dog Bite Lawyer by McCormick and Murphy

Q: What should I do immediately after a dog bite?

A: Seek medical attention right away, even if the wound seems minor, as dog bites carry a high risk of infection. After getting care, identify the dog and its owner, document your injuries with photos, and collect witness information if available.

Q: Should I report the dog bite?

A: Yes, you should report the bite to Westminster Animal Control. This is an important step in the process after seeking medical attention.

Q: What are the risks of a dog bite?

A: Dog bites carry a high risk of infection and other complications. It is crucial to seek medical attention promptly.

Q: How can I document my dog bite injuries?

A: Take photos of your injuries to document the extent of the damage. This can be important evidence for your case.

Q: What if someone witnessed the dog attack?

A: If anyone saw the attack, collect their information. Witness testimony can be valuable in understanding the circumstances of the bite.

Q: Should I talk to the dog owner's insurance company?

A: No, you should not speak to the dog owner's insurance company before consulting with a lawyer. They may try to minimize your claim.

Q: When should I contact a lawyer after a dog bite?

A: It is advisable to contact a lawyer for guidance on protecting your rights as soon as possible after a dog bite incident.

Q: What kind of legal help can a dog bite lawyer provide?

A: A dog bite lawyer can guide you on protecting your rights and navigating the claims process after an incident.

Q: What information do I need to gather after a dog bite?

A: Gather information about the dog and its owner, document your injuries with photos, and collect witness information if anyone saw the attack.

Q: Is it important to know the dog's owner?
