Based on Auto Accident Lawyer Boulder by McCormick and Murphy

Q: What should I do immediately after a car accident in Boulder?

A: Prioritize your health by seeking medical attention, even if you feel fine, as adrenaline can mask pain and some injuries aren't immediately apparent. Document everything by taking photos of vehicles, the scene, and any injuries. Gather witness and other driver information, including insurance details. Obtain a police report number if law enforcement is present.

Q: Should I see a doctor even if I don't feel injured?

A: Yes, it's crucial to seek medical attention immediately after an accident. Adrenaline can mask pain, and some injuries may not show symptoms right away. Early medical evaluation is important for your health and for documenting any potential injuries.

Q: What kind of photos should I take at the accident scene?

A: Take photos of all involved vehicles, the intersection or road where the accident occurred, general road conditions, and any visible injuries you or others may have sustained. Preserving this evidence is vital.

Q: Whose information should I collect at the scene?

A: You should get the names and contact information of any witnesses. You also need to obtain the other driver's name and their insurance information. This information is essential for your claim.

Q: Is it important to get a police report?

A: Yes, if law enforcement responds to the accident, make sure to get the police report number. This report can serve as an important piece of evidence in your case.

Q: Should I talk to the other driver's insurance company?

A: Do not give a recorded statement to any insurance company before speaking with an attorney. Insurance adjusters may try to get you to say something that could hurt your claim.

Q: What is the most important thing to do after an accident?

A: Your first priority should be your health and preserving evidence. Focus on getting medical care and documenting the scene and details of the crash, rather than immediately engaging with insurance adjusters.

Q: Why shouldn't I give a recorded statement to an insurance company?

A: Insurance companies aim to protect their own interests, which often means minimizing payouts. A recorded statement can be used against you, even if you believe you are being truthful, potentially harming your ability to receive fair compensation.

Q: What kind of evidence should I preserve after a crash?

A: Preserve evidence by taking clear photos of all vehicles involved, the accident location, road conditions, and any visible injuries. Also, gather witness contact details and the other driver's insurance information. Obtaining a police report number is also important.

Q: Who should I contact if I'm injured in a Boulder car accident?

A: If you've been injured in a car accident in Boulder, it's advisable to speak with an attorney. They can guide you on how to handle insurance adjusters and protect your rights.
